Discrimination toward students

by Name Withheld

If you are a student at UWSP, you may have experienced discrimination by the community. If you have been lucky as so not to encounter any type of discrimination as yet, you are probably one of the few students who have not. But believe it or not, there is discrimination going on.

Discrimination takes place in many areas and in various forms. However, the most obvious one is in house renting. In this country, it is even established in a certain hierarchy. If you are a white student, for instance, your chances of finding a one-bedroom apartment are greater than for others. These are the cases, the bond of jobs discrimination toward students.

Economic option: 'The good farm'

by Rick Tracy

During the past few years, America's small family farms have had to face the most difficult economic challenges in decades. Declining crop prices, huge cuts in federal aid, and an economic drought have forced thousands of farmers to go bankrupt or sell the family farm.

This summer's drought forced many of Wisconsin's farmers to abandon farming, and in many cases, leave the land they love. These people can no longer feel the bond of man to the earth, to Wisconsin, in the tangible, nurturing way they knew. The financial struggle for independence has led people to work odd jobs in addition to farming all day, to cut and sell the woodlots on their land, and to subordinate their dreams and 'sell out'.

The stresses associated with poverty in any area often contribute to increased alcohol and drug use. Legal means are sometimes turned to for supplemenary income and in a case of many of Wisconsin's farmers and rural residents this includes the cultivation of marijuana.

It is estimated by law enforcement officials that marijuana is Wisconsin's number one cash crop, exceeding corn. This is despite tough legislation the new sheriff's office law just passed which provides for stiff penalties for possession even a small amount of marijuana. Large raids this summer which yielded tons of marijuana in Wisconsin were the result of intense efforts on the part of federal, state, and local agents and the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources.

The lure to grow still exists for many Wisconsin growers. The user can supply himself with marijuana and possibly supply friends and make a tax-free profit as well. The grower can see to it that his crop is of high quality and that it is supplied to a certain supplier and won't be a threat to the community.

Just one large plant could supply the grower with a pound or more of marijuana so a small amount of marijuana is not necessarily for profitability. The large operation and care required each year in Wisconsin are the exception to the rule and small scale growers produce the bulk of the yearly crop.

The small farmer has an economic option, albeit illegal, to bankruptcy or poverty. The cultivation of a small crop in the old world, nurturing tradition of the 'good farm' could cause the outflow of millions of dollars from the huge group of consumers demanding marijuana to divert. The current could change from an inward race of farm to farm to countries and organized crime, to a steady trickle back into the local system of hard-working individuals.

Economic option: 'The good farm'
Re: Jeff See and the Grunt's Eye View

Dear Editor,

It seems to me we need a "Females Unite" organization as this campus. I thought sexism went out with the sixties - about the time most of you were born, and I am appalled to find it at UWSP in 1968. Jeff See and Smith Hall (one wing) are allegedly an "Ugly Stick" to judge the residential taste in women. [Even if the idea is only a joke, the humor itself is ugly.]

How about it, gals? Don't you think a boycott of Smith Hall (one wing) is in order? At the very least, it would encourage a certain change in attitudes towards women that these boys seem to have. If any of you visit Smith Hall (one wing) after reading Jeff's article (in the October 13 issue of The Pointer), then I would suggest a class in self-defense and self-esteem for you.

Dearest Pointer,

Dr. Fitch in the "Grunt's Eye View" column, please I'm nauseous.

Thankyou,

The issues

To The Pointer,

I am assuming you, the reader, are intelligent people. I am also taking the liberty in assuming that you are all aware of the upcoming state and national elections. November 3rd is fast approaching. After hearing for the 478th time that a person doesn't know the candidates or the issues I decided to do a little research. The information that follows on PAGE ONE is what the candidates support and in some cases, voting and legislation activities. The 4th floor of the LRC is the main source for the facts to follow. The National Student Research Drive and candidates Liberal for those who have yet to hold the. Thanks must be extended to the staff member of the LRC who led me through the maze of Bills, Acts and indices.

I would hope that the candidates for student are well known as their positions.

I withheld the party affiliation because I feel it is the issues that count not the party.

For all of you that read the issues on Page 3, cannot use the excuse, "I do not know the candidates or their issues. The LRC is situated to go and find out who supported bills on your own petition. If the staff of the 4th floor is more than willing to help you. For those too busy or possibly lazy, you have a base to vote on. Of course, you could always vote for Cuba or Moscow.

Lifestyles of the poor and addicted Part I Detoxification by CHIP

Are you sick and tired of being sick and tired? Many of us all of us have aberrations of self which leave a feeling of inferiority. We fail to recognize and to know the definition of normality, rather abnormality, to know you have a problem. Admitting your failure is easy, whereas being something about it isn't. Pete S. knew he had a problem with cocaine and alcohol and he CHOSE to correct it. He checked himself into a 38-day drug and alcohol rehabilitation program.

What was the goal of the program?

"The goal of the program was to recuperate myself into normal, everyday living. I strongly believe that what I was going through was abnormal. The long term intention of this is to become drug free. Safety is being able to live with yourself, having peace of mind, being able to sleep at night without feelings of guilt. The program itself is not what I want to admit to you or anyone else other than a sponsor." A sponsor is a person, usually a priest, pastor or counselor involved in the fifth step of recovery from addiction, which is: "Admit to God (generally a Power greater than ourselves), to ourselves and to another human being the exact nature of our wrongs." According to this step is an integral part when achieving serenity.

The program is run by counselors who are recovered addicts themselves, as they know how to relate. They establish a list of rules. Such as no smoking during the treatment, no smoking, radios, televisions or books during with drugs in the room, and no visitors calling after certain hours. All carry with them one punishment - expulsion from the program. The rules are necessary and focuss all energies on learning and recovery.

I asked Pete to describe an average day at the hospital. "We'll get up by seven, and have breakfast at eight. At nine we were assigned jobs. They're going to be a job, such as washing dishes, making coffee, cleaning" because a lot of addicts never finished anything on their own. It gives you a sense of accomplishment when you're done.

After breakfast and chores we had group therapy, one of the most important aspect of it (the program). I felt real sorry at first because these people were opening up to me. I finally did open up and told them my story. You had to have your sponsors or whatever write you a letter describing how the act of setting while using. I never looked to another Center Coordinator. The show will continue through the month of November. Award winners will be announced on the day of the opening.

Jarre Shields, Miles curator of the exhibit at the Wisconsin State Art Center in Madison, would give a formal talk about the show the day of, Sunday, November 15. in the gallery. It is open noon to 8 p.m. You don't have to live in Madison. Miles refers to the jurying process as "an art of itself, but a terribly presumptuous act. In spite of all efforts to be objective and consistent, the art world demands the juror to be subjective. The work selected for this exhibition, therefore, is a result of a sort of generalized academic search...that satisfies some of the questions we ask of art. Also, of the art that I am being asked of it moved me in some way."

tured in this year's opening exhibition at the Curatin Gallery, located at 11th and 3rd Avenue, Madison, Wisconsin. She has been the director and curator of the Providence Art Center (art). Art Asso-

On the afternoon of the 15th, Miles will present a slide lecture on the work. Anyone interested in attending may call the gallery at 344-4979.

Retiring U.S. Senator William Proxmire endorsed Demo­cratic candidate Herb Kohl in the race to fill his seat in the U.S. Senate.

Proxmire and Kohl made the announcement at a series of press conferences in Milwaukee, Green Bay, Wausau and Eau Claire.

Proxmire said that Kohl's re­fusal to accept special interest money involved in action committees led him to endorse Kohl.

"One head of a political action committee recently was quoted as saying, "When I make a contribution to a candi­date for my PAC, it means I'm purchasing legis­lation,"" Proxmire said. "That means that when PACs contribute to candidates, they're get­ting what they want, not what's in the best interest of the coun­try. Of course, whatever PAC has the most money will have the most influence.

"Herb Kohl will be an inde­pendent Senator, as I have been, who will cast every vote based on merit and merit only," Proxmire said. "That's the kind of representative I want in Washington. I am happy to endorse him and I hope that voters will send him to Wash­ington." Kohl said his opponent, Susan Engeleit­t, will receive up to $1 million from special interest groups before the campaign is over.

Kohl said that he felt that Proxmire's was the most im­portant endorsement in the race.

While Proxmire has been a great Senator for Wisconsin and has become an institution in the U.S. Senate," Kohl said, "put­ting his name on the ballot will not be an easy task. When they announced their plans for the senator seat, I was surprised and a little concerned. He's been a great Senator and it is unfortunate that he will not be running for another term."

Protective Service Staff shows promise

By John Anderson

A group of students hired to help keep the UWSP campus in good condition are showing promise as an effective means of dealing with a personnel shortage in the protective service staff of UWSP.

Only some few months ago, a few weeks ago, the student patrol has been responsible for deterring a theft in a residence hall, spot­ting involved participants in the vandalism of cars in a campus parking lot and snapping prob­lems in the hall by securing nu­merous doors and windows that had been left unlocked.

"Just by their being visible and moving around the univer­sity in an official capacity de­terring," observed Don Burling, director of UWSP's Office of Protective Service.

The patrol was organized with four members, each of whom spends about 2.5 hours per week on the job. "I'd like to see us eventually have eight people, so we could increase our coverage on busy nights," Burling added.

"Traffic patrols wear jackets with special patches to identify themselves and are equipped only with flashlight, two-way radio, and keys for buildings. One or two of them can be found most nights on a 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. shift.

"Their job is essentially to observe and report so our offi­cers can follow up," Burling ex­plained.

Burling said the students are instructed not to get involved in physical confrontations but instead report to the regular em­ployee when problems are spotted.

Some of their assignments in­clude tasks the regular protec­tive service officers have lim­ited time to perform, such as door checks and foot patrol.

Debbie Meyer-Roehl, a 13-year veteran of the staff, is coordinating the patrol and training new members. She said she has studied in detail a well established student patrol system at the university in Milwaukee, Minneapolis, and other similar operations elsewhere.

In Wisconsin, UW-Oshkosh is in the process of developing a student patrol. UW-Parkside hires students to receive formal police training and then be offi­cial members of its force.

Though new to the job, the student staffs have impressed cre­dentials for their jobs, Meyer-Roehl reported. One is recently out of the U.S. Navy with experience in the Persian Gulf, another has experience as a security officer in New York, another has been on the auxiliary police force in Wausau, and the fourth has previously been a radio dispatcher for the UWSP protective service office.

AIDS: A Reality in Stevens Point

by Susan M. Hanson

News Contributor

The topic of AIDS is universally known and discussed in 1988. The continued increase in the Stevens Point area.

Wisconsin Department of Health has recorded that by September 1987, 19 AIDS cases were reported to the state. Of the 19, 13 have already died. These re­ported statistics are based on the division of Wisconsin into several regions, Stevens Point being located in the north.

I recently spoke with Jane Shaurett, an AIDS tester in Stevens Point and found that the testing process is not a one ap­pointment deal. Even if a person being tested for the disease must first make a testing date, followed by results and counseling dates.

No names are used throughout this procedure. Each patient is given a number over the phone and kept anonymous. Though Shaurett wouldn’t comment on the number, she did state that several U.S.S.P. students have been tested through the clinic.

I was curious to know how accurate the Wisconsin statistics were and found that it is almost impossible to be 100% accurate because numerous persons being tested for AIDS travel to different regions so that con­identiality would be guaranteed.

Other than sex and dirty need­les, blood transfusions are another way the disease can be acquired. The American Red Cross, when making their donor runs, sends every pint of blood to Madison where it is screened for both AIDS and hepatitis. If a donor blood tests positive in Madison it is then sent to Illi­nois where it is retested several times.

Carol Feldkamp, a worker for American Red Cross, stated that if final AIDS results occur, the donor receives a registered letter from the state saying so. AIDS is a disease that in 10 years is supposed to affect one person in every U.S. family. Just one estimation, only you can control AIDS in your life.

For more information on campus Dr. Zach at the Univer­sity Health Center is available by appointment. If you’re inter­ested in having an AIDS test, call 345-3350, all calls will re­main anonymous.

Presidental Campaign Issues

By Remu Razon

UAB “Issues and Ideas” team member

A very important night in coming on Wednesday, November 2. The state chairman of the Democratic and the Republican parties will be on the UWSP campus to speak on their party’s position on the various issues. Sw realms Allbretch is the state chair of the Democratic party and Senator Donald Stiff is the state chair of the Repub­lican party.

The informational discussion will start at 7:00 p.m. in the Wisconsin Room of the University Center. This event is being sponsored by UAB “Issues and Ideas” and SGA.

The program will begin with each speaker making an open­ing statement for five minutes.

Then, the speakers will be asked to discuss their party’s position on the following issues: economy, defense and education, family issues (such as abortion and prayer in school), environment­al, and foreign affairs.

Each speaker will be given five minutes to discuss each of the topics listed above. Closing statements will be three min­utes each, after this, the floor will be opened to the audience for questions.

This is not a debate. Neither of these people is running for an office. This is a chance to find out where the two parties stand on the issues. The session is ideally timed for the undecided voter.

On November 8 we will be electing a person whose policies will affect everyone for the next four years. So, if you have even the slightest doubt in your mind, this session may help you to finally decide who to vote for.

Unfortunate destruction

by Brenda Boutin

Senior Editor

We have all heard of the unfortunate destruction of the nearly irrepealable statue that stands in front of the Stevens Point Fire Station.

It is a crying shame that two UWSP students had to vandalize the valued piece of art.

Because of the vandalism, much is being done in Stevens Point to aid in the restoration of the statue and mainly a fund raising drive started on October 18 and sponsored by WSPO and Bank One, both of Stevens Point.

W.S.P.O. and WSPO are in charge of this venture. Donations are being taken both at the radio station at 500 Main Street and at Bank One on Main Street.

As of Monday, October 23, $797 had been donated. A major portion of that came from Gold­den Sands Home Builders Asso­ciation which contributed $596 to the fund. Other major contrib­utors have been the Stevens Point Jaycees why gave $300 and Dave’s Body Shop who pledged $100 and have also challenged other body shops to match or beat the $100.

Much funding will be needed to help restore the statue which has been in Stevens Point since 1892. It is one of 3d in the world and one of ten in the United States.

There is a national search being done at the present time for anyone or any company that can restore the statue. A major lead at this time is in St. Louis.

The Great American Smokeout. Nov. 17.
Lecture Hall Dedicated to Former Physics Professor

The UWSP will name a lecture hall in its Science Building in tribute to the late Monica L. Baister who taught physics on campus 33 years. A brief dedicatory ceremony will be held in the facility at 4:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 28. A reception will follow in the adjacent lobby. The public is invited to attend.

UWSP is sponsoring the program in conjunction with a meeting on campus of the Wisconsin Section of the American Association of Physics Teachers. Baister had been affiliated with the section throughout its existence.

Chancellor Philip Marshall will make the official dedication and physics professor Allen Blucher and Jagdish Chander will give reminiscences of the life and career of Baister.

Baister, who died in March at age 78, taught at UWSP from 1947 to 1980, during which time she may have been the only woman serving as the chair of a physics department at a public college or university in this country. Nearly a half century ago, she was the only woman serving as principal of a senior high school in Wisconsin. Her post was in New Richmond.

Long an advocate for the development of nuclear energy, she had her initial involvement with it early in her career while doing research on and measurements of radiation and its application in medical research. Her work was at Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. As a graduate student and instructor at Madison, she was involved during World War II in the Manhattan Project that produced the atomic bomb.

Among the recognition she received were the Woman of Achievement Award given in 1967 by the Atomic Industrial Forum, a national organization; inclusion of her biography with 80 other notable state women in the book, "Wisconsin Women: A Gifted Heritage," published by the American Association of University Women; the Outstanding Alumna Award from the College of St. Teresa in Wisconsin, Minn., and the Distinguished Service Citation from the American Association of Physics Teachers.

Her unwavering support of nuclear energy put her in the center of major controversies. In 1979, Gov. Lee S. Dreyfus appointed her to the Wisconsin Public Commission, but before the State Senate voted on the question of confirmation, there was an accident at Three Mile Island nuclear power plant in Pennsylvania. Her comments in defense of the situation were used to force her to resign.

However, the publicity generated during the flap resulted in her being included in a national speakers' bureau and a regular appearance on energy matters for Wisconsin Public Radio.

The meeting during which the hall will be dedicated will attract about 100 high school, college and university teachers from across the state.

Peace Corps

by Kelly Berg

New Contributor

You are about to journey to a part of the world that is unique in every way. You will participate in alleviating some of the problems affecting the developing world—problems like poverty, hunger, disease and lack of technology. You are now in the Peace Corps.

Today, there are about 6,000 volunteers in over 60 countries, and over 127,000 return volunteers, according to Pati Segal and Katherine Gants, Minnesota area recruiters.

So what's it all about? What does it take to be in the Peace Corps? The first step is to apply. Applications should be sent in approximately nine months ahead of time. It generally takes three to six months to go through the system. This includes the three-hour-long interview with a recruiter.

Next step is placement. The Peace Corps needs volunteers in the areas of arts, biology, business, education, engineering, health sciences, teaching, business, health professionals, and skilled tradespeople. Applicants can indicate preferences as well as places they do not wish to serve. No one is assigned to a place to which they do not want to go. However, a volunteer must possess a skill needed by that country to serve there.

First, there is intensive training with 15 to 60 volunteers for 8 to 14 weeks. An in-depth study of the culture and traditions of the host country, as well as the native language, occurs during this time. Volunteers are then placed either alone or with a partner into a village. There is always someone within walking or biking distance from the village.

Upon completion of an assignment, the volunteer will receive up to $400 in readjustment assistance. During service, travel, health care, insurance, housing, monthly living expenses (food, clothing, etc.), and six weeks vacation are paid by the Peace Corps. Many student loans are also deferrable while in the Peace Corps.

"I gained more than I gave. It not only makes you more of a global person, it also helps build confidence in knowing you can do a lot of things," stated Segal.

Of her relationships with the volunteers and people of her village, Catherine Gants said, "There's a special bonding that you can't have here. It's an experience you don't gain in the U.S. or a classroom."

Both Gants and Segal stressed that although the Peace Corps is demanding, it is not as demanding as it has sometimes been portrayed. If you are not willing or able to complete the two years, there are some new Associate Volunteer Programs that you can be involved in, to allow these individuals a chance to serve.

You are about to journey to a part of the world that is unique in every way. You will participate in alleviating some of the problems affecting the developing world—problems like poverty, hunger, disease and lack of technology. You are now in the Peace Corps.

Today, there are about 6,000 volunteers in over 60 countries, and over 127,000 return volunteers, according to Pati Segal and Katherine Gants, Minnesota area recruiters.

So what's it all about? What does it take to be in the Peace Corps? The first step is to apply. Applications should be sent in approximately nine months ahead of time. It generally takes three to six months to go through the system. This includes the three-hour-long interview with a recruiter.

Next step is placement. The Peace Corps needs volunteers in the areas of arts, biology, business, education, engineering, health sciences, teaching, business, health professionals, and skilled tradespeople. Applicants can indicate preferences as well as places they do not wish to serve. No one is assigned to a place to which they do not want to go. However, a volunteer must possess a skill needed by that country to serve there.

First, there is intensive training with 15 to 60 volunteers for 8 to 14 weeks. An in-depth study of the culture and traditions of the host country, as well as the native language, occurs during this time. Volunteers are then placed either alone or with a partner into a village. There is always someone within walking or biking distance from the village.

Upon completion of an assignment, the volunteer will receive up to $400 in readjustment assistance. During service, travel, health care, insurance, housing, monthly living expenses (food, clothing, etc.), and six weeks vacation are paid by the Peace Corps. Many student loans are also deferrable while in the Peace Corps.

"I gained more than I gave. It not only makes you more of a global person, it also helps build confidence in knowing you can do a lot of things," stated Segal.

Both Gants and Segal stressed that although the Peace Corps is demanding, it is not as demanding as it has sometimes been portrayed. If you are not willing or able to complete the two years, there are some new Associate Volunteer Programs that you can be involved in, to allow these individuals a chance to serve.

Point Football

The UW-Stevens Point football team has earned itself a tie with the UW-Oshkosh Titans (who play this Saturday at 1:00) for third place in the SCWC with another impressive offensive-minded game which had our Pointers gain 581 total yards on a route to a 41-15 victory over UW-Stout. The Pointers gained 460 of these yards through the air, and for the third consecutive week rushed for more than 100 yards as gained by running the ball. The 581 yards gained against UW-Stout is the third highest in the school's history.

The Pointers took the opening kickoff and, as they have done so much of this season, marched down the field with authority and accuracy to score. Although David Schneider had a field goal attempt of 38 yards blocked on this possession, he would later in the game make fields goals of 28 and 44 yards.

The Blue Devils then took over possession of the football on their own 23-yard line, and after a gain of one yard and a loss of eight yards on a quarterback sack, they fumbled the ball on third down. The punt attempt was blocked back to the 31-yard line, and Point took over possession of the ball on its 35-yard line. From there, Pointer QB Kirk Baumgartner completed five of six passes and Jim Mares rushed twice, one of which was a two-yard carry for a touchdown, and a 74 Pointer lead.

The Blue Devils came right back and drove 52 yards, but our defense stopped them, so they had to settle for a field goal of 38 yards.

The remainder of the first quarter saw both teams punt the ball, but the second quarter for the Pointers was reminiscent of the fourth quarter against UW-Superior, scoring three TDs and a field goal to demoralize the Blue Devils and take a 31-9 lead into the locker room at halftime. Point scored on four of their first six possessions of the second quarter to wrap up 401 yards, while allowing the Blue Devils only one TD, and stopping them on the two-point conversion try.

After Schneider started the scoring for our Pointers with a field goal, Theo Bianco (who was near 100 percent healthy now) scored a TD midway through the second quarter to cap a 75-yard scoring drive for our Pointers. Bianco finished the game with nine receptions for 81 yards. Kurt Soderberg intercepted a pass for our Pointers on UW-Stout's next possession, and after an incomplete pass, Baumgartner (who completed 31 of 46 passes for 400 yards) hit Dan Moehling for a TD which covered 44 yards. The two-point conversion succeeded and UWSP opened a 24-6 lead.

UW-Stout scored its only points of the second quarter after that, but Point answered when Mares (who rushed for 126 yards on 29 carries) scored his second TD of the day on a one-yard run. Baumgartner completed three consecutive passes to set up the score, a 23-yard pass to Moehling and two passes to Bianco which resulted in gains of 18 and 15 yards, respectively. This was an important score for the Pointers because UW-Stout could only have a little momentum heading into halftime, but instead UWSPT decided to take advantage of the one minute remaining on the clock and build their lead.

Although the Pointers allowed the Blue Devils to gain almost 500 yards on offense, the aggressive play of the defense helped cause the Blue Devils to fumble the football five times (three of which found their way into a Pointer's hands) and also have the ball intercepted four times. Two of those interceptions were by Craig Vergenhaus who was Point's second leading tackler with a total of 11 tackles. Dan Hilliker led Point with a total of 12 tackles.

The second half saw the Blue Devils of UW-Stout put together two impressive scoring drives of 53 yards (which resulted in six points) and 32 yards (which resulted in eight points). After the Blue Devils scored on their first possession of the second half the Pointers once again came right back. After threatening to score a TD from UW-Stout's two-yard line, UWSP settled for a 25-yard field goal by Schneider.

This was any hope in the Blue Devils' hearts to win, it was diminished when the Pointers successfully executed key third-down plays on their next possession (which caught 13 passes for 233 yards and all-time most-reception yards in a game for a Pointer) caught a pass for a 12-yard TD, increasing the lead to 41-15 with less than three minutes remaining in the third quarter.

The fourth quarter saw the Blue Devils add a meaningless TD to their score, and also had a punt returned for 61 yards. UWSP has now won three games in-a-row, and are still in contention for a share of the SCWC title and a playoff berth.

Fall Classic V-Ball Tourney

The Quanti Gym was the site of the Fall Classic Volleyball Tournament Saturday. The tournament was sponsored by the UWSP student organization and the Association for Fitness in Business (AFIB). The tournament succeeded in raising $1000.

Twenty teams participated in the tournament which was broken down into Gold and Silver divisions. The Gold division championship went to 2AD Maxim, the silver division championship to Foud Du Lac who received $200.00.

In the silver division NYUK-NYUK of Stevens Point were victorious. This silver division was just for fun and awarded no monetary stipend.

"This was our first tournament, but it was very successful considering the opportunity for community residents and university students to get to know each other," said tournament coordinator Shari Halt. There will be another tournament this fall and possibly a spring tournament.

Four in Top Ten

The Women's Cross Country team finished four in ten placing in the top ten against Oshkosh and Eau Claire at Verona Park last weekend.

Colleen Brogwar finished at 21:12, placing fifth in the ten place, the top finisher for the Pointers and the Runner of the Week. "Colleen ran a great race in spite of her asthma. Her effort has added a lot of confidence to the team," said Coach Ted.

Brogwar was followed by Renee Brues, with a finishing time of 21:44, in 23rd. Lort Achenbaum finished at 22:41.

Also placing were Tara Langton in sixteen with a time of 23:26, third in twenty-second, finishing at 26:38.

We have once again reached that special time of the year when we can put on the most gruesome costume imaginable and not have to endure ridicule. In fact, we will be able to blend right in with the crowd. Yes, it’s time for that glorious holiday, Halloween. It’s time for pumpkins, costumes, and things that go bump in the night. So, keeping in the spirit of the season, some random thoughts on the thirty-first day of October.

There will be no State Street celebration in Madison this year. So now you’ll have to wait until next year and hope that someone will sponsor it then. Until that time you’ll have to go without the sight of drunken college students wearing funny costumes invading a famous Madison street. But, then again, you have a pretty good chance of seeing that any day of the year.

Cheap Trick: Blending Tradition with the Future

By Molly Rae

Features Writer

Here I sit at 1:18 am sifting through my albums and blowing dust off the old cadavers, my pins and needles are a little numb from the effort. My collection has been neglected since the cassette and CD’s invaded their old domain. Deep Purple, Edgar Winter, Foghat, and Cheap Trick are but a few to remind me of my age.

The Flame*" off Cheap Trick’s latest album is a great song, but me, I look forward to Robin Zander telling us all about his favorite, "Surrender," "Dream Police," and "Ain’t That Comical." So let’s hear them at their concert here Wednesday night. On to my turntable goes side B of "Cheap Trick at Budokan" and Robin Zander tells me that it’s a shame and that I’m the one to blame.

Cheap Trick’s current Epic release is "Lap of Luxury." I bought the CD! It’s a good combination of the band’s musical versatility. Exciting is the return of original bassist Tom Peterson. Amazing is the top-notch production by Richie Sambora. Astounding is the huge success of this, Cheap Trick’s twelfth album. "The Flame" was number one on both MTV charts and billboard’s top 10. "Don’t Be Cruel" is currently in the first slot on MTV and in the top ten, working its way into the number one position, on billboard charts.

"Ghost Town," the single to be released (sometime this month), is one of the album’s melodies, a bit of soul rock ballad. Of course, I can’t forget to mention the incessantly great sax solo on the opening cut, "Let Go." Back to my album, Zander is telling me that he wants me to want him...no problem there.

Cheap Trick has toured the world since 1977 with their first release. They have collected nearly 50 gold and platinum sales awards. They are featured on numerous film soundtracks including, "Heavy Metal," "Spring Break," and "Top Gun."

They are constantly changing but benefit the changes they remain a dynamic rock band.

Each consecutive release by Cheap Trick has been an extension of the group’s artistry and prowess. Now Robin says it’s time to record another album. The album that comes in mind is Cheap Trick’s style. They blend tradition with the future. Rock n Roll changes at an amazing pace and influences of key figures in its history are numerous, endlessly throughout their history are few. Cheap Trick is one of these few.

The clock strikes ten (or is it two), and in the words and music of Rick Nielsen, "Gonna Go Down," Wednesday night at Quandt Fieldhouse with Cheap Trick. But for this album goes back in its sleeve...and on goes "Dream Police."

"Red Red Wine" improves with age

UB40’s "Red Red Wine" finally reached the top of the American charts after it was first released here and 5 years later it hit number one in Britain and most of the rest of the world. Go figure.

The song celebrates the triumph of music over the rules of love. In short, it’s about getting drunk. So is it any wonder that it is so popular, especially among college students? And the song is written by UB40’s lead vocalist, Ali Campbell.

UB40 was one of the groups that were left behind during the British invasion of the early 80’s. The multi-racial reggae band took their name from a British unemployment form because all the members were unemployed when they got together, just like me at the time. (Remember them?) got their name because they were all out of work at the time.

UB40’s debut album "UB40" was their top 10 hit in 10 countries. The album contained five of their top 10 hits, which includes "Red Red Wine," "Dub on My Shoulder," "What’s My Name," and "Tuels of Spain.

Freshman who achieve a G.P.A. of 3.50 or higher will be asked to join the Freshman honor society, Phi Eta Sigma. This society has been around for many years. The advisor has been the department head for the freshman class and has been involved in a variety of areas. They have recreational outings and help tutor high school students. Two of the officers attend a national convention each year to see what other schools are doing and then bring back new ideas to help students here.

Every spring the new members are inducted at a formal dinner at the U.C. Each year they also sell T-shirts and sweatshirts to the members to help increase visibility on campus.

So, if you are a freshman, remember that your grades this fall can open doors for you. Studying is the key to success at UWSP. Employers like to see things like Phi Eta Sigma on your resume.

Femme Fatale...They're HOT!

by Molly Rae

"Beauty with a dash of danger" is the common description given to Wednesday night's opening act, Femme Fatale, at the Quandt Fieldhouse.

The five-member metal band originally from Albuquerque, New Mexico, has really come far since their move to L.A. and the release of "Femme Fatale," their debut LP on MCA Records.

"Waiting For the Big One," is a live performance video directed by Marty Callner who has also done work for Whitesnake, Heart, and Aerosmith shown frequently on MTV's Headbanger's Ball.

Femme Fatale is fronted by the energetic and charismatic lead vocalist, Lorraine Lewis who says, "All-out energy is the big thing about this band; from the second we come out on stage, the music comes at you full force."

Kevin Koffler of "Music Connection" recently did a cover story on the group and described Lewis' live performance: "...Femme Fatale's leading lady Lorraine Lewis springs onto the stage like a panther let loose from its cage."

Rick Rael (bass), Mazzi Rayed (guitar, keyboards), Bill D'Angelo (lead guitar), and Bobby Murray (drums) make up the rest of the electrifying Femme Fatale.

Put A Lid On It

The experts at Bicycling Magazine suggest a hard shell helmet with an energy absorbing liner to minimized brain injury. As cited in the American Journal of Public Health only 10 percent of university students wear a helmet when they ride. Stevens Point students are no exception. Some of the reasons that they give for not wearing a helmet ranged from "I don't want to look like a dork" to "I tried one a few years ago it wasn't hot, bulky, no style." An answer to this might be to try one of the new hard shell helmets. You will then find, lighter, fit better and cooler than models made a few years ago. They come in radical new col-

The UWSP Music Coalition is back! Their first major event was last Wednesday night when they hosted Monterey Parkes in the Encore room in the University Center. A local quintet, they played a great variety of popular rock tunes with a heavy edge. Their show was highlighted with a stunning appearance by Gemini singer, Lance St. John, who stole the crowd with his high energy and intense vocals. Paria vocalist Mike Wood, also highly impressed, joined the band for a number too. Then Monterey's regular vocalist, Chris, returned to stage, tightened the group and kept the momentum going for the rest of the night.

Mark Montgomery, President of the coalition has announced that their next event will be November 11 when they'll present the band "Roulette." Montgomery promised another Battle of the Bands even bigger and better than last year's event and they will try to bring a major band to campus too. Montgomery also mentioned that a show by the Minneapolis metal stars, Slave Raider, is being negotiated for early December. Music Coalition hopes to bring two shows a month, some free and some just cheap, to the University to offer an alternative to "dumbass" weekend parties. They also will help musicians hook-up to bands or help bands to solicit gigs.

Their next group meeting will be November 1 and anyone interested in music and concert promotion is encouraged to join. To find out more, contact President, Mark Montgomery at 344-2880.
President of UW-System

Kenneth Sharpe, president of the University of Wisconsin System, will give a public address and meet with administrators, faculty and student groups on Thursday, Nov. 3 at UW-Stevens Point.

The talk will take place at 12:30 p.m. in the Wisconsin Room of the University Center.

Those who wish to come early and participate in a luncheon are requested to make reservations by Oct. 28 at the Office of University Relations phone 346-2481. Special seating will be reserved for those wishing to attend only the talk.

Wisconsin Receives Multicultural Awareness Grant

MADISON-A $10,000 grant from the Council of Chief State School Officers (CCSCO) will support a program to improve the multicultural awareness of Wisconsin's future teachers.

The Department of Public Instruction was one of five state education agencies to receive a grant under the CCSCO's "Helping Teachers to Teach Diverse Students" project. Under the project, approximately 75 to 100 prospective teachers will spend six weeks working with Milwaukee's summer school program.

"All of the demographic data that I have reviewed points toward the continued emergence of an increasingly diversified student population," Grover said. "It is incumbent upon each of us to provide training for the teachers who will be given the responsibility of meeting the needs of these students."

The grant will cover the cost of a program coordinator, materials, travel associated with planning meetings, and hiring Milwaukee Public Schools teachers to serve as advisers. Teacher trainees participating in the program will either pay a nominal fee for dormitory housing, meals, and the week itself or will live with families from a different cultural background.

The DPI participated in the development of the grant proposal in cooperation with the 19 teacher preparation institutions that are part of the Wisconsin Improvement Program Network, the Milwaukee Public Schools, and the Milwaukee Teachers' Education Association.

Grant activities will be initiated over the summer and commence in the fall of 1981.

Campaign organizations in over 38 Wisconsin communities will participate in a "National Visibility Day" to highlight the grass roots organizational strength of the Dakakis campaign. The Visibility Day will take place this Monday, Oct. 24 in all 38 states through the United States.

In Stevens Point, campaign workers and students will be standing on ladders holding Dakakis signs at the corner of Main and Division Streets from 4:00 to 5:30 PM.

Campaign officials estimate that thousands will participate in visibility events in every city all over the nation. Hundreds will take part in visibility activities throughout Wisconsin.

But a few months ago, a DJ in Arizona started playing "Red Wine" and listeners began requesting it. Other radio stations picked it up and started playing it regularly as well. The rest, as they say, is proven gas.

As a result of renewed interest in "Red Wine," the now-year-old "Labour of Love" album is selling better than UB40's current eponymous album. Maybe Neil Diamond might even make a comeback. Go figure.

Relief For Shy Bladder

So on one talks about it. So it's probably the largest source of embarrassment and humiliation to campus men. So the library has not one book, article or pamphlet to help those having trouble. Is this any reason to admit so many of our ordinary guys have trouble urinating in public?

Author Dean Worboys thinks it is.

The voice of experience, Dean admits becoming an expert at avoiding public rest rooms by the second grade. He speaks of decades of disappointment, humiliation and putting himself down. Decades avoiding the company of people he wanted to know, events he wanted to see.

The worst of it was feeling completely alone. A vicious circle, shy bladder drives a more socially able people to a meal of silence. It's not really a talkative conversation after all.

And, despite what best friends are for, it's not the sort of thing a guy talks about with a buddy. Several years ago, however, a friend did mention having a shy bladder to Dean. It was the first communication he had heard of it. It was the beginning of the end.

When he knew he was not alone, Dean began working on getting over his shy bladder. And one of the first things he noticed was that shy bladder is not unusual at all! Judging by rest room observation (since no scientific studies can be found), it seems the vast majority of us deal with this phenomenon to some degree or another. Fortified by knowing he wasn't some kind of freak, Dean developed to where he now describes himself as "quite comfortable with the public whit. And it's no longer a trauma when the faucet occasionally won't open up."

How far he's come was recently brought home when Dean read a letter to Ann Landers. Another frustrated spirit was angry with himself for having made such a slight mistake I used the condom. This technique was so basic and the letter writer was so upset with himself. Dean decided it was time to share some support, some knowledge and some secrets.

Wolf monitoring boost

"Thrill of the Hunt"

It's funny how a person can't remember things that happened last week, but yet certain events that happened long ago are as clear in the mind as if they happened yesterday. Every hunter has broken a bone or stumbled over an obstacle that stood out in their mind for their whole lives.

One such event happened to a boy of 13 from a small town in central Wisconsin. The boy whom we will call Joe (mainly because the real name is unimportant) shot his first deer that year. It wasn't so much the kill that stood out, but rather the thrill of the hunt. He was deer hunting for his second year, and it was an exceptionally warm opening day of the season.

His parents owned 90 acres of woodland which for many seasons past had proved to hold a lot of deer. It wasn't surprising that he was the first one up that morning since he hadn't been able to sleep much the night before due to the present fear that somehow all the alarm clocks in the house would somehow mysteriously fail to go off at the proper time. Joe got up two hours before the shooting hours and impatiently waited for the rest of his family to stir to life so that the hunt could begin.

After what seemed like five hours, (but was actually closer to a half hour) his brother, uncle, and cousin got up and began to get ready for the day which lay ahead. The smell of fresh coffee and cigarette smoke filled the air as the group finished their preparations.

At six o'clock Joe finished putting on his jacket, grabbed his bolt action 30-30 and walked through his backyard and into the woods. It took about 15 minutes to walk to the tree stand which he would be sitting in that morning. This gave him plenty of time to climb into the stand and get situated before the lightening of the sky signaled the opening of the season. The morning proved to be exciting with both Joe's brother and cousin downing bucks before 9 o'clock. Joe himself saw over a dozen deer, but Joe decided to pass them all.

After a half hour later, the young hunter returned to the woods, taking his father's advice to sit on the lower end of the woods where 266 acres of people had been cut out earlier that year creating thick patches of cover consisting of brush piles and young sapsings. He positioned himself on the base of the trunk of a wind-fallen poplar tree from which bad good visibility to all directions except for directly behind him. It was an Indian summer's day with blue skies and a gentle breeze. Yet could be occasionstitial bursts of gustine in the distance. The temperature felt more like a spring day rather than late November. Except for a couple of sparrows aright which had attempted to give the young hunter cardiac arrest by making as much noise as possible while remaining hidden, there wasn't much activity in the area for the first couple of hours.

Then from the east came the noise of movement through the dry, crumby leaves. Even though he was convinced the sound signaled another squirrel, Joe glanced to his left and saw two deer less than 50 yards away heading right at him through heavy brush. He could not raise his gun up high enough to keep it off his face because he was sure that there was one of those red deer of his presence. So he awaited anxiously as the deer began continued to move toward him. As the first two deer walked in front of him less than two hundred yards away, Murphy's Law went into effect causing the wind to shift, sending his scent straight to the deer. Up went the nose first, and then the tail as the big doe turned and looked right at the would-be assailant. Joe frizzed, trying to sense again become just another part of the landscape. A few seconds later, the two deer turned and ran. Oh well, nice try.

He could see positively that they had been done, and he now was pretty sure that he would never get a good look at the other two (which all this time remained out of clear view in the thick brush) to see what they were. By this time he had raised his gun and was shaking with excitement when suddenly something happened. The two does had taken off along with the two unknown deer when the fourth deer stepped into the opening where the two does had.

Question: What kinds of rental agreements exist in Wisconsin? Three basic types of rental agreements exist in Wisconsin.

1. Written Lease
   A written lease is the most common rental agreement entered into by students. The document itself defines the rights and obligations of the landlord and tenant. A rental agreement for more than one year must be in writing, but leases for shorter periods of time, such as a semester or school year, are more common in the student community. These need not be in writing, but commonly are. The period of a written lease effects both the landlord's responsibilities of landlord and tenant if either party breaches the lease.

2. Oral Lease
   Wisconsin permits an oral lease for periods of one year or less. This type of arrangement is rarely seen in the student community. The terms of an oral lease as to the commencement and expiration date, property subject to the agreement, and the amount of rental must be clear before the court will declare that the parties have entered into an oral lease. Frequently what one party considers to be an oral lease will be considered by the court to be a tenancy at will.

3. Tenancy at Will
   The most common rental arrangement outside the university community is a tenancy at will. A tenancy at will either the landlord or tenant can terminate the rental agreement by giving twenty-eight days written notice of intent to terminate the rental arrangement at the time rent is due and payable.

Question: What are the sources of law that govern rental agreements?

There are four sources of law that govern rental agreements in Wisconsin. The most important is chapter 794 of the Wisconsin Statutes. The chapter contains detailed provisions about the nature of rental agreements, how rental agreements can be terminated, and what duties and rights both a landlord and tenant have under each form of rental agreement.

The second most important source of rental law is the Wisconsin Administrative Code. The code contains a whole chapter on what constitutes unfair rental practices and the landlord's obligation to return a deposit. Case law or common law also is an important source of information about rental agreements. In the United States for about 200 years, courts have issued written decisions about landlord-tenant disputes. The cases may contain answers to questions which are not governed by the administrative code or Wisconsin Statutes.

Finally, municipal codes often detail minimum standards for such items as electricity, plumb­ ing, driveways, heating, and their important aspects of rental agreements.

Question: What are the advantages and disadvantages of each type of rental arrangement?

The advantages and disadvantages of a good written lease agreement both involve certainty. If you have a written lease, the document itself should make clear, for example, how and when you can terminate the lease, and whether and when you can sublet a rental unit. Under a written lease, you have the security of knowing that you have a place to stay for a definite period. But you also know that you can move during the period of the lease only with difficulty and some legal liability. Both an oral lease and a tenancy at will have the advantages and disadvantages of ambiguity. It is far easier to move under these arrangements, but it is also far easier for the landlord to force you to vacate a rental unit or increase your rent during the school year. So legal help is often the best help of all. Well organized, well-prepared students can try their own small claims cases. Remember to know the law. In small claims cases, if you present correct facts correctly written documents to support your case, the judge may make a fair decision. You may disagree with the decision, but the decision will probably be correct based on the law.

The University Legal Society has a lawyer at its office in the University Center every Thursday between 1:00 p.m. and 4:00 p.m. You must make an appointment in advance and pay a fee of $4.00 for seeing the lawyer. The legal society lawyer will discuss your case with you for about one-half hour and give you an impression about your rental dispute and your legal rights and responsibilities. An appointment with the legal society lawyer is a good first step in evaluating any rental dispute.

Many students are eligible to participate in Wisconsin Judicare Inc. program or legal assistance to the poor. Landlord-tenant disputes are supposed of legal cases Judicare often covers. If you are eligible for Judicare, the landlord or tenant can authorize a lawyer to help you in small claims court and the lawyer will pay for a lawyer to represent you. Be advised that the Judicare lawyer is very low and only a few lawyers will take Judicare cases in Portage county.

If you are not eligible for Judicare help, at least consider hiring a lawyer to represent you in your rental agreement case. Legal fees depend on the lawyer you hire, but you may find a lawyer to represent you for $200 to $300. Particularly, if your rental dispute is complex and involves large sums of money, hiring a lawyer may be worth the amount of money you will pay the lawyer.

Nutrition Intuition

Iron's primary role in the body is carrying oxygen in the blood. Everyday, the adult person loses 0.1-1.2 mg through feces, urine, perspiration and the sloughing off of cells. In addition to this loss, women lose 15-25 mg of iron during their menses. This averages out to be 0.1-1.0 mg of iron everyday.

Due to these losses, women need to absorb 1-2.5 mg of iron per day. Since only approximately 10 percent of the iron ingested is actually absorbed, women should consume 15-18 mg of iron per day. For most women, this is difficult because in order to do this, they need to eat 1800-2400 cal. per day of an adequate diet. A lot of women do not eat this amount of food. This is one of the reasons women take iron supplements.

been standing to see what all the excitement was about. As he started at the deer, gun in his shoulder, safely off, he saw that the deer was also a he,
with two long spikes sticking out above his head. Time seemed to stop for a moment as both parties pondered the signifance of this development. As the young buck decided that it was time to leave, the young hunter decided that it was time to fire. The rifle roared as the small but deadly missile left its barrel. A moment later it was clear that it had been well aimed as the buck fell to the ground.

Four years ago Joe's father came very ill, and his parents sold 'be old homestead, moving to town. Over the years,
Joe has shot several other deer
both with a gun and with a bow.
He killed bigger deer, and made several longer and more difficult shots, in times worse hunting conditions. Despite this, one stick out in his mind quite as much that first buck he shot years ago. It's funny, but this joy, who if asked, would probable have a hard time remembering what he ate for breakfast the previous morning, can tell you all about his first deer.
Not just the basics, but the details which made the event special. The smell of the coffee and cigarette smoke in the kitchen, the crunch of the leaves as he walked through the woods, the sound of geese flying overheard, and even the sight of the buck lightly stepping on the ground with its left rear hoof as it turned to run, all of these and more he can still remember.

Most Canada geese have moved southward, and duck counts are low in the northern part of the state. A large number of deer are being seen on area fields during evening hours, and morning bucks are still being found; as the deer begin their increased fall activity, motorists are cautioned to watch for them along roads. Black bear activity is moving into their dens for the winter. Also noteworthy are the flights of the northern woodcock. Flying are the hordes of migratory robins and the "river riders" of the north—pigeons. Trappers are taking to the field this week and next, anxious to see how the drought affected the fur-bearer populations.

Heavy leaf cover is still ham-peting hunting in southern Wisconisin—where fall colors are at their peak in many counties. Bowhunting success in Iowa County is low, with the harvest only about one-seventh of what it was last year. Some raccoon are being taken, but indications are early raccoon prices will be low. Grant County pheasant hunters are having good success in stocked areas.

Walleye fishing is picking up on the Wisconsin River below the dam at the Wisconsin Rapids area. Anglers on the Fox River are getting some nice catches of walleye, but fishing is spoty. Chinook salmon are being caught by the dam. Perch fishing is good in Door County, with some nice catches of brown trout and a few salmon reported at several locations. Anglers on the Kewaunee and Ahnapee rivers are getting salmon. The Wolf River is producing some nice catches of white bass. In Marquette County, fishing at the mouth of Little River is producing some nice catches of chinook and brown trout. Fishing on Green Bay is very poor but it's pretty good on the Hedinso River.
