UWSP discriminates in tutoring policies

By J. Patricks
Staff Writer

Many students in the past two weeks have found that they don't qualify to receive tutoring help, even though their roommate or classmate may have been accepted to receive help three weeks prior. They have become victims of discrimination.

This has caused a lot of bad feelings to develop from the students towards the tutoring center. The problem is...that is not where to place the blame.

According to Craig Schoenfeld, academic affairs director of SGA, the UWSP for some time has been unintentionally bending the rules without realizing it.

This has come about after a representative of the tutoring center asked Loretta Webster of the Cultural Diversity Program on campus for additional money for tutoring program since their office was getting swamped by students needing tutoring.

Webster did some research to try to find out how UWSP could receive more money from its Special Services for Disadvantaged Students (SSDS), grant which the university has received for around 15 years now.

In the course of the research, it was found that the university wasn't meeting the criteria set up by the grant. In other words any student that needed tutoring was getting it. The grant specified that certain criteria had to be met.

It was decided to adopt the criteria outlined by the grant in order to continue to receive it. Students that were allowed in before the change could continue to get help. From now on, all students must meet one of the following criteria:

Neither parent has graduated from college, they have a learning disability, they are a minority student (American Southeast Asian, Black, Native American or Hispanic).

In addition to this, foreign students or American students who don't meet these criteria will not be able to receive any tutoring.

According to Schoenfeld, these limitations don't eliminate as many of the students as one might think. "About 67% of the students at UWSP would still qualify for tutoring."

Therefore approximately 33% of the campus that may need tutoring are ineligible for discrimination reasons. Some students have made accusations of reverse discrimination. Students protest that this policy fosters the notion that they are intellectually inferior. The tutoring center is conducting an assessment, along with Schoenfeld, that would assess how many students really require the tutoring service. If this assessment shows that a high number of students need help, but no longer can get help, a proposal would be sent to Vice Chancellor Howard Thye, who would ask if other avenues of funding can be pursued. If a drawback to this is that any action taken wouldn't occur until well after the semester is underway. This would see some students having serious problems in passing classes because they weren't able to get the tutoring services which are now available only to a selective group.

The tutoring program allows a sense of urgency and thinks there is a need to help students now. He suggested that each department work to develop their own tutoring service immediately. This current semester is almost finished. If a proposal isn't on Vice Chancellor Thye's desk until February 1, then next semester too, will not have a structured tutoring program for those who may need it. But don't qualify.

The UWSP tutoring center suggested that the best thing for a student to do at this time if they are having difficulties in a particular class is to form a study group with members of that class. In addition to that, the Academic Achievement Center, which houses the Writing and Reading Labs, offers general program tutoring for such classes as Psychology.

Supreme Court Justice Bablitch offers advice

By Elizabeth Luders
Staff Writer

The annual fall lecture presented by the Academy of Letters and Science was given this year by Justice William Bablitch, who visited the UWSP campus on Thursday, Oct. 26.

Bablitch was born a few blocks from campus and attended UWSP from 1959 to 1962. He graduated from UW-Madison Law School in 1967, then served until 1972 as Portage County District Attorney. He was elected to the Wisconsin State Senate in 1972, he became Majority Leader of the Senate in 1976 until 1982. In 1983 Bablitch was elected to the Wisconsin Supreme Court.

"It is with a great deal of feeling I come back to Stevens Point," he said in the beginning of his lecture, entitled "Now That You've Got It, What Is The World Are You Going To Do With It?", given at 7:30 p.m. in 101 Collins Classroom Center.

According to Bablitch, the title of his lecture came from a conversation he had with his father two months before his college graduation. His father asked him, "Now that you've got it [a college education], what are you going to do with it?" Young Bablitch thought it would be the ticket for a job. Later, he learned that "being effective involves a lot more than learning legal mechanisms. It involves understanding people, group dynamics." This idea of the importance of understanding and interacting with people in every aspect of life, and the impact of a liberal arts education on that interaction, was what he lectured mainly dealt with. He used examples from his personal life and role as Justice, pointing out six principles of working with people, called "Bablitch's Rules of Human Behavior."

He went on to talk about individual abilities being important for effective interaction with others. "One person can't afford to feel is yourself... You need to know what your strengths are, and what your weaknesses are. By knowing yourself, you're able to set your priorities straight...

The time spent in blaming others would be much more useful looking inward. "When talking about his position on the Wisconsin Supreme Court, Bablitch stated, "We'll be able to decide cases live in a very unreal world... The only criticism you get is when you forget to take the garbage out. When criticism doesn't come, you become intolerable to it." Also, the hardest thing about being a judge is "the inability to define myself," and that "people are afraid to talk to me. I can't discuss court cases outside of court."
First million-dollar year for student employment

An office at UWSP matching students seeking jobs with area employers seeking part-time workers has logged its first million-dollar year. UWSS announced it has collected information from participating employers who paid $1,002,920 in salaries to 661 students for the fiscal year that ended June 30. Helen Van Prooyen, who directs the Student Employment Office, said the income was even larger because some companies declined disclosing financial information to the university.

"Seven years ago when we opened the Student Employment Office on the strength of the (federally-funded) Job Location and Development Program funding, we never dreamed of this kind of success. But we were proud of a first year showing of $36,000, which in itself exceeded the federal requirements," Van Prooyen informed colleagues in a recent memo.

Participating employers range from individual homeowners to managers of some of the area's larger companies. The Student Employment Office includes the Employment Office and the Career Development Office.

UWSP employed at least 1,020 persons who worked at least $400,000. Additionally, Sentry paid at least $260,000 during the same period.

Many of the employers are especially appreciative of the special skills possessed by students, Van Prooyen said.

Currently, her office is helping Figi, Inc. of Marshfield recruit 600 seasonal employees for positions locally. The Student Employment Office, located in the lower level of the Park Student Services Center, maintains records on computers, and new programs are making it possible to quickly match the qualifications of workers with requests from employers.

Veterans Day celebration scheduled at UWSP

Veterans Day will be observed at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point campus with a Raymond Specht Memorial Forum, as known as the Sandlot, located between the Fine Arts Building and the Learning Resources Center. The program will begin at 11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 11.

Lt. Colonel Roy A. Yenchesky, commander of the Reserve Officer Training Corps at UWSP will give the keynote address. He will be provided a gun salute, with a bugler playing taps. Following the ceremony, a luncheon will be provided at a nominal cost in the courtyard Stevens, Point, with the proceeds being used as a fund raiser for the Portage County Historical Society.

An office at UWSP matched the one million dollars in income recorded during the one million dollar year.

Anents, American Legion, Disabled American Veterans, Gold Star mother, Veterans of Foreign Wars of Stevens Point and the Vietnam Veterans of America. They will participate in a joint effort with the R.O.T.C. unit of UWSP. The American Legion rifle squad will be providing a gun salute, with a bugler playing taps. Following the ceremony, a luncheon will be provided at a nominal cost in the courtyard of the Fine Arts Building.

The Firsts Brigade band of Milwaukee, will perform from 12:30-3:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Building, a civil war sentinel with authentic civil war musical instruments. They will also perform at Bernard's Continental Restaurant in Stevens Point from 8-12 p.m. with proceeds being used as a fund raiser for the Portage County Historical Society. Tickets are available at the following locations: Book World, Bank of Plover, Park Ridge Pharmacy, Fowers' Pharmacy and the Portage County Veterans Service Office.

On Sunday, Nov. 12, the Firsts Brigade band will perform at St. Paul's Methodist Church, Stevens Point, at 10:30 a.m. Area veterans organizations and military units will participate in 'VETERANS DAY IN THE MALL' from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. with information about joining an area veterans organization and veterans benefit displays.

PRSSA convention held

By Catherine Bush

The Dallas Park Plaza Hotel was the site of the "Bright Lights in the Big City" Public Relations Students Society of America's national convention.

The convention, featuring conference sessions, workshops, luncheons and social functions, was held October 21-25. Stevens Point students participated in the first three days of activities, PRSSA, the society for professionals in public relations, invited students to participate in their convention October 23-25.

Pat Gaffney, Michele Marver, and Ross Schirmer represented the Stevens Point chapter of PRSSA.

Michele Marver, vice-president, mentioned some of the highlights of the "Bright Lights in the Big City" 1989 convention. She enjoyed the opening keynote speech by Chuck Hartlage, National Chairman of the convention.

"He spoke very honestly on the PR job market and said that only the motivated and hard workers will succeed," she said.

Hartlage advised students who do not enjoy writing to choose a career other than public relations. Other advantageous activities included the Deep in the Heart of Texas opening reception and the Texas Fiesta. The Texas Fiesta gave participants a chance to mingle with other PR students while sampling a taste of Tex-Mex cuisine.

Participants learned of upcoming trends in the field of public relations through speeches by successful professionals. For example, keynote speakers informed students of the increased role public relations students play in environmental concerns. Other sessions dealt with using the print media for promotions, how the travel and tourism industry has become a big area for public relations practitioners and sessions on how to improve personal, particular chapter of PRSSA.

Forum features arctic experience

Experience the Arctic explorer, William Volkert. Volkert will be presenting his slide presentation, "Arctic Spring: The Land Beyond the Arctic Circle," on the UWSP campus, Wednesday, Nov. 8, at 7 p.m. in the Science Building.

The material for Mr. Volkert's program was gathered during his most recent expedition to the eastern Canadian Arctic. 500 miles from the North Pole. From early June to July, 1988, Mr. Volkert observed the abundant bird, seal, walrus, narwhal and polar bear. He spent ten days alone on Bylot Island photographing the glaciated landscape and the summer nesting birds. Near the end of his excursion, Volkert camped near Pond Inlet, an Inuit community which revealed how the people adapt to living in such a demanding climate.

Volkert is currently the Wildlife and Ice Age Naturalist for the Horizon area, working through the Bureau of Wildlife Management. He attended the UW-Superior and Madison and has studied wildlife ecology. He has been involved in numerous field studies involving plant ecology and glacial geology.

Anyone interested is encouraged to attend the program.

Nightmare on Highway 10
by Blair Cleary
Editor-in-Chief

Last weekend I had the opportunity to head home. You remember home don’t you? It’s the place where food still tastes good and classes seem, even if only for a few days, comfortably far off. This not about home, however. Rather, this is a gripe about one of the many obstacles between here and home. That hell called Highway 10.

Yes, Highway 10, that secret shortcut from Milwaukee (and Illinois) to the north woods that everyone seems to know about. A major artery in the Wisconsin highway system. Yet for some unknown reason its only two lanes! When one drives home via Highway 10, toward the east and Appleton, one combines aspects of the Indy 500, the final battle in the movies Star Wars, and the stress of mid-terms on one hand, with an 1850’s wagon train, a snail race, and the stress of mid-terms on the other. This is before you add in such factors as bad road conditions, night driving and dangerous intersections.

When a driver gets on Highway 10 he or she will find that there are those types of drivers. There is the slow driver, the guy driving the dump truck or tractor who just can’t get the old vehicle over 40 mph. This type of driver must have some repressed childhood desire to lead a parade, because that is what he does every time he goes out on the road. This driver usually ends up in front of you. Don’t try to pass him, with all of the curves, hills and traffic volume you have less than a 5% chance per mile of safely succeeding.

A second type of driver has a sleek, high-performance car and seems to always be late for something. He will tailgate anything going less than 70 mph and has super bright headlights that refocus to hit almost any rear view mirror. He will sprint his car around you to pass even if the great grandfather of all 18-wheel trucks is coming toward you in the other lane. This maniac will invariably end up behind you.

The third type of driver is the king of the road. These people drive the fast 18-wheel trucks. This group by and large is pretty courteous toward the average driver but still tends to tailgate people when they end up behind a driver who isn’t going the speed limit. The problem is when they tailgate you because the driver in front of you doesn’t feel like going above 40 and you can’t pass because one of the truck’s brothers is always coming in the other lane when you get the chance. These drivers would almost be tolerable if it wasn’t for the poor road conditions. I think many of these sections haven’t seen a repair crew in years. On one section of the road they had replaced only the part of the lanes where the skid usually went. The middle third of each lane wasn’t touched.

I find myself wondering about those politicians who crashed our right to drink at 19 under the weak justification that the federal government will withhold highway funds if they didn’t. Our rights are now gone and a major central Wisconsin highway still hasn’t seen the benefits of improvement.

Putting some money into making Highway 10 four lanes would solve most of its problems. I hope our local politicians get on the ball or this will have been for nothing. I think its only fair they keep their side of the bargain.
Jack the unfair

I was strongly dismayed to read Jack Nettie’s article on the Truth About Rock semi-weekly. It becomes very obvious from the beginning that Jack went to the seminary with a preconceived notion. He didn’t come with an open mind, but rather had preconceived things to rip on that contradicted his beliefs. It’s shame, today, to realize people still hold bigoted attitudes for certain beliefs—especially saying this, because I know what its like to be in Jack’s shoes, I’ve been made more sense to use page 5’s filler space for the ‘Take Back the Night’ article high-lighting an action students could take as a measure of protest against sexual assault, and isn’t it coincidental that the KEKE-Barred Rele’ or ‘True West’? I’m not suggesting, by any means, that these actions are valueless and need be completely removed, rather, placed elsewhere for a more continuous and thus, more effective and permanent response. Please, Pointer Staff, let’s use it a bit more common sense next time.

Thank you, Jennifer Smith

Wildfire danger remains

Rhinelander, Wi-Dry, driftless terrain is terrain that can easily be used to describe the fields and forests of much of north central Wisconsin.

The dry conditions being experienced for this fall are a continuation of a trend of below normal precipitation that has extended over three years. What this means, says Jim Miller, DNR North Central District Forest Fire Program Supervisor, is that "forest fire hazards will arrive earlier than normal in the spring and linger longer than usual in the fall." Already this fall, Miller points out, "we have had to respond to a number of forest and grass fires around the North Central District. I am afraid that unless people use extreme care with fire this fall, we will be involved in a great many more fires."

Miller reminds that burning permits are required for outdoor burning of yard debris and trash. A burning permit is free.

"Make sure," says Miller, "that your campfire is out, and dead. Ensure in preparing your fire ring, you scrape down to the mineral soil to prevent fire from getting out of hand."

Annually, Wisconsin averages about 2,000 forest fires a year. Last year, record drought sparked 3,200 fires. In 1989, a year that is proving to be even drier than 1988 in some locations, about 2,000 fires have already occurred. Officials estimate it will take two or three years of average or above average precipitation to recharge the soil and groundwater to normal levels.

Schmeeckle buck bagged in Dewey

It's uncommon, according to wildlife researchers, for deer to go more than several miles away from their home range. But a six-point buck from the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point was an exception.

Myron Slikerz, 4388 Highway 66, shot the animal with a bow and arrow last week on private land in the Dewey Marsh, off Oriole Lane, about 10 miles north of campus.

Last February the deer had been captured and tagged as a fawn in the Schmeeckle Reserve. It was one of about 35 deer and it believed to spend much of the year in the reserve.

Doug Stephens, Poiria, IL, and Dave Beckmann, Coon Rapids, Minn., are student members of the UWS chapter of the Wildlife Society who are involved in a project monitoring Schmeeckle's deer population.

They put tiny radio collars on some of the deer they capture, tag and release. Then they monitor the whereabouts of the deer. Most stay in or very near to the reserve, they report.

Hunting is not allowed in Schmeeckle in part because it is within the city limits. However, the population numbers have been largely affected by deer-car collisions on the reserve.

Michigan Avenue, Highway 51 or North Point Drive.

Density of the deer population is a problem in Schmeeckle, and it is complicated each November when any member of the animal packs in particular, find refuge in the reserve during the gun hunting season.

Wildlife Society members on campus have been conducting the deer project in Schmeeckle for three years.

Sometimes our efforts to save one fuel or replace it with another can have unintended effects. Brazil began a campaign in the early 1980s to replace its oil with soy. The campaign has tripled in the last 15 years and pollution is so bad that people are debilitated by heavy carbon monoxide and lead poisoning in the air. The government of Egypt still refuses to recognize a formal Green Party. Greenpeace is a publication calling for such an act and they quote the 5,000 year old Book Of The Dead that says one's eternal fate is sealed by answering two questions: "Did you ever pollute the river Nile or cut down a fruitful tree?"

As reported recently in Eco-Briefs there have been forest fires in Israel, probably set by political combatants. The Mount Carmel National Forest in Israel lost 2,000 acres which destroyed 80% of the reserve's natural and planted woodlands. In addition, 20 rare animals were killed and nine people were injured. The planting of trees and care of woodlands is extremely important in Israel and this is seen as "the biggest ecological tragedy" to strike the Jewish state.

As if we needed more radiation stories...Scotland has a publication called SCRAM, the journal of the Scottish Campaign to Resist the Atomic Menace. The acronym SCRAM also refers to the fast emergency shutdown of a nuclear reactor. Researchers report that more than 3,000 golfballs have been irradiated at the request of golfers. They say the treated balls bound further. With golf near to being Scotland's national game who knows what's next?

A nuclear accident at the Sellafield plant in Cumbria County in northwestern England now ranks just behind Chernobyl in the annals of nuclear disasters. Information released under the 30-year rule shows a 1958 cover-up by Britain's conservative government. The magazine Irish Life reports that there was a sharp, unexplained increase in leukemia cases and the birth of a large number of Downs Syndrome babies in County Lough, East Ireland shortly after. County Lough is just across the Irish Sea from Cumbria.

Current events also deal with Sellafield. Britain's New Statesman magazine had a two page ad recently which called for the prevention of the Greenhouse Effect also known as global warming. It called for public efforts to slow down the Effect. The ad was placed by British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. (BNF) and at the end of the ad the solution to Greenhouse warming was found to be nuclear power! BNF operates the Sellafield plant and is now using fire for dumping plutonium into the Irish Sea since 1952. Greenpeace has challenged the British to clean up 1,200 miles of plutonium-polluted sea bottom.

Many people have taken to activism to stop ecological abuses. One way you can act is to mail the styrofoam you found at McDonald's to its corporate headquarters. Mr. Shelby Yarrow, VP for Environmental Affairs at One McDonalds Plaza, Oak Brook, IL 06021 is the recipient of such mailings. You will get back a form letter with this proviso at the bottom: "This stationery is manufactured with recycled paper. Was yours?"

If mailing that stuff to McDonalds isn't for you you can collect it and send for Utility Bills Update #206. This little publication can be had for $1 from James Dulley, Journal Newspapers, 6906 Royal Green Drive, Cincinnati, Ohio 45244. It will tell you how to build a box required for out door burning of yard debris and trash. A burning permit is free.

"Make sure," says Miller, "that your campfire is out, and dead. Ensure in preparing your fire ring, you scrape down to the mineral soil to prevent fire from getting out of hand.

Another piece of information is the Citizen's Clearinghouse for Hazardous Wastes Inc., PO Box 926, Arlington, VA 22216.

A voluntary Green Tax is proposed to help hand ecologically helpful initiatives. This tax has been advocated by the Seventh Generation Catalog and Acorn Designs, both companies dedicated to environmentally responsible products. Monies collected would go to a Green Fund and be administered by the companies and others with 50% going to environmental education such as tree planting and 50% going to environmental education and nonviolent direct action. The American Water Resources Association has given its affiliate at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point the Outstanding Student Chapter Award for 1989.

The recognition cited the unit that has been most active in advancing water resources knowledge in its respective chapter, state and section.

Tim Gehring, who is president of the student group here, accepted a plaque at the AWRA annual convention in Tampa, Fla. Gehring was joined at the ceremony by the UWSP faculty advisor, Professor Earl Spangenberg, and fellow chapter officers Mike Wenholz, vice president; Mark Kaszak, secretary; Steven Karklins, treasurer; and members Ed Belmonte, Woodstock, Ill., and Peter Molling, Milwaukee.

Editorial: Lakeshore development decreases lake quality

by Brian Leahy

Outdoors Editor

The lakes of northern Wisconsin have experienced many changes in their collective histories.

They were originally carved out of the landscape by glaciers over 10,000 years ago. Then fish and other aquatic life populated their depths. Pines grew large along their shores. Native Americans paddled canoes across these waters and ate from the bounty of fish and wild rice they offered. Then came settlers and trappers. First they were trappers, fur trappers and missionaries. Later they were lumber barons and loggers.

The lumber barons saw the woods surrounding these lakes as sources of immense profit. The pines were cut down. Only the best logs went to the mill. The rest were left to rot. It was not a pretty sight.

In time the cutover areas healed and large pines returned. These scenic lakes were trappers, fur traders and missionaries. Later they were lumber barons and loggers.

In time the cutover areas healed and large pines returned. These scenic lakes are seen as sources of profit. This time it is not lumber barons but rather developers, real estate agents and condo builders. Lake property is being bought and houses built at a quick rate.

Lakes are becoming ringed with cottages and some now resemble Venice, Italy more than the pristine natural areas they once were.

In trying to 'get away from it all', lakes are being transformed into subdivisions. People are trying to get away from the hustle and bustle of city life. First they were trappers, fur trappers and missionaries. Later they were lumber barons and loggers.

In time the cutover areas healed and large pines returned. These scenic lakes are seen as sources of profit. This time it is not lumber barons but rather developers, real estate agents and condo builders. Lake property is being bought and houses built at a quick rate.

Lakes are becoming ringed with cottages and some now resemble Venice, Italy more than the pristine natural areas they once were.

In trying to 'get away from it all', lakes are being transformed into subdivisions. People are trying to get away from the hustle and bustle of city life. First they were trappers, fur trappers and missionaries. Later they were lumber barons and loggers.
Who are the Jacobins?

By Sandra Volkman
Features Contributor

The Jacobins is a new student organization on the UWSP campus. It is a student advocacy group whose purpose is, according to Elliott Madison, a.k.a. Father Patriot, "to be a forum of action and discussion. We're the fraternity of all students."

The Jacobins was founded last April by Madison, James O'Donell, and Dave Cherney in response to the uncorroborated editions of The Pointer and accusations of student apathy by SGA. They feel that both organizations misrepresented the students and wondered, reflected Madison, "What would happen if we got together a group of people whose sole purpose is to stand up for the students? Would the students be apathetic or would they be action oriented? I think we've gotten a very action-oriented group. I would argue that we've gotten more done than any other group on campus."

Madison continued, "We do a lot of behind the scenes work. He contended that they try to work with the administration, "But they know if we can't get things done that way we drag them into the public light. We bring them into the scrutiny of the students. In fact, that's the way it should be in a college. We pay all their salaries."

The name "Jacobins" comes from the French Revolution, as does Father Patriot's costume. Madison responded, "We're very flamboyant. We're a new group for one thing, so we needed something to get our name out."

The Jacobins have a multimedia approach; they have a newsletter, a weekly talk show on SVO, and radio slots. And they have a sense of humor. Madison explained, "One of the things the Jacobins stress is why not be fun? If you're going to have to protest something why not do something that is fun?"

Membership to the Jacobins is open to all students. Madison reported, "We have a fluid membership. I would say there are 20 core members but it is really a lot of people identified with us. So a lot of people identified themselves with the Jacobins."

Madison said, "We live on the feedback of others." Their newsletter is handed out in person so that people are able to ask questions and talk about issues.

The title of Father or Mother Patriot is synonymous to president. According to the Jacobins' Constitution, the position of Father or Mother Patriot is held for a one-year term. Madison indicated that there would be a coronation in the spring for passing of the French Napoleon coat, which has become a Jacobin trademark, to his successor.

University Chamber Players to perform tonight

The University Chamber Players, a faculty performing group, will play at 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 2, at the UH in the Stevens Point Campus Center. Admission at the door of Michaelson Hall, Fine Arts Center, is $2.50 for the public, $2.50 for senior citizens and $1.50 for UW-SP students and youth. Proceeds benefit the music department's scholarship fund.

The players specialize in performing music for a variety of instrumental and vocal combinations not often heard in the concert hall. The repertoire is eclectic, with works drawn from the Baroque period to the present day.

Habitat for Humanity highlighted

By Tony Gindt
Features Contributor

The local chapter of Habitat for Humanity has "built" quite a reputation in the Stevens Point area.

Central Wisconsin Habitat for Humanity has completed construction of its first house. The house is located at the corner of Dixon and Gilkay streets in Stevens Point. This is the first Habitat project in Portage County.

Habitat for Humanity is a nonprofit, international organization dedicated to building quality, affordable housing for people in need. Habitat uses donated money and materials along with volunteer labor to keep costs low. They then sell the homes at no interest to families too poor to acquire bank loans. The families that live in the homes must help build their own home as well as other Habitat projects.

Lauri Rockman, president of Central Wisconsin Habitat for Humanity, pointed out that the mission of Habitat for Humanity is to "afford people the opportunity to become homeowners."

Editorial: The real world, limited space versus unlimited copy

By Mary Kay Smith
Features Editor

This week I received a rash of complaints from various campus organizations. It seems that there are a few general misgivings and held about The Pointer. The first being that whatever is submitted to us, we are obliged to print. The second being that The Pointer is, rather than a student newspaper, a PR machine dedicated to devoting space for free advertising.

The UWSP campus is a diverse body, encompassing many interests and events. The Pointer tries to accommodate as many of these as possible in a 16 to 20 page publication.

When I print something in the Features section, I ask myself three questions. One, is it timely, that is when will or did it occur? Two, is it of general interest to the student body? And three, in the case that more than one article containing the same information is submitted, how much space does this event have the right to occupy, and will it crowd out other important information?

In a few instances this year, The Pointer has been critical for donating less space to an event than the organization sponsoring the event saw fit. Unfortunately, The Pointer has only so much space for articles each week. We are governed by the same financial limitations as many publications, that is our advertising goes by our page number rather than the actual number of words we wish to print.

Therefore, when I print at least one article on each event I feel is timely and of general interest to the student body, I feel satisfied that I have fulfilled the goals set up for my section this year.

In a perfect world, The Pointer would be able to dictate the number of pages we use each week. The amount of information we wish to supply to the public, but this just isn’t so.

Amnesty International: a light in the darkness

By Brian Koller
Features Contributor

Early last semester a group of students from UWSP got together and decided they wanted to make a difference. They felt that no matter how small their contribution was it was the contribution that mattered. Thus, was the beginning of the Amnesty International chapter here at UWSP.

The Amnesty International chapter on campus is one of many such chapters spread throughout the United States and the world. The purpose of Amnesty International is to secure the release of all prisoners of conscience, and torture of all people without bias to culture, creed, or political orientation. This organization feels that every person has the right to be treated with respect to humanity.

No government is safe from the wrath of the members of Amnesty who wage their war through the power of the pen and public information. When the members of Amnesty get set out to petition a government for the release of wrongfully held prisoners, by flooding the leaders of these countries with letters asking for the release of their prisoners, their efforts are often obtained.

However, the chapter on campus is young and inexperienced so if you would like to become involved there is plenty of room for you and any ideas you might be able to bring along.

Becoming a member of Amnesty means that you are part of the solution to a world full of injustices. In a world full of the darkness of apartheid, executions, and.fielded human beings being wrongfully held against their will, every little light in the darkness matters. It is only through enough light that the darkness will be forever extinguished.

The next meeting of Amnesty International, UWSP, will be held November 8. Please check the Daily for the room and time.

Job recruiters on campus

Review Shocker

Okay kids, I'm back. It's been three weeks since I last saw myself in print, so I hope all's well. I've been reading that when you're short, we've been outta room vertiging, so I hope y'all enjoy the weeks we've been three weeks with our heads up. This week we'll take ourselves into the twisted mind of Wes Craven for yet another one of his dream flicks.

Wes Craven, as you might recall, is the man who has given us Freddy and all of his re-carnations. Seen as how Wes has this bad habit of sideways the same movie over and over again, I'll only be wrin this column once and rerun it when Shocker Nos. 2-34 come out over the next few years. In short, Freddy was born of his dream killer, his dream killer, and his cop dad who's been wasted. 'Course, this is all true. Horace really screwed up though, when he wastes Johnny's family. Unfortunately, Horace forgot to get everyone. He left Johnny alive, and his cop dad who's been trying to catch Horace.

Just like Freddy, Horace can't be killed, cause he ain't alive no more. But we know better, don't we kids? I know, I saw it splashed 'cross the Cinemaxplex screen just like you did. Horace bought the big one in the end, killed by Johnny with the TV remote, but he'll be back. Y'wess, Horace gets juiced up on electricity and sneaks around inside folks TV sets. Y'all might be asking yourselves though, 'how'd he get this way?' Simple. The folks at the big house made the mistake of tryin to 'electrocute Horace. Horace spends the first part of the flick killin everyone he gets his hands on. Horace plays with cats. Horace brings new meaning to the word psychopath. But most of all, Horace don't like Johnny. Typical for Wes Craven, Johnny is a College Jock who has had dreams bout his family and other folks gettin wanted. 'Course, this is all true. Horace really screwed up though, when he wastes Johnny's family. Unfortunately, Horace forgot to get everyone. He left Johnny alive, and his cop dad who's been trying to catch Horace.

Best of all, Johnny and Daddy were there.

Daddy: Don't worry son, he'll fry for this. Johnny: I wanna see him die. Daddy: I'll get us box seats.

Bad move Dad, when they juiced Horace, he got out through the folks bodies. In one delightful little scene, Horace and Johnny are chasing each other through the town park, with Horace changin bodies every few yards. I think he goes through somethin like six bodies in one chase scene. It's worth it just to see what happens when he gets into the body of a five year old little girl in pony tails.

Wes is havin a bit of a prob with his dialogue, though. He pretty much gave all of his best lines to Freddy. The beat that Horace can handle is, "No more Mr. Nice Guy!" And Lordy, he says it at least half a dozen times in the flick. We get the picture, Wes. In the end though, he got somethin like 15 stiffs, no tits, one tub o' blood, and about four minus-kitted kitty cats. We also got some back of clowns playin the leads and LSD guru Dr. Timothy Leary playin a bit part as a TV preacher. Almost 3 stars, not quite 2 1/2, though. See y'all next week, I hope.

More on Student Conduct

As I read about a student's concerns with Student Conduct, I brought back many awful memories of my past. Some time ago, I also was accused of a crime I did not commit. I was found guilty and punished before I even had a chance to state my side. Student Conduct did not care that I was with two RA's at the time of the crime. Student Conduct proceed to kick me out of school. After retaining a lawyer and spending hundreds of dollars to prove the case wrong, Student Conduct allowed me back at UWS but still invoked severe punishments against me. After proving them wrong, they still said I was GUILTY. After my experience and your letter, I guess it only goes to show that Student Conduct is GOD. They can ignore valid evidence and believe the work of a liar.

Pointer defense grounds Falcons

by Steve Rehbe

Saturday's WUSC main event featured two of the top offensive machines in the conference, pitting the high powered aerial attack of UW-Stevens Point against the crashing running offense of UW-River Falls.

A game that seemed to contain all the ingredients for a high scoring showdown, quickly turned into a test of wills, characterized by two stubborn defensive units.

When the smoke finally cleared, Stevens Point emerged with a 21-13 victory, improving their conference record to 4-1-1 and 6-1-2 overall.

The game marked the first conference loss for River Falls, dropping them to 3-1-0 in the WUSC and 2-0-2 on the season.

"We executed all phases of the game very well," said Head Coach John Koch. "Our special teams and defensive unit generated a lot of big returns and forced four punter misplacements throughout the game."

Coach Miech cited the defensive play as key to the team's upset victory over the NAIA third ranked Falcons.

The 'Angry Dog' defense held the nation's top ranked rushing offense, which had averaged over 37 points and 430 yards per game, to only 13 points and 319 yards on 64 carries.

"We knew our defensive responsibilities for River Falls very early in the week," stated

Schoch, Lasecki lead way at conference

by Tom Woyte

There is never a dull moment for the UW-Stevens Point men and women cross country runners. The men and women took to the hills of the Stevens Point Country Club golf course on Saturday, October 26th for the WUSC and WWIAC Conference Championships.

In the women's race, the Pointers ran a strong team effort to place third. Oshkosh won the meet with 19 points, followed by LaCrosse (67) and Stevens Point close behind (77).

"I can't say enough about the team effort," Coach Lea Hill said. "Each person on the team had a great race. We knew we could score if we worked as a team." I was extremely pleased that we finished only ten points behind LaCrosse as they are our excellent team, ranked 5th in the nation.

Schoch led the field throughout much of the race, but was supplanted (18:53 to 18:12) by Cathy Vandermark rounding the final corner.

"I've never felt better," Schoch said, 'I know I had to pull away earlier but she wouldn't let me. She (Vandermark) is really tough."

"Jenny was the one responsible for the fast leader pace," Coach Hill said. "We were hoping that a fast pace might take away from Vandermark or whoever might be with the leader."

Schoch's second overall finish, a personal best performance, was fast enough to better the existing course record.

Lady Kickers finish successful season

by Jeremy Schabow

The UWSP Women's Soccer team's season has finally come to a close once again. What a terrific season it was though!

With excellent guidance and perseverance from Head Coach Sheila Miech, the athletes traveled on the road of success with an occasional bump or two. This past weekend they played their last two games.

On Friday, Point亞h维持了 Wheaton, Illinois, batting them for victory with the outcome in the Lady Kickers' favor. Not a single point was ever obtained by their opponents as the final score stood at 3-0.

Lynn Olson scored two and Aimee Jerman the other. Assists go to Olsen, Maureen Flynn, and Barb Updegrove.

The Lady Kickers had 27 shots on their goal, while Wheaton had 17. Goalie Lisa Mortenson showed her skill by making 12 saves.

Coach Miech commented, "The weekend started off on a positive note, beating Wheaton 3-0. We were plagued by numerous injuries for the first time all year, which called for a lot of help from our entire team! It was great to see players come off the bench and play so well. We played with continuous intensity and came out on the winning side of this game."

The following day put UWSP against Lake Forest. Although the game was extremely close, the Lady Kickers could not pull it off and lost by only one point, 2-1.

Olsen kicked the lone goal and Updegrove made the assist. UWSP had 29 shots on their challenger's goal, while Lake Forest had 14. Mortenson saved 14.

"Our game against Lake Forest was a difficult one to prepare for with injuries being more intense that day," stated Miech. "The team played hard, but it wasn't the same intensity we had played with the day before. We had opportunities to score and made a couple costly mistakes on defense."

The Lady Kickers' final record was 14-5-1 and finished sixth in the NCAA West Region rankings.

"All in all, I am very proud of this group of young athletes," said Miech. "Their unity and commitment to keep on playing better and better throughout the season is commendable. Although we did not get a play-off berth, we have a lot of things to be proud of. Mainly that every single one of our team goals were met!"

Coach Miech and the Lady Kickers would like to thank Coach Mark Henderson for his enthusiasm and help throughout the entire season.

Men's soccer returns to NCCSA national tourney

by J. Patricks

The UWSP Men's Soccer Club picked up two 'wins' this weekend, which qualified them for the National Collegiate Club Soccer Association (NCCSA), National Tournament. November 10-12 in Lawrence, KS.

- The Pointers got credit for two wins when both Winona State and UW-River Falls failed to field a team for UWSP's respective games with them. The 'wins' weren't enjoyed, however, by the team. 'It's a habit we'll just have to get a way,' said Pointer tri-captain Tim Foye. 'Both of the teams were beatable, but a team likes to prove that on the field.'

Either way, UWSP now has just under a week to prepare for their second appearance in the NCCSA National Tournament. Last season, the Pointers qualified as a 'wild card,' and wound up taking 5th place. They lost to the eventual champion University of Illinois, 1-0.

For this year's tournament, UWSP would be taking its strongest team ever, providing that several key players can come off injuries and play. Starters Mike Harbot and LaCrosse's Kristin have both been out for over two weeks with a deep abdominal muscle tear and ankle injury respectively.

"I think the fact that we will be the smallest school will help us more than anything," said Pointer tri-captain John Clark. "It becomes a matter of pride. When you know that everyone expects you to lose, you play even harder. It's that kind of an I'll show you attitude."

Stevens Point will carry a second place finish in the NISC, with a 6-1 conference record and an 14-6 record overall, into the tournament.

Their first game will be on Friday, Nov. 10, with two more on Saturday. The Pointers will advance to the finals, scheduled for Sunday, November 12.
Defending national champs take to ice

The Pointer Hockey team will begin their 1989-90 season on Friday and Saturday evening against the Mankato State Mavericks. The hockey team's quest for another National Championship.

The hockey team has been going through five weeks of boot camp to prepare for their NCHA rivals. In the last meeting between these two teams, the Pointers won two games to play off series. Over the last ten meetings, the Pointers hold a 8-1-1 record. Although the Pointers hold a substantial lead in wins over the last ten games, six of those games have been one goal victories for the Pointers. Thus, this weekend series could be very exciting match-up and a great way to open the season.

This weekend will also be the first game of the newly renovated K.B. Willett Arena. The Pointers will be waiting for our student body to voice their approval of the 1989-90 Pointer Hockey team. Along with this new feature, the hockey team will boost their band which has been practicing for weeks. All these attractions will make it a must show for students on Friday and Saturday nights.

Both games will start at 7:30 p.m. and all students with sports passes gain free admission.

Point gets nod in preseason poll

UW-Stevens Point, the defending NCAA Division III and Northern Collegiate Hockey Association champions, has been tabbed to win their second consecutive league title by a poll of the league's coaches.

UWSP totaled 66-1 points in the poll and were followed by UW-Eau Claire (36-5), UW-Oshkosh (35-5), Bemidji State (31-5), Mankato State (22), UW-Superior (17), and St. Scholastica (7).

The Pointers who went 34-3-1 last year in capturing their first national title, had a 19-1-1 NCHA regular season mark in 88-89, UW-Eau Claire, 15-1-5 overall and 11-6-3 NCHA last year, and Bemidji State, 19-3-2 overall and 11-3-2 both made it to the NCAA Division III tournament last year. UW-River Falls, who went 13-12-3 overall but was ineligible for the league title last year, features the only new face among the upper echelon of teams.

Mankato State was fourth in the league standings last year with a 6-9-3 mark and were 13-3-4 overall. UW-Superior was fifth in league play a year ago with a 6-14-0 record and were 11-16-1 overall. St. Scholastica finished sixth in league play with a 1-18-1 record and were 3-24-1 overall.

The 1989-90 NCHA season gets underway on Nov. 3 when Mankato is at UW-Stevens Point, and St. Scholastica is at UW-Superior.

UW Eau Claire will be the first league team to compete this year, however, when they open their season at UA-archeage on Oct. 27 and 28. The Blugolds will also face UA-Fairbank on Oct. 30 and 31 prior to coming home.

Lady Netters finish season in consolation
by Kevin Crary
Sports Editor

If it's a consolation, the Lady Pointers did very well at the WWAAC Tennis Championships held in Madison last weekend.

"I was very pleased with our play," said Head Coach Nancy Page. "We had tough draws in the singles, but in spite of first round losses, almost everyone came back to win the consolation championships.

And that bodes well as freshmen Kim Toyma, Tammy Jandrey, Tammy Creed, and Katie Imig all won their respective consolation flights. Each consolation championship was worth fifth place and gives the team three points, on a seven point scale. Junior Chris Dierd lost the consolation championship in her flight and senior Jane Sanderfoot lost in the first round of consolation play.

Coach Page noted that Creed and Toyma defeated opponents that they had previously lost to during the season, and Jandrey, after almost winning her first match, had very decisive wins in the consolation bracket.

The Lady Pointers came up with their fifth consolation championship last weekend when the doubles team of Toyma/Linda Tomshak took first place in Flight #1. And things would only get better as the teams of Dierd/Jennie Corde, and Copeland Menomonee would finally get Point out of the consolation mode.

But the Lady Pointers had a tough opening match but bounced back to defeat Eau Claire in the consolation, a team that they lost to twice in three sets during the season," said Page. "Chris and Jennie really clicked at #2 doubles. They played a tough Whitewater team in the second round and lost, but were very strong in winning third.

The real pleasant surprise was the play of Jamie and Tammy (Creed) at #3 doubles. They took the fourth seeded team in straight sets (in the first round) and then had a barnburner against Eau Claire before winning the match on a tie breaker in the third set (round two)."

Creed/Sensen then lost in the championship round and finished second for six team points.

The Lady Pointers' performance moved them up one spot to sixth place in the final conference standings. Dual meets counted for one-third of the standings, the conference meet filled the other two-thirds. This improvement pleased Coach Page.

"For a predominately freshmen team this year, we really came on strong at the end," said Page. "Their improvement over the season was tremendous, they learned to use patience in addition to power. We ended on a very high note."

The meet also ended two Lady Pointer careers. "Linda (Tomshak) and Jane (Sanderfoot) closed out their collegiate careers, and we will miss their leadership and steady play," noted Page.

INTRAMURAL NOTES

Editorial

Last time I looked, intramurals was not a varsity sport at UWSP. I always thought intramurals were played for the fun of it. I referree volleyball one night a week and it can either put me in a great mood or just the opposite. When you "ref" a team that complains and whines at every call that's not in their favor, that "tickles me off." I would love to say to them; "If you're so incredibly great, why aren't you on the varsity volleyball team?"

Competition is great, but when you complain about the little trivial calls, you are getting really technical. Most teams I "ref" are super, they just want to play volleyball and have fun in the process. When the teams are having a good time, I'm having a good time and I enjoy watching them play.

If everyone was at the same skill level and knew all the rules, refereeing would be fun—instead of a job. Teams should understand, sometimes you never played volleyball before, this is something new.

We all try to do our best and to enjoy the game; I'm just the arbitrator not the enemy.

All opinions are welcome. Please, however, include name to insure that your opinion gets printed.
