Is Bush's "new harmony" beyond the dream.?

The Nation/Davie Robb

"Something it seems fundamental that a man should have a door slammed in his face because he is a Negro." With those words were Representative George Bush explained to his hometown Texas audience why he had disregarded local opinion in voting for the Fair Housing Act in 1968. But somehow the issue didn't seem so fundamental to Bush in his private life. Real estate records in Houston and Midland, Texas, reveal that from 1955 to 1965 President George and First Lady Barbara owned property that could not be sold or rented to "Negroes" and other minorities because this was banned by restrictive covenants.

Such restrictions were common in Texas and much of the rest of the country from the 1940s through the early 1960s. Although in 1948 the Supreme Court ruled in Shelley v. Kraemer that these covenants were legally unenforceable, according to Clarence Laws, Southeast Regional director for the NAACP, from 1957 to 1965, "restrictive racial covenants were still being enforced in Texas in the 1960s and early 1970s." In fact, they were as common in Houston's Harris County Court in 1968 in the Justice Department forced the County Clerk to include a disclaimer on their record certifying that such covenants were "invalid and unenforceable under Federal law."

In 1963, the developers of an upscale tract in Midland, wishing to "enhance the value and desirability of their properties," stipulated that none of the ninety-three lots could be "used or conveyed to any Negro or person of African descent." One of those lots was bought two years later by George and Barbara Bush. They lived there until 1969, when they moved to Houston. There they bought a lot in the Broad Oaks housing development. Since 1941 the subdivision had carried restrictions against lots being "sold, leased or rented to any person other than the Caucasian race."

When asked about the restrictive covenants, the President's then acting press secretary, Stephen Hart, said, "There's really nothing to this," and that Bush "said he doesn't recall any such covenants." However, according to attorney Marvin Nathan, who served in the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department from 1965 to 1968 and is now a real estate lawyer in Houston, although Broad Oaks was not the most elite area at the time, certainly people would have known as a matter of common knowledge that there were racial restrictions and taken some comfort in that. Usually a real estate broker or broker would not inform his clients of restrictive covenants on property they were considering, but the Bushes were the first to build on their tract and therefore might have examined the restrictions. Some wouldn't have bought property if it didn't have those restrictions," Nathan added. In other cases, a white might front for a black family to help them "buy a home." However, in those cases, racist harassment frequen­ tly served to keep neighborhoods segregated.

The Bush family's old neighborhood in Broad Oaks has remained all white to this day. Bush is not the first, public figure to face questions about racial restrictions or property ownership. Restrictions that were discovered in former President Reagan and his first wife, Jane Wyman, and their land in Beverly Hills that carried restrictive covenants and that they later extended those restrictions to adjoining parents, two of which they bought. Last year, it was discovered that Justice William Rehnquist had owned homes in Vermont and Arizona that carried restrictive covenants. Both Reagan and Rehnquist denied any knowledge of the covenants. I clearly remember when he announced his candidacy last October, Bush called for a "new harmony" in race relations and denounced "the tired old bag­ gage of bigotry." But during his unsuccessful campaign for public office, against Senator Ralph Yarborough, Bush came out against the 1964 Civil Rights Act. At the time, he was living in the still all-white neighborhood of Broad Oaks.

"I oppose the Civil Rights Bill," Bush said in his campaign literature, "on the grounds that it undermines and violates many other rights of all people." He also stated in his biography, "such restrictions on property ownership that would help alleviate inequalities and problems should be encouraged. Sweeping Federal legislation will fail. Texas has a responsible record in this field, and Texas is capable of solving its own problems in this difficult area." That position didn't endear Bush to black voters. For example, he managed to get only fourteen votes in Yarborough's 1st in the overwhelmingly black 24th precinct in Houston in 1966.

Bush won a House seat in 1966 despite another poor showing in the black precincts. In his autobiography, Looking Forward, Bush expressed his embarrassment at his inability to "break the Democratic Party's grip on black voters." A black man who had talked about "local black leaders" at a "longtime friend," who chaired the United Negro College Fund when I headed the UNCF drive on the Yale campus in 1948," was I. "With my knowledge," was no U.N.C.F. chapter at Yale for Bush to head in 1948. In 1968 and 1974, President Bush was an officer of Yale's Annual Budget Drive, a charity project. Based on a poll of the student body, 18 percent of the drive's $25,000 goal was earmarked for the United Negro College Fund. Moreover, if one can believe this, the national office of the U.N.C.F. says its arch files show record of Bush's involvement with its work during his time at Yale. When asked about Bush's claim in the book, acting press secretary Howie Schmidt denied the assertion that "Bush headed the drive for the U.N.C.F." Fifty percent of the proceeds of the autobiography, he added, will be donated to that group. Bush has been called a "re­ name candidate," and he now sees Steve Point, Washington pres­ ident," because of his extensive service in government. But there is a shadowy side to that, according to an NAACP official with whose organization he campaigns, "the fact that he owned property with racial restric­ tions, his stances on civil rights legislation and in retrospect may be magnifying his work on behalf of blacks suggests that the record should be further probed. For example, he didn't hire practices at the oil company he founded very much from the industry norm of wholesale discrimination?"

It seems to me that the evi­ dence thus far shows that Presi­ dent George Bush is carrying some tired old baggage of bigot­ rY. To my knowledge, the "new harmony" isn't beyond the dream...
Dear Editor,

This last Saturday, February 11, 1989, while attending the Pointer hockey game in Duluth, MN, we were truly embarrassed by the behavior of many of the Pointer hockey fans. It has come to our attention that the interpretation of the "rowdy crowd" has been pushed to its limits. Not only were they rude and inconsiderate, but they showed a tremendous lack of class as followers of the true sport of hockey. We felt ashamed of these fans for the team and our university.

The following are just a few examples of the type of character they displayed:

1. Started during the introduction of senior players for St. Scholastica in their last home game. Some fans rudely interrupted the announcer by yelling "SIEVE" when two senior goalies were announced.

2. While it appeared the Pointer team was going to win, the Saints continued to give us a good fight even though certain cheers became obscene and disrespectful. This was totally uncalled for.

3. Stevens Point has built a strong team with fans that have become accustomed to certain cheers. But, we also realize St. Scholastica is still building a program and we found some of these cheers inappropriate for a team of their level.

The cheers we felt were uncalled for included the repeated use of "SIEVE" (when the score showed 8-2), the S.O.B. cheer to players in the penalty box and the constant heckling of the goalie's name. These cheers are meant to psych-out the opposing team while motivating our own players in times of intense competition (i.e. our UW-River Falls, Bemidji State, or UW-Eau Claire). They should not be used to designate teams such as St. Scholastica.

In the past, the "rowdy crowd" has been defined as fans who show class to their sport and give respect to the team and the university it represents. This definition includes showing good taste along with appropriate timing of cheers.

So what happened?

We attribute this display of poor sportsmanship to the lack of understanding certain concepts of the game of hockey and the minus of the true meaning of "the rowdy crowd."

We hope we don't turn away any potential hockey fans, because fan support is so important to our awesome Pointer team. Let's just keep in mind that it's great to have school spirit as long as we use a little courtesy and common sense.

Loyal Pointer Hockey Fans

The problems of renting a home

By Timothy A. Bishop

Outdoor Editor

There are flies in the walls and ceilings, and through them, water drains down to the floors from the attic.

There are towels and blankets stuffed under doors and in broken windows, but the cold blows right through anyway.

The furnaces work, and because of all of the drafts in the house, it runs all the time.

To make matters worse, it is a 1950s-era oil-fired heater which has never been converted into a very inefficient gas burner.

And for all of this, you and your housemates are spending as much as $10,000 to $15,000 a year.

Does all of this sound far-fetched to you? Well, the numbers are there to prove it.

For those 12 months in which they have been renting the house, they are paying $13,533 a month. That price for a four-bedroom house is consistent with the costs to rent a well-maintained house in Evanston, Illinois, one of the most expensive suburbs in the Chicago area.

Some students are paying even more.

And who are these students getting their money from?

Many of these houses are old and similar to those which are deteriorating and suffering from disrepair. Most have inadequate heating systems which were built in times when energy was cheap. Thus, in addition to high rents, these students are also paying outrageous gas or oil bills.

Another common problem in these houses is poor plumbing facilities. It is not unusual for eight people to share one bathroom, and many of these houses have pipes which leak or freeze when the temperature nears zero.

If something major, such as an appliance, furnace or plumbing, should break, the tenant is instructed to contact the landlord or agent to have it repaired. But, often the repairs take a long time to be completed and at times, landlords have completely ignored the requests.

Schultz also pointed out that the houses owned by these people are often the same residences which have disputes with student parties.

"A good landlord will have a 'party clause' in his house which basically says that if they (the tenants) have a party, they will be evicted. And they enforce these clauses, if not in person, then through another resident of the neighborhood who has agreed to keep an eye on the house and see that the rules are being followed." The bad ones, who don't care about their property, don't protect themselves from parties. The students know that they can get away with it, so they have these parties.

These parties violate many local liquor laws, but the landlords just look the other way.

As a result, the parties happen at the same house almost every night. Everyone knows where these places are. You can literally go to any bar every Thursday, Friday and Saturday night, groups of students can be seen in the neighborhood, moving from one party to the next.

Schultz also said that as a university area resident and as a representative of the city, he represents the way some of the student houses appear and the image they give of the city.

"The upkeep of the exterior of these houses falls upon the landlord's responsibility and some of these people are not doing it," said Schultz. "On some of these houses, the paint is peeling and the building looks terrible.

"As an example, there is a house on Main Street which is owned by Mr. Yokers. This house, across the street from mine, is badly in need of painting.

The guys living in it last year even volunteered to paint it themselves. Mr. Yokers, however, refused to buy the paint.

"I have been inside this house, and it is just as bad as the outside. The carpets are badly worn and there are leaky basements and the walls where the rain can get in.

"Other houses in the area also have rundown exteriors, with plastic used in place of storm windows and other problems where the landlord has failed in his responsibility to maintain it. For people passing through town on Highway 10, this can really give them a bad impression about the city."

Schultz also gave examples of landlords who have failed in their job right.

"In my house, there are two buildings which are owned by Stevens Point Mayor Scott Schultz agreed that there are some landlords who abuse their tenants' rights, but there are others who are fair to the student residents.

"Some of the landlords in town are very good," said Schultz, "but their are others who aren't. Most work hard to do the things that keep their houses in good condition. Some, however, are just in it for the easy buck and don't care about their properties. Their maintenance is cashflow and profit, and they tend to ignore the properties themselves."

Schultz said that the houses owned by these people are often

Wisconsin small claims court procedure

by Jim Babitch

Contributor

Most cases involving legal disputes where a student is a party can be started in small claims court. These include the majority of landlord-tenant claims, consumer credit transactions, personal injury or property damage claims. Small claims court is designed so that ordinary people without legal training can try their cases. The rules of evidence in small claims court are relaxed. For example, under many circumstances hearsay evidence can be introduced.

A judge, not a jury, tries small claims cases.

To file a small claims case in the Stevens Point area, a small claims case involves a four-step procedure. The steps are:

1. Filing the Small Claims Complaint
   A small claims case is filed with the clerk of courts. The clerk's office is located in the County-City Building. Forms summons and complaints are available through the clerk in which you must describe your cause of action. It is important to know the defendant's address before filing your small claims case. The cost is approximately $16.50.

2. Return Date
   The small claims summons and complaint in this county has a return date. Both the plaintiff and defendant must appear on the return date in front of the clerk. On the return date, it is determined whether or not there is any dispute between the parties. If there is no dispute, the clerk enters an appropriate judgment. If there is a dispute, the clerk schedules a date for pretrial conference.

3. Pre-Trial Conference:
   In Portage County, pre-trial conferences are held in every small claims case. During the pre-trial conference, the judge tries to find what the issues are. The purpose of the pre-trial conference is to determine if the case can be settled.

4. Trial:
   A small claims trial takes place in front of a judge. Some judges ask questions of witnesses. Other judges require the parties to present their own cases. After all the evidence is in, the judge usually issues a decision from the bench. The ordinary small claims cases are set for 30, 45, 60 and 90 minutes of the court's time.

Who can sue:

- Any person can bring a small claims case if they are over the age of 18 years.
- Minor persons under the age of 18 years may start small claims court with the assistance of a parent, legal guardian, or an attorney.

When can I sue:

- You may sue when you have a dispute that merits small claims court action and the amount in controversy is $2,000 or less. The judge will not hear cases where the amount in controversy is over $2,000.

Where can you sue:

- Generally, you must bring your small claims case in the county where the defendant resides.

What can a court do:

- A court can\
  - dismiss your case
  - dismiss with prejudice
  - award a judgment
  - order a default judgment

How do you collect:

- To collect your judgment, you must satisfy the judgment. You must find out where the defendant works and any bank or savings accounts they have. You can then have your judgment garnished or your wages garnished. If the defendant does not pay, you may consider filing a suit in a county where the defendant resides.

Note: If the defendant owns real estate, a judgment can become a lien against the property if the defendant does not pay. The lien will not be removed until the judgment is paid in full.

UWSP student earns recognition

A graphic design student at UWSP has received honorable mention in a national poster contest sponsored by the Small Business Week Theme Committee. Lynn Larso n of Rosholt, a sophomore at UWSP, is one of 11 artists nationwide to be selected for special recognition. Her poster was completed as an assignment for an introductory graphics design class taught by Jeff Twarowski of the department of art and design.

The contest was held annually to promote Small Business Week in America, and is open to both professionals and students in graphic design. The theme for this year's event is "Small Business is America's Future!"

From 600 posters entered, judges picked a winner, two runners-up and 11 honorable mentions. The winner's design becomes the official poster for Small Business Week 1973. The others are displayed during that event in Washington, D.C.

A non-traditional student, Larson and her husband Ole operate a dairy farm near Rosholt. She is the mother of three children, a 4-H leader's assistant and a youth leader at Faith Lutheran Church.

Larson, a 1975 graduate of Rosholt High School, enrolled at UWSP in 1966. She has exhibited work in the student art show and is a member of Phi Eta Sigma Honor Society. She was named to Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges in 1972. Larson is also a member of the Dean's List and was a co-winner of the Spald Student Scholarship last year.

NEED A SAFE RIDE HOME?

by Amy Lardinois

News Editor

The Women's Resource Center is again operating a van for students as an alternative to walking home. Driven by work study students, the van provides a safe and warm way for individuals to return to their homes from campus. It will drop off within a five mile radius from campus.

The van currently runs throughout both the fall and spring semesters but does not operate during Christmas break or the summer months. The WRC is hoping to begin summer van service as well. Hours run Monday through Thursday at the following times and locations:

9:00 and 10:30: Parking lot E (by CNH bldg) .
9:00 and 10:30: Berg Gym
9:10 and 11:00: Library

Any questions about the service can be directed to the Women's Resource Center, Nelson Hall, 346-4801.

The benefits of Greek organizations

by Stacy Hoyer

Articles have been written concerning the negative aspects of fraternities and sororities along with particular horror stories involving dating. However, not enough is mentioned about the countless benefits derived from belonging to a Greek organization. Time after time, these groups on our campus take part in programs that benefit both the campus and community.

Hazing, defined as "harassing or intimidating by physical or mental punishment," has been outlawed within national fraternities for over 30 years, but on some campuses it continues underground. This is where we run into bad publicity." said John Lamperre, former President of Tau Kappa Epsilon. Also speaking on hazing, President of Inner Greek Council, Tony Menting, stated "You hear about hazing problems on other campuses, but that just does not exist here."

Another point to be made is that many negative incidents reported in the past have been alcohol related. The Greek organizations on our campus hold only non-alcoholic Rush events. "We have not served alcohol at a Rush event in three years. This shows that fraternities have taken the initiative," said Lamperre.

Fraternities and sororities also contribute a great deal to our community and various charities. The "Point Park Run" and "Braffest" are just two of last year's community events that were sponsored by Sigma Tau Gamma. Other charitable projects were the "Keg Rallies" at $1.25, sponsored by Tau Kappa Epsilon, where the proceeds went to St. Jude's Children's Hospital in Memphis, Tennessee.

In the book, From Here To Fraternity, Robert Egan cites the following statistics: "In a typical year, fraternities and sororities contribute over 9 million dollars toward charitable causes. They also devote over 2 million hours to work with the hospitalized, underprivileged, campus and community blood drives, etc."

Greek organizations not only benefit communities, but the individual. Ways in which they do this are through improving each person's "communication and leadership skills, their ability to meet people, encouraging campus and local involvement and by providing a constant social outlet through their variety of programs," said Menting. Menting also added that "Organizational, leadership and communication skills are closely related and are encouraged through exposure to the internal structure of each organization, the opportunities to lead committees within each and the ability to plan various events. Some students attend college, receive their grades, yet never become involved in their campus. Employers often look for individuals with experience and those that were involved. Greeks prove this well-rounded, highly involved character."

Some other interesting statistics show that "33 percent of undergraduate men/women on campuses without fraternities/sororities will graduate. 67 percent on campuses with fraternities/sororities will graduate."

Also, showing that Greek organizations build leaders, "Greeks make up 71 percent of our nation's senators and 70 percent of our Fortune 500 Key Executives."

Amelina Swiderski, President of our campus' newest sorority, Alpha Omega Rho, said that her organization was "formed by people who believed in the Greek Society. Our short-term goal is to improve inner-Greek relations and the view the community has of Greek organizations. The old reputation is dying with the rise of the new image of a well-organized, working society. We are here to be a support group, not only for ourselves, but for our charitiess."

Academically, philanthropically and socially, fraternities and sororities seem to be beneficial to the individual. Through their time and effort, they also are an unlimited resource to their communities.

...Or Something Like That

by J.S. Morrison

Well, it was inexcusable. I think we all saw it coming. Some see it as a mild annoyance and some view it as the second sign of the coming of the Apocalypse (Tiffany is the first, but all agree that nothing good could ever possibly come of it). I, J.S. Morrison, have been asked to host a late night talk show.

What? You mean you're surprised they would pick someone like me to host a late night talk show? Well, take a look at the other people who have been chosen to host after hours into the world of celebrity chat-chat. Arsenio Hall? His chief claim to fame is being one of Eddie Murphy's pals. Pat Sajak? The man who displayed his talent for witty repartee with such clever lines as "There are three 8's." Even David Letterman had experienced nothing but flops until he landed "The Late Show with David Letterman." Can I be a lead-in? Remember the morning show? Dave would probably like to forget it.

Yes, the choice of J.S. Morrison for a new late night column seems as logical as pulling your hand away from a lit bumer on a stove. What might this new late night piece of "infotainment" be like? Certainly you don't think I would go through this entire column without a simulation. And remember: This is only a dramatization. Don't try it at home.

The program begins with clever and hip opening monologue. It will feature things such as expensive cars, neon lights, dancing people, empty bottles of Jack Daniels, urinated on on couches, a green small irritable dwarf, proudly holding Alan Thicke's severed head, pinning 10 slowly melting albums and other hip things along those lines.

After the opening montage, a deep authoritarian voice will introduce the show and then introduce me. I will walk out onto a small but tasteful stage to gales of applause. People will throw flowers, women will scream and cry. I think I have the idea.

Next will come the monologue. It will be of course be jam-packed with clever observations on life, love, sex, drugs, rock

"Wellness, lasagna and Oprah"
by Camarillo White

"You're hearing about it every day. Even Oprah Winfrey has set her mind to it, healthy living. And, of course, UW-Stevens Point is no exception being the "Wellness Hot Spot" (or something like that) of the world.

An extension of this health awareness is the "Choice Eating for Healthy Living" program at Allen and DeBot. But, don't get scared away by visions of bean sprouts and granola sandwiches. "The purpose is to offer entrees low in fat and high in complex carbohydrates for those students who would like them. Previously this was difficult unless they ate at the salad bar," Stephanie Whiting, of Health Services, said.

The "Choice Eating" entrees are significantly lower in fat and higher in fiber than traditional recipes. For example, lasagna with bean sauce contains eight grams of fat per serving versus 30-36 grams of fat from traditional lasagna made with beef and high-fat cheeses. The addition of beans raises the fiber content. Vegetarian pizza on whole wheat crust has 10 grams of fat as compared to 25-30 grams in a slice of cheese and sausage pizza. The whole wheat crust increases vitamins and minerals by 70 percent over a white flour crust.

U.S. Dietary Guidelines recommend decreasing fat in our diet and increasing our complex carbohydrate intake. Fat is essential to sound nutrition but total fat intake should be limited to less than 30 percent of your daily caloric intake. The typical American diet is 40 percent or more fat. Our high-fat diet promotes heart disease, cancer and obesity.

Dietary fat is the real culprit in weight gain. Research shows that cutting fat intake, even without cutting calories, is an excellent way to lose weight. Complex carbohydrates which include whole grains, fruits and vegetables, enhance health by lowering cholesterol. They are a good source of vitamins, minerals and dietary fiber. Adequate dietary fiber has been linked with a reduced risk of some cancers and may also be beneficial for people who are trying to control weight.

Look for the Lifestyle Assistants and Dietetic Club members who will be in the food centers each Tuesday night.

No matter what you think of Oprah, do something good for yourself and try the healthy "Choice Eating" entrees at DeBot and Allen each Tuesday night.

"Wellness, lasagna and Oprah"
Reflections of a freshman

by Tricia Deering

Features Writer

First Semester

I reluctantly said good-bye to Mommy-Daddy, and use of their car all so I could live in this s.o. Here I am, before my next job, trying to block out the sounds of 17 different stereo, the next-door bickering roommates and the squeaking bed of the couple upstairs.
We now have our beds in convenient lofts (which posed the near-impossible task of having your nose five inches away from the ceiling), but I can hear the powerful snoring of the couple upstairs.

Second Semester

After three months of attending college, I've found that as female you will be the victim of many a drunken habooz's target of sexual lure.
One, used on me, seems to be so witty, "Won't you take off your glasses so I may look into your pretty eyes?" To which I reply, "No, I'm sorry.
You see, I am Superwoman, and if I were to remove my laser-beam-filtering-specs, you may very well be blinded from the powerful rays.
"They then stare dumbfoundedly and are convinced I am too big a freak with whom to engage in any sexual game. Works like a curse. Any other female who does not appreciate drooling, beet-bellied monkeys making sexually repulsive moves on her will find these tips indispensable:

1. If any male attempts about how breathtaking your body is, simply reply, "Yes, that's what my last two husbands said while I strangled them with my support hose.

2. If a male gorilla suddenly squashes your tush, turn to the nearest female and giggle,
"Marge, I really wish you could withhold such urges until we get back to the room." He'll leave you alone.

After an entire semester of Guns and Roses beeb-stained clothing and "Snoopy's hair," I've come up with a few suggestions for any newsmen to college.

1. If you don't have a LOUD radio or boombox, invest in a pair of headphones. You'll never be able to be in the dust of the decibels.

2. If you like hot food, invest in a pair of rose-colored glasses from the Deloit Center (the casseroles are all the same color—these specs will add spark to your meal).

3. When you are walking

SGA: this week

Mary Kay Smith

February 16, 1989

This week the Student Government Association's Finance Committee began its annual budget assessment of the needs of UWSP's 35 recognized student organizations. Half of these organizations came up before the ten-member committee this past Saturday. The Athletic and intramural departments proposed budgets were heard Tuesday. The remainder of the student organizations budget needs will be assessed on February 25 and 26.

These groups each will be allocated their assessed sum for fiscal year zero (July 1, 1988 to June 30, 1990) from the over 300,000 dollars available. Full-time students each semester, are charged a fee to help create this fund. The Athletic Department will be asking for $100,000 this year, a substantial increase from the student fees over the previous years. The Athletic Dept. receives approximately one-third of its funding from their SGA budget allotment.

Finance Committee director, Roy Bagley, encourages all recognized student organizations to apply for funds to help offset their programs cost, supplies and travel expenses.

Other agenda addressed by SGA this past Thursday included: decreasing administrative charge backs and the attempted appointment of a vice-presidential candidate to replace Joe Andreka.

UWSP's administrative charge backs (administrative charges for services rendered to auxiliaries (the University Center, Text Rental and the residence halls) are currently the highest in the Wisconsin University System at $250,000 per year. SGA would like to see these reduced closer to $125,000. SGA president Brenda Leahy said that she finds it hard to see why our service charges are greater and that she doesn't believe that the administrative services we receive are any better.

After SGA vice-president Joe Andreka resigned, a vacancy was left that has yet to be filled. Joe said that he resigned for a combination of factors, first and foremost an academic conflict. The time involved with the vice-presidency interfered with the completion of the minor necessary for him to graduate this May.

The second factor was the division of vice-president and source director into two separate positions. Joe as vice-president and the additional source director position was left unclear.

SGA president Brenda Leahy and Joe both stated that the resignation did not stem from personal problems. Joe stated that he did have a great deal of student support from a few of the students who he saw as more concerned with the parliamentary procedure than the issues, but that this was not intragral in his decision to resign.

Brenda Leahy attempted last Thursday to recombine the source director and vice-presidential positions and appointed Cassandra McGraw to fill them. Senate, however, didn't confirm her and the position is still unoccupied. Brenda stated that she has other appointments in mind and that the position could be filled at this Thursday's SGA meeting.

She also added that the new appointees, Keith Seibel, will be coming to Stevens Point for a few days to speak to the Wednesday's source meeting and to meet with her. She stated that she is trying to be working with him.

She also encourages those who are interested in running for Senate to have their applications in by February 30.

Nontrad. office hours

The Nontraditional Student Office at UWSP will be open on Wednesday evenings until 6:30 p.m. for people who are seeking information about the university but cannot do it during regular office hours.

Last fall, as an experiment, the chancellor asked most administrative offices on campus to remain open on Wednesdays. A majority of the offices reported little, if any, student traffic, so the offices have decided to discontinue the practice with the exception of the Nontraditional Office.

Director Martha St. Germaine says her staff can answer many of the questions people have about the university. If they don't have the information readily available, they will obtain it for the public. The office is located adjacent to the Materials Center, off the main lounge of the University Center. Further information may be obtained by calling (715) 346-3965.

A look at our SGA president
Student Profile

Contributor

Brenda Leahy is sitting with her legs underneath her, dressed casually in sweats and a sweatshirt, waiting for her laundry to get clean.

"When I first got here, I thought the (SGA) president was the best thing in the world. Now I realize that they're just like everyone else."

She knows from experience: one semester of being president of the Student Government Association (SGA) behind her. "I enjoy it a lot more than I thought. I thought it'd be tough to meet with all those administrators. But it's not, because they work for the students."

A native of Stevens Point, Brenda was "always involved in everything." She began work with SGA as a freshman and worked her way to President.

For her 20 hours of pay, Brenda says she actually spends about twice that time every week working. Besides her office hours, she attends faculty senate meetings, Hall Presidents Council, administrator and student committees, United Council one weekend a month, United Council Policy Board, Chancellor's Cabinet and meetings with the vice president of the University System.

She has helped set up social issue programs like the Exotic Dancers and Beyond the Dream (a program on racial awareness.) More recently, she was on the Chancellor Search and Screen staff, which she states she enjoyed very much. She says she "can't wait to work with (Keith Sanders); he's a great guy. I think he'll be good for the campus and the students."

"I wish more students would get involved. With over 150 organizations on campus, it's hard to see why students don't gain the experience while they're here."

Despite her experience in student government and a political science major, Brenda isn't quite sure what she wants to do after college. Right now she's more concerned with the upcoming budget talks. Her goal is to "make sure the student voice gets heard in every area." She wants the increases to be "minimal and justified."

"God, I sound like a politician don't I?" she asks somewhat worried. "That's scary." To rumors of Brenda's running for United Council President she replies, "I've been asked, but I'm not sure. Probably not. I'd have to take a year off."

Free time? "What free time? O.K. I guess I've been known to occasionally have a good time," she says with that smile in her eyes. "I like being busy," she says as she untucks her legs from under her and looks at the clock. The wash is definitely done.
Women's BB in close loss

By Karen Sonnenberg
Sports Reporter

The UWSP women's basketball team was in conference action last Saturday, as they battled UW-Stout and came up short with a 94-91 loss.

Excellent defense held both teams throughout the first half to within one point. Four passing and turnovers plagued Stout hit. Point was unable to use them to score, facilitating a 31 percent field goal average in the first half. Point trailed 29-19 going into the locker room at halftime.

Lady Pointer mistakes early in the second half allowed Stout to pull ahead. A three-pointer by Lady Blue Devil Lisa Blume, at 14:36, gave Stout a six-point edge. Two minutes later the Lady Pointers lost sight of Stout as they pulled ahead by 11 with a shooting average from the floor in the second half that left Point helped against Stout until the clock ran out.

Commenting on the game and the remainder of their season, Head Coach Ruth Anne Kaiser said, "We can only look ahead." Amy Felauer held honors for high scorer for the Lady Pointers with 19 and Barb Brunnette trailing with 18, eight of which were free throws. Lisa Blume and Cathy Orgar shared high rebound honors with 12 points each.

The Lady Pointers resume action this Friday at 7:00 in Berg Gymnasium.

STRIKING OUT

By Timothy A. Bishop
Sports Columnist

Members of the University of Oklahoma football team are facing charges again, and this time it's not the NCAA that's looking into their actions.

Since the end of the season, a number of the Sooners players have been charged with crimes by different police departments. Following Oklahoma's loss to Colorado in the Florida Citrus Bowl, several Sooners were charged with vandalizing several rooms of the hotel in which they were staying. Then, in January, one player was arrested for shooting another after a fight.

Several other players have run afoul of the law, and last week, four Sooners were charged with being in possession of cocaine by female student in an athletic dorm.

Tuesday, the Oklahoma program was dealt another serious legal blow when the Sooners' top quarterback was arrested for selling cocaine to an undercover police officer.

All of this, in addition to the team being put on probation for recruiting violations recently, has put all of Norman, Okla., on an uproar. The university and the team have been given a bad reputation from national champions to disgrace in only three short years.

The events have also cast a shadow of doubt on the abilities of Sooner Rich Barry Point as well as the policies of the Oklahoma Athletic Department, which has allowed athletes more freedom than other students.

University organizations are盼hing that athletic dorms follow the same rules as other residence halls. Other students living parking space are closely supervised by faculty and staff members, and security guards are prevalent in the buildings. But, for the athletes, they are put in special halls, with little supervision and security, leaving open the possibility of events such as last month's sexual assault.

As far as Coach Switzer, it appears that he has little control over his players. One of the jobs of the head coach, as well as the other players of the program, is to coach and be a role model for the athletic staff, is to see that the players make a transition to a college environment.

Men's basketball suffers losses to Eau Claire and La Crosse

by Kevin Crary
Sports Reporter

Whether it's school, work or maybe even a friend's house, most of us have some place we can call our home away from home. The UWSP men's basketball team has yet to find one.

The Pointers continued to struggle on the road as they lost at Eau Claire 96-90 Friday and at La Crosse 29-40 Saturday. The two losses dropped the Pointers' record to 5-12 overall, 24 in the conference. Point is 3-7 when playing away from home. The only two wins against Cardinal Stritch (Nov. 28) and Edgewood (Dec. 1), their first two away games of the season. The Pointers are 7-2 when playing at home.

Head Coach Bob Parker links this struggle to the inexperience of his team.

"We have a hard time playing at our opponent's gym due to our young team," said Parker. "We can't afford to get behind—especially when we are playing a team like Eau Claire.'

Point could only keep up with Eau Claire (ranked second in the NAIA) for six minutes before the Blugolds raced away from them.

After an 8-4 score in the early going of the game, Eau Claire used a 25-6 spurt to build a 14-point lead with seven minutes left in the first half. At intermission, the race was already decided, as the nationally-ranked team held a 27-point lead, 51-24.

"We got beat by a vastly superior team," stated Parker. "They have a number of experienced players, whereas we have the most inexperienced team in the league." Mike Lehmann and Scott Anderson led the Pointers with eight points each. Top rebounders were Lehmann with eight and Darin Brown with six.

"The Pointers couldn't seem to get over the hump in La Crosse. The game was a drabky battle in which Point found themselves falling behind and then having to play catch-up numerous times in the game."

Point's only lead came at the 11:47 mark in the first half when they went up 12-11 on a Chas Prachnichak basket. But six minutes later the Pointers were outscored 16-4, and down by nine.

Point battled back to within two, 27-25, on an 8-charge, before going down 33-27 at halftime.

It wasn't until 9:14 left in the game that the Pointers tied the score at 45 with an Anderson hoop. That was the last time Point would see over the hump as La Crosse piled up a nine-point lead, 58-50, with four minutes remaining.

The Indians would not score again but the hump was too steep for Point. They were unable to capitalize on free throw opportunities and fell 98-90.

Prachnichak had 13 points to lead Stevens Point, Anderson pitched in 12. Jim Rosmeyer of La Crosse led all scorers with 21.

Parker stresses attitude as an important factor in Point's loss in recent times.

"I still feel we are on the right track," said Parker. "It's just a matter of us mentally preparing ourselves for the game."

Parker admits that his team is in a "do or die" situation. In order for the Pointers to make the playoffs, they would probably have to win at least four
Striking Out

It is apparent that, while Switzer and his staff can mold an excellent football team, their abilities as off-the-field leaders leave much to be desired.

The behavioral problems of student-athletes is not something which is limited to Oklahoma. Many other major colleges have experienced problems with their players. Recently, the University of Tennessee has had players run into legal problems, and many other colleges have had players suffer from legal, drug and personal problems.

Crime ruined the Tulane University program several years ago when it was discovered that almost the entire team was involved in a point shaving scandal. And what about Len Bias, who has his entire promising basketball career as well as his life, snuffed out because of one evening playing with cocaine.

Drugs and other legal problems in sports are not limited to colleges either. For example, a promising football career was destroyed, and with it many young fans' admirations, when the Miami Dolphins' Mercury Morris was arrested for dealing drugs. And numerous other athletes have fallen into the trap of drugs, violence and gambling and had careers ruined.

And what about the Green Bay Packers' Money Cade, who spent time in prison after being convicted of sexual assault. If this trend continues, it will put a severe strain on the status of athletes as role models for America's youth. These players are in the limelight, and as those who look up to the successful for inspiration, what they will see is failure in the face of drugs and corruption.

Men's basketball

their next five remaining games.

Lehmann, the captain and lone senior of the team, agrees that attitude plays an important role in what's to come.

"We have to keep a positive attitude," said Lehmann. "We know that we can stay with anyone when we're playing well and within the system."

"We don't want to leave with a sour taste in our mouths," added the captain. "We want to have positive momentum at the end of this season that will carry us into next season."

Point will play host to River Falls and Superior Friday and Saturday at Quandt Fieldhouse—the Pointers' "Home Sweet Home."

Skaters lose in Alaska

ANCHORAGE, AK—The Pointer ice hockey lost 6-4 Tuesday night to NCAA Division I University of Alaska-Anchorage here.

The Pointers kept things close throughout the first to periods, with the game tied 3-3 at the second intermission.

The third period, however, belonged to Alaska, who scored two straight goals to take a 6-3 lead. Pointer freshman Tim Hale, however, got the last word as he scored his second goal of the night with less than one minute left in the game.

Pointer coach Mark Mazziotti felt that his team had a chance to win the game, but their own errors cost them.

"I thought we could have won," said coach Mazziotti in an interview with WMU's Brian Poulik. "We out-shot them and I thought we out worked them at times, but we had some mental mistakes that killed us, we just beat ourselves tonight."

The Pointers faced Anchorage again last night, and travel to Fairbanks for a two-game series this weekend. WMU is broadcasting all of the Pointer games in Alaska starting at 10:15 p.m.

Wisconsin forests suffering from waste

By Todd Stoehr
Outdoors writer

It's 1969 here in Stevens Point. A time when people worked hard for their money. A time when most men worked on the factory floor. I can just see it now, if I Peris rafting another load of logs down the Wisconsin River. Back then, wood was used for a variety of things and most of those uses are still used today. Pioneers harvested huge quantities of wood and they didn't worry about running out. Today, wood is a beautiful forest and I said, sure! He knew of a you going to walk from UWSP to the State mill. The quality of the paper is the same as virgin paper and we don't have to keep destroying our forests. The opportunity is there and you need to act upon it.

Every ton of paper crafted from recycled pulp, rather than trees, prevents 90 pounds of air pollutants from being pumped into the air. It also saves:

- Trees
- Three cubic yards of landfill space
- 200 kilowatts of energy (enough to power the average home for six months)

This data was taken from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Walking for the eagles

Outdoors Writer

How would you like to walk 300 miles? In 1982, a friend of mine asked me that question, and I said, sure! He knew of a group of people who were going to walk the floors of Wisconsin forests suffering from waste. The average day on the walk is 23 miles. I'm sure that doesn't sound like much. In fact, the average person should be able to walk that far. This trek is to get up the next day and do it again, and again, for nine days. We start at churches, by recycling paper, many of our natural resources can be preserved. One of the reasons why paper isn't being recycled as much is due to the market. There isn't a demand for recycled paper. Citizens and government must demand recycled paper. Once this happens, the market for recycled paper will go up and prices will go down. The quality of the paper is the same as virgin paper and we don't have to keep destroying our forests. The opportunity is there and you need to act upon it.

Not only do we as a society need to recycle but our federal government has to recycle as well. Two percent of all paper products produced in the U.S. is bought by the federal government. However, there is NO recycling program on Capitol Hill at all.

I tried to investigate (federally) recycling on one of our aids to Rep. Ed Roybal (D-CA). I found that there was no coordinated effort.

Observations on a winter road

Winter in Wisconsin brings a host of changes. You see people stripping their feet on their roast, in the snow. Since years, more than 80 people have participated in an Eagle Walk. Some have done more than one. My wife Cindy and I have walked in all years but will have to end the string this year. The eighth winter will set off from the University Center on St. Patricks Day, March 17, and end on March 20, 1987 miles of Wisconsin roads with the help of five, fifteen or so new people will know of the beauty of Wisconsin's nature.

And you see snowmobilers driving down the street. Now you may be thinking that snowmobiling is something you see in the fields and they are not supposed to be on the roads. That is not what I meant.

What I am talking about is a death to a hard-working, hardworking, covered with snow which they really appear as moving mobility is a good physical preparation or was wasn't. Mentally you see by looking at the other side of feelings, there's nothing more than a sustained physical effort to make you take a deep look inside and find out what isn't there.

For instance, paper, is seen energizing the air. You can't imagine that the U.S. has the strongest attitude for new legislation. They say electricity is seen wanning extremely dirty and when electricians went to the mill they asked me if I wanted to install these with the environment.
Prairie chicken land purchased serving chunks of land in their natural state. Many preservationists dot Wisconsin because of their work. Recent recipients of Eagle Walk funds have been the Ridge's Sanctuary in Door County and the Eagle Foundation.

Each walker is asked to acquire at least 200 acres of land. Some get much more. All money and the Eagle Ridges Sanctuary in Door County is a student group that crosses disciplinary lines in the UWSP Environmental Council, their environmental activities, drafting in students from more than one college. A check is then presented to that year's recipient by the council. More walkers are welcome and you don't have to be a member of the council. If you're interested, call Jay at 364-3991. There's still time to join!

As you walk across a state such as ours you begin to get a more human feel for dimensions. A mile on foot is very different from a mile by car. You may spend the entire day for a companion for hours rather than a minute. You've put one foot in a little over five hours. It's a human feeling for dimensions that year's winner needs.

The end of the walk is only a little more than a mile away. You'll have walked 16 miles. Tomorrow a bus will take us back to Stevens Point. Two hundred miles will be covered in a little over five hours. It's a rude return to the regular speed of our world, but how to avoid it?

Satisfaction comes from knowing that what you did will help, will make a difference. A piece of the natural world will benefit from your effort and comfort someone else in the future. So if someone asks if you'd like to Eagle Walk, just say sure!

Rhinelander-Governor Tommy Thompson has approved purchase of 7,396 acres in central Wisconsin that are critical to the protection of the threatened prairie chicken.

Governor Thompson asked the Department of Natural Resources' use of $1 million in land acquisition funds to buy the land from the Society of Tympanuchus Cupido Piniana (the bird's scientific name). No hunting and fishing license revenue will be used in the acquisition, department officials said.

The society agreed to sell the Adams and Portage County

The society agreed to sell the Adams and Portage County land below its appraised value of $2.1 million and $2.3 million with the understanding the DNR would manage the land for the benefit of the threatened prairie chicken.

"Prairie chickens are a majestic yet fragile part of Wisconsin's natural environment," Thompson said. "By protecting this land so critical to their survival, we are really making a gift to our children and their children."

Governor Thompson emphasized that in addition to protecting the land, the state was "getting a good deal" because of the society's agreement to pay below appraised value.

Another benefit is that the state will not have to spend money received from the sale on continuing efforts to protect the prairie chicken and other threatened and endangered species.

"I commend the society for its conservation spirit and pledge continued state management that insures the prairie chicken will be here for generations to come," Governor Thompson said.

In the Spring of 1979, the Wisconsin Hunters' Association enacted a resolution endorsing the hunting of prairie chickens. The state's commitment to the protection of the species has increased because of the 1982 hunting season. The state was able to sell timberland for $1.2 million to the federal government.

Lesson in Winter Survival

Winter survival tactics and an interpretive cross country ski tour will be held at UWSP's Treehaven Field Station near Tomahawk on Sunday, February 18.

"Beaver, Dogs, and Birds: A Lesson in Winter Survival" will give participants exposure to several forest communities through a cross country tour for skiers of moderate proficiency.

Offered as a family outing and guided by a naturalist, the tour is open to the general public. Participants are asked to dress warmly and provide their own ski equipment. Further information or registration materials may be obtained by contacting the Student Conservation Association, fore and other Natural Resources Agency, Travel, Food, and Lodging expenses are provided.

Good catches of crappies and walleyes are coming out of Rusk County lakes. When the weather improves, look for panfish action on inland lakes to gradually do the same on into March. Panfish and walleye fishing on the Petenwell Flowage and on river areas extending into the flowage are expected to improve. In the Wisconsin Rapids area, anglers who had removed their shanties from the ice because of deteriorating conditions are now returning to trail conditions are now returning with them. Shanty anglers are reminded to make sure their shacks are properly ventilated to avoid tragedies similar to the one in Manitowoc County recently that took the lives of four teens-aged. Along Lake Michigan, bitter cold accompanied by dangerous windchills is causing a dramatic drop in fishing pressure and putting fish off their feed for now. Ice is rapidly firming up and may allow ice fishing on areas that have been unsafe for much of the season. In Manistee County, Glen and Hilbert lakes and the Menominee River are producing some nice catches of northerns. Oconto County anglers are having their best success with panfish. Northerns are biting on Green Bay near Green Bay and Lake Michigan, and are providing most of the action on Shawano Lake. Despite the cold spell, ice conditions on Lake Winnebago were extremely poor at mid-week—large cracked areas of open water were hampering ice travel and were hampering ice travel and those venturing out should use extreme caution, especially with any vehicles. Fishing pressure is almost nonexistent, though some white bass and a few walleyes are being taken. Lake Butte des Morts and Lake Poygan are OK to travel on in selected areas and most other lakes are safe, but anglers are working hard just to catch a few perch. The sturgeon season opened February 11. Spearers are reminded that licenses must be purchased prior to opening day.

Fishing activity in the southern half of the state has slowed considerably, but should improve with warmer weather. Bluegill and crappie action has been really good at Yellowstone Lake in Lafayette County. Not many trout anglers are out.

Rental

Joe Swan. These houses are well maintained, and Mr. Swan has refurbished them with new siding. He also does the other things which are necessary to keep the property presentable.

"He and other landlords are careful to screen prospective tenants," Mayor Schultz added.

"This is not to be sneezed at, but rather to protect their property from undue damage."

One of the leading causes of problems between students and their landlords is that it is often the first time that these people have ever rented property. They are unaware about what to look for when they look at a place and they don't know how to go about making a complaint.

Peter Armstrong of the UWSP Office of Student life said there is very little the university can do to help the students in their search for a residence.

"Although we do act as a clearinghouse for information about what apartments and houses are available, there is not much else we can do," Armstrong said. "We do not inspect the properties that are listed with us and we have no enforcement powers."

"All we can do is tell them what is out there and give them a copy of our 'survival guide' which lists their rights and responsibilities as renters and what to look for in a prospective residence. Whether they use this information is solely up to them."

Mayor Schultz listed some of the most hazardous problems which students encounter.

"One of the most dangerous situations we have seen is in basement apartments," Schultz said. "The law states that there must be two exits from a residence, but this is often ignored. Recently there was a fire in a house which contained a basement apartment. If that resident had been asleep at the time, he would now be dead."

"Other common violations which lead to increased danger include stairways which do not have handrails and light bulbs which just hang from the wire. Also, it is a requirement that all bedrooms have at least one live electrical outlet."

Schultz said that recently Yokers had been issued a citation by the building inspector for violations which were uncovered when a review was conducted after the house was mentioned in an article in The Pointer.

"We are interested in the safety of the students who come here and we do what we can to see that the laws are enforced," said Schultz. "Due to manpower shortages, however, we are only able to inspect many of the buildings once in three years, but that does not mean that the students have to live in squalid conditions."

"When we do hear of a problem, our inspectors Don Bembelen and Brent Curless go and check things out. They were students here once and they don't like to see others go through the same thing."

Not to say that the landlord doesn't have expenses either. Based on a review of assessed records at the Portage County assessor's office, a current mortgage with First Financial of Stevens Point would require a monthly payment of approximately $250 a month. Including a property tax assessment of $1,300 and insurance at $1,000 a year (both also high for student housing, especially as some of these people carry little or no insurance themselves), his expenses work out to about $9,000 a year for maintenance, he still holds a profit of 60 percent.

"Not bad at all when a good investment will net you 10 or 15 percent."

The Forest Products Week Steering Committee has three criteria for those wanting to participate: plant a tree—of any kind or size; assist in tree planting (such as shoveling, watering); or participate in a tree planting activity, informational presentation or demonstration in your area.

Governor Thompson said he was particularly enthused about the potential to involve one million citizens because Forest Products Week includes Arbor Day on April 30. Governor Thompson added that the Forestry Council will work with the Arbor Day representatives to coordinate plans.

The Forest Products Week Steering Committee will prepare lists of suggested activities for those wishing to participate. Materials will be available in March through county agents or foresters of the Department of Natural Resources. Among the committee's scheduled activities is a symbolic tree planting involving public and private sector officials.
