

SGA elections set for March

by Jodi Ott
Staff Writer

Student Government Association elections will be held March 13 and 14. All students are encouraged to vote.

Brenda Leahy and Tracy Tophoven will be vacating the positions of president and vice-president. Candidates for the next academic year are James O'Donnell, Elliot Madison, and Craig Schoenfeld.

Madison is an Anthropology major with minors in Religious Studies, Psychology, and Sociology. He is from Wausau. Schoenfeld has a double major in Political Science and Communication with a Business Administration minor. He is from Beaver Dam.

Madison has picked a goat as a running mate. "I picked it to represent how useless the vice-president position is," said Madison, "you're going to vote for me, not my running mate so I picked a ridiculous running mate."

Schoenfeld has chosen Steve Schuetz as his vice-president candidate. Schuetz is a Communication major with a History minor from Kenosha.

Madison has been a member of various groups including the Young Democrats in Wausau. He also was co-founder of the Jacobins, a student advocacy group on campus. He has attended SGA meetings weekly and worked with students and the community on student advocacy.

He has played a role in getting students allowed to voice their opinion at SGA meetings. He was also active in getting the LAQ task force set up.

Schoenfeld is currently SGA Academic Affairs Director and is serving as a State Staff member. He is also the Public Relations Director of UAB and the Account Executive of PRSSA. He is a member of Sigma Tau Gamma and previously was president of Burroughs Hall. Last year, he served as a COFAC senator.

Schuetz is president of UAB and is involved with ACT.

Madison says the biggest problem facing UWSP is the reforming of SGA so students don't feel isolated from it.

If elected he would like to fight for a cultural diversity program that works.

"I think the Senate was very anti-cultural diversity," said Madison.

Madison also would like to relax impeachment rules so students have the power to fire. He would like to see the power decentralized by removing the paid salaries of the Executive Board.

SGA to debate voting poll move

by Molly Bernas
News Editor

A resolution concerning placing voting polls in the UWSP University Center is one of the highlights of tonight's SGA agenda.

This resolution authored by student senator Andy Witt and co-sponsored by Legislative Affairs Director Ann Moran and student senators Lynn Rosnow, Pat Militzer, and Fred Oehler is an attempt at improving the poor voting record students have garnered in the past.

"This is very important to students of the university," said Witt. "We have the right to vote and we're (as a group) not taking advantage of it."

The idea behind the resolution is to change the location of the voting booth for the 3rd ward in the city of Stevens Point. Currently it is located at Emerson Elementary School. Witt's proposition is to move its location to the Program Banquet Room of the UC.

Witt developed this notion from information gathered by SGA polls conducted at the last checkpoint session. According to Witt many students didn't vote because they weren't aware of where they could vote. The 3rd city ward includes most of Clark, Portage, Main, and College streets and also encompasses two of the residence halls, Neale and Hanson.

Last year SGA and the Legislative Affairs committee tried to improve voting attendance by furnishing vans which ran from the UC to Emerson, but it wasn't as successful as it was hoped to be.

"There are more than 160,000 students in the UW System," said Witt. "We have a bigger voice than people think and it's time we used it. We can change things such as tuition increases, drinking age, education funding, and environmental policies."

Stevens Point Mayor Scott

Schultz is supportive of this proposed resolution and so is Bob Bush, building manager of the UC.

Witt's resolution that will come before the student senate meeting tonight states reasons for action. These include: the high concentration of students residing in the 3rd ward boundaries, access to the polls being a major consideration of whether a student will vote or not. The UC being closer to the student population than is the elementary school, and finally the UC offer handicapped access for individuals, which the elementary school does not.

This resolution calls for action by the students. It promotes that SGA ask the University Center Policy Board (UCPB) work with the City Clerk and that the City Clerk is formally requested by the SGA to consider relocation of the polling place to the University.

Also on tonight's agenda is a resolution for the SGA to formally request that the university administration look into a feasibility study regarding construction of a parking structure on the campus.

All students are welcome to attend this student senate meeting tonight beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Wisconsin Room of the UC.

City hikes fines for drinking violation

by Greg Lavin
Staff Writer

If you are under 21 and thinking about trying to change your I.D., buy an altered one or try to use someone else's, the Stevens Point Police Department says, "Think Again."

The Stevens Point Common Council passed an ordinance on February 19 that updates the city's schedule of cash deposits for underage alcohol offenses. The reason for the increase in penalties and bond amounts was to stay in conformity with recently enacted state laws.

The first major change in city ordinance was that of underage violations for attempting to obtain alcohol, attempting to enter, entering, or loitering on licensed premises.

Misrepresenting of age is also included under the same ordinance.

For these violations, a first offense citation will be written for $336, formerly a $72 forfeiture. For second offense the fine will be $396, formerly a $108 forfeiture and a third offense citation will be issued for $636, formerly a $156 fine. In all cases the judge may reserve the right to impose a monetary penalty of up to $636, even for the first offense. In accordance with this new ordinance the drivers license and work program penalties that the judge may impose have not been changed.

For the first offense the drivers license may be suspended for a period no less than 30 days and no longer than 90 days. There will be an automatic suspension for one year for a second offense and a two year revocation for the third offense.

The second area of major change is for I.D. card violations. This includes unlawful carrying, making, altering, duplicating, obtaining and the providing of false identification. For this offense, persons age 18-20 face a citation of $276 and following offenses will be tiered up to $500. This fine was formerly tiered in increments of $72, $108 and $156. For persons age 21 or over, the fine has not changed from its original $336 forfeiture.

There has been no change in the penalties for people under the age of 21 for possession or consumption of an alcoholic beverage. The citations remain: $72 first offense, $108 for second and $156 for the third. Drivers' license and work program penalties may still be imposed by the judge.

Persons age 18 and over must pay court costs and other mandate assessments. These will be tacked on to the initial fine, for example, an offense with a forfeiture of $250 carries court costs and assessments of $86. The total monetary penalty would be $336.

Staff

Deaver to speak on campus Monday

Michael Deaver, former Deputy White House Chief of Staff from 1981-1985 and assistant to former President Ronald Reagan, will be featured at 8 p.m. Monday, March 5, in the Program Banquet Room of the University Center.

Deaver's speech is part of a month-long project, a series on alcohol in our society, sponsored and coordinated by the Department of Student Life.

Deaver is slated to discuss his days as a member of the Reagan Administration, his views about overcoming the obstacles of alcoholism and stress and also discuss public relations and communication issues.

The program is free to all students, faculty and staff of the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point, with an ID. There is a $2 charge to the general public.

Deaver was campaigning for Ronald Reagan during Reagan's bid for the Governorship of California. Deaver began as a field organizer for the state party and later worked as an aide to Reagan's chief of staff.

In 1975, Deaver formed his own public relations firm before becoming Reagan's White House Chief of Staff in 1980.

According to an article in Time Magazine, his anecdotes about the President and First Lady are a definite highlight of his speech.

"Behind the Scenes" is the title of Deaver's first-hand account of the triumphs and disasters of the Reagan presidency.

Recently, Deaver received adverse publicity for forming Michael K. Deaver & Associates, a business who's objective, Deaver defines, was to "help people through the Washington maze." Critics blasted him for using his intimate knowledge of the way things happen for his own personal benefits.

Michael K. Deaver & Associates was very successful but attacked by Congress and media who accused him of "selling his influence in the White House" for enormous sums of money.

WWSP prepares for Trivia '90

Eleven months have passed since the 20th annual WWSP trivia contest, which means only one thing; there's only one month left to prepare for Trivia 2190.

This year's contest, which will run from April 6-8, has been dubbed "Earth Games are Easy." The 54-hour contest also claims to be the world's largest trivia contest.

Centralized at WWSP 90FM, the university radio station, the annual contest is in its 21st year and every year it grows in popularity. Each team is dedicated to contributing hours of intellect, awareness and competitiveness to the ability to quickly research answers to questions as soon as they are asked.

Each team receives points for every correct answer they give. To win the game, all you need to do is collect more points than any other team.

Roughly 430 questions are developed by the all-knowing Oz. Not the actual Wizard of Oz, but Jim Oliva, local businessman and D.J. Oz is the nickname traditionally given to the Trivia curator.

SGA debate open to all next Wednesday

The SGA presidential candidates' debate held on Wednesday, February 28, in the Yellow Room of the Debot Center was open only to those students with meal plans or who purchased a meal. Their next debate, however, will be open to all students. It will be held next Wednesday, March 7, at 12 noon in the University Center Encore Room.

Readjustments outlined for financial aid

by Julia Melk
Staff Writer

There have been no significant cuts in the money available for the various financial aid programs for the 1990-91 academic year. However, in terms of funding, there will be adjustments to the Pell Grant schedule, which will result in a reduction to some select students. Unless the Congress appropriates more money to the Pell Grant program, the program will not be considered fully funded and cuts may possibly run as high as $250. Paul Watson, the Associate Director of FinancialAid, says that "as far as the rest of the students programs, we don't expect any other significant reductions."

According to last year's records, 4236 UWSP students received aid, including loans. The majority of students who receive some form of aid are still considered 'dependent.' However, most of the time it is beneficial to be an 'independent' student. Independent students generally receive better aid offers allowing more money available for financing their education. It is not easy to make the change to being an independent student. There are conditions to be met, including:

1. Not claimed on parents' taxes for the last two years.
2. Be able to prove at least a $4000 income for each of the two years prior to when you, the student, first received aid.
3. Veterans and students 24 years old and older are automatically considered independent.
4. Married students and/or students with dependents (other than spouses) are considered independent.

Work/study monies have not been either increased or decreased, however, they are being carefully rationed by the Financial Aid Office. With the increase of minimum wage pay to $3.85/hour, it appears as though there will be less dollars available for work/study programs.

Loans, like work/study, are determined by the Financial Aid Office, depending on the student's financial need as determined by the Student Aid Report. Many students finance their education through loans. Not many years ago any student was able to get a loan, but that isn't so today.

Now is the time to file for financial aid for the 90-91 academic year. The financial aid forms can be picked up from the Financial Aid Office in the Student Service building. The form is essentially the same, except this year's form has the blank for the signature located

PRSSA students attend conference

by Cathy Busch
Contributor

Eight UWSP students attended the Public Relations Student Society of America (PRSSA) Midwest Conference on February 23-25. The conference was held at the Southern University of Illinois at Carbondale. Over 200 public relations students from seven states took part in the "Celebrate the Experience" conference. Guest speakers discussed the topics such as planning special events to ideas on how to land that first job.

Professor Sam Black, former president of the International Public Relations Association, was the keynote speaker at the Midwest conference. Black is distinguished as the first professor of public relations in the United Kingdom. He offered insight to students and professionals from his forty years of experience in international public relations.

The conference was also an opportunity to recognize student efforts in public relations. Catherine Busch, vice-president of the Stevens Point chapter, was honored for her outstanding contributions to the chapter. Awards were decided by judges from PRSA (the organization for professionals in public relations) on the basis of submitted samples of their work and nomination letters.

The PRSSA Midwest District Conference was a valuable experience because it allowed students to network with others in their field and it offered practical advice about careers in public relations. Several UWSP members plan to attend the PRSSA national conference in New York in November.

EDITORIAL

The real world needs Craig Schoenfeld

by Blair Cleary
Editor-in-Chief

The story so far...

Student Government, SGA, announced that it was time for its yearly elections for presidential and senatorial position. For any number of reasons, more students took out applications for the positions than ever before. The Pointer, looking at the applications for these positions, found that many of them were filled out as if by people who felt the whole election was a joke. "The applications are ridiculous so the answers will be equally ridiculous" said Elliott Madison in his letter to the editor.

Last Thursday Madison invited SGA senators as well as the Pointer's Editor-in-Chief to a debate on Roger Bullis' show, "Talk Back." Since neither group took him up on his offer he said to the world, via the Jacobin, his little newsletter, that we, as student advocates, didn't want to discuss the real issues.

This week the Jacobin candidate, Elliott Madison, and the Y.A.M. (Y.A.M. standing for nothing in particular) candidate James O'Donnell wrote a letter to the Pointer calling me a player of "popular politics" and a "clouder of the election with non-issues."

Also, Wednesday in the Jacobin newsletter, Madison, the "Father Patriot" of the Jacobins, said that he "hoped in the remaining weeks the Pointer and candidates will begin to deal with the real issues instead of wasting paper and time on promises and useless editorials written by humorless whelps."

Which brings us to the present...

First of all, it seems very strange that Madison, is trying to sell himself to the voters as a "great man of the issues," who is "above petty name calling." This, in the same article in which he called me a "humorless whelp?"

Now, if he wants a reason for my not appearing with him on the "Talk Back" TV show, I have several. First of all, he came to me about 40 minutes before the show was to be taped. Even if I hadn't had a Japanese History mid-term the next day I wouldn't have gone on any TV debate without a few hours of study on the topics to be discussed. People who don't do this look like real dopes when they try to go head to head with people who really know the issues. (The topic being Madison's presidential platform.)

Also, I was on Madison's Jacobin talk show and I don't trust the journalistic integrity of someone who asks questions like "will the Pointer continue it's tradition of yellow journalism." I had no desire to submit myself to another "session" with Madison, especially with no preparation time.

Secondly, anyone who read the senate applications will note that these answers will be published before the student body. Knowing this, I feel that the answers on these applications are one valid way to gauge the seriousness of the candidates. As anyone who read last week's editorial knows, Madison and O'Donnell had very unprofessional answers.

Getting on to the "issues" these people crave so much; the only issue they brought up was the idea that every Student should decide how their small part of the segregated fee will be spent. Not a bad concept if you suspend reality. In the real world the senate, not the president, distributes student money to student organizations. O'Donnell said that if the senate didn't go with his platform he would resign. Madison admitted during the debate that the number of Jacobins running for senate would not constitute a majority. Well, you need a majority to make a sweeping financial change as he plans.

Schoenfeld, on the other hand, sees SGA as more than a group of students who give out student money. He brought up that SGA is a resource to student organizations and even help create them. He talked of how SGA helps to lobby for UWSP students in Madison and even Washington D.C. Schoenfeld also brought up how SGA gives the students representation on university committees that decide such things as curriculum and policy. Without SGA these committees would consist of no students and the faculty would decide such matters without such inconveniences as student input.

Although Madison had a few good ideas and attitudes, overall, Craig Schoenfeld is the student's best choice for president and the Pointer lends him our endorsement.

Presidential candidates speak out

Dear Editor,

It has become obvious the Pointer, along with Sen. Hauck, has decided to cloud the campaign with non-issues. Because we believe, as we've always believed, that students are only capable of making informed decisions when they are informed of the issues. We do not believe there should be any kind of application for running for a student office. The thought that one needs references (apparently for the S.G.A.) to run is ridiculous. Because the application is ridiculous, the answers will be equally as ridiculous. The real issue is not how we dress, nor our references. It relies totally on fiscal responsibility. The people running for office have divided on this most important issue. One group believes that S.G.A. should run as it always has, allowing 30 students to allocate $600,000 of student monies. The Jacobins believe that majority of student money should be in the direct control of the students who pay the bill. We propose to allow students to allocate 60% of their segregated fees directly to the organizations of their choice, via scantron sheets passed out at checkpoint. The Y.A.M. party believes students should have complete say on not only where the fees are allocated, but whether they are allocated at all. As one can easily see, there are many important issues affecting the students in this election. Unfortunately, Sen. Hauck and Blair Cleary have decided to overlook the real issues and play popular politics, we urge responsible students to get the information about the issues. This can be done by attending one of the many debate and public forums held during the next few weeks prior to the elections.

More on Hauck

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Senator Andy Hauck's letter in the February 22 issue of the "Pointer." As a member of both S.G.A. and the Jacobins, I agree with Andy Hauck in principle: the students should have the facts, and should make for themselves decisions which affect their careers as students. I disagree, however, with several of the points made in his letter.

First-of all, if the students want the truth, they should have

A final bit on evaluations

Dear Editor,

In response to Aundrea Haye's "Should students have this power?" and Kathy Neuenfeld's "I PRAISE these evaluations," I think some important issues have been mixed up with personal feelings. This might often be the case with some student evaluations. Now I am not putting down anyone's intelligence, but I feel that sometimes students let personal conflicts reflect on teacher evaluations. I agree with Aundrea that many students may take these evaluations lightly. Some faculty let personal conflicts influence grades, but I am sure that the great majority grade students fairly and objectively. If it were otherwise, I am sure many students would be voicing their opinions. Obviously students had to participate in the evaluation of faculty - we pay for our education - but there needs to be a distinction between subjective and objective critique. I am sure some students don't realize the impact these evaluations may have.

Miss Neuenfeld states that "students don't seem to have much control over administrative decisions." Students do have power, many just don't realize what is available to them. This is why we have student government and student organizations. I am a representative on a student advisory board for the Division of Fashion and Interior Design. Our department wants student representatives at faculty meeting and they WANT feedback from us. I'm sure many other departments on campus have similar arrangements. They may not always do everything we ask, but they know where we, as students, stand. The power struggle isn't as great as some think.

Miss Neuenfeld thinks Aundrea Hayes "would like to censor the student voice, so that no feelings would get hurt." I think that Aundrea felt that faculty might only get hurt in the case of personal conflict. Even in this situation, only if the conflict is inhibiting your education should it be put on an evaluation. Otherwise, personal conflicts should be handled as that, IN PERSON.

Miss Neuenfeld states, "I disagree that students are here to adapt to a teaching style. True, every instructor teaches differently and we must 'adjust' to that style. However if 90% of the class can't comprehend the material and they are trying, then there is a problem." First, if there are problems with coursework, the student should approach the instructor with problems. Maybe 90% of the class hasn't taken the initiative to ask questions - or read material before a lecture - or approached an instructor one on one with a problem (or what about approaching the 10% who are understanding the material). Instructors that I have approached have been more than willing to re-explain course work and answer questions. I don't think the instructor's ability to teach are limited to the classroom. It's called communication - and if after attempting to communicate better, there still are problems understanding material, then students should think about writing the problems on evaluations. Instructors can't make students learn.

As far as adapting to a teaching style, I agree. There are 13,000 students and 1,000 faculty. I think it is pretty self-centered for students to expect faculty to adapt to us. After graduation, you won't get far if you expect the world to adapt to you. College is a means of gaining a broader education, and I think students would benefit most by adapting to teaching styles.

Students have input for faculty, the evaluations and student organizations. Don't give them more. I had the same instructor Aundrea Hayes had - an excellent instructor - who will be dismissed after May, partly because of poor evaluations. The University has no one specifically hired for this vacant position. As a result, all the classes this instructor taught may be cancelled for fall if no replacement is found. And there is no guarantee that a replacement will match the quality of this lost faculty member - Poor planning - Great way to upgrade the quality of our education, huh, Kathy?

Benefest '90

To the Editor:

Yearly, more than 30 families of Portage County take shelter in parks, cars or public facilities, and 1,200 families are at risk every day of losing their homes. Nationwide, 12 percent of the population, along with 25% of preschoolers live under conditions of poverty. The growing concern for the homeless around the nation, as well as in Portage County, has prompted the University Activities Board (UAB) to create BENEFEST. BENEFEST is a one-day entertainment festival used to promote awareness of a problem in our world today. BENEFEST is committed to bringing awareness and financial support to a chosen cause. This year, the BENEFEST committee has chosen the homeless issue, their purpose: to raise awareness at UWSP and in the community of Stevens Point of the homeless situation both nationally and locally, and support the attempt to solve it. Operation Bootstrap and CAP Services will be represented at the festival.

BENEFEST is currently seeking student and organizational volunteers to help defray costs involved, as well as help tasks that will need to be accomplished before or during the day of the event. If you feel you or your organization can contribute any talents, leg-work, resources, etc., to this event, the BENEFEST committee would be very appreciative and happy to have you as part of BENEFEST '90!! UAB and the BENEFEST committee recognize and acknowledge the many talents and contributions of the students of the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point. If you are at all interested in being involved in BENEFEST as an individual or organization, contact Tamie Paquet, chairperson of BENEFEST, by calling 346-2421. We invite you to join us at our weekly meeting starting Sunday, March 4, in the Communication Room of the University Center at 6 p.m. We hope you will join us in this effort to raise awareness of the increasing problem in our community and nation. This is our chance to help...

Sincerely,
Tamie Paquet
BENEFEST chairperson

Vote, and get involved

Dear Editor:

Okay, students, let us get some things straight. Last year around this time I attempted to stir you all to the great duty of voting. I obviously didn't have much success because a very small number of you actually did (and those of you who didn't just complained about the outcomes). This year, I am going to motivate you to get involved.

As you know, this year is one of the major election years; we get to elect our new Governor. As the campus coordinator for the Democratic candidate, Tom Loftus, I urge you to do the following:

1. Research ALL candidates
2. Listen to debates

3. Write to candidates
4. Get information from the local CR's and YD's
5. Spread the word, talk to friends
6. Volunteer for a candidate
7. Take advantage of opportunities (in other words, when they are on campus go talk to them)
8. VOTE!!

As future leaders, it is our responsibility to be well informed and to get involved in our government. Getting involved could be as simple as writing an editorial, a letter to a candidate, or VOTING; or as complicated as running a campaign. Either way, at least you are getting involved and making a difference in the outcome. And with that, there is personal satisfaction knowing you were key to this candidate's success. If all students at least VOTED we could elect our own representatives without the community's help. For example, a couple years ago a student ran for alderman of the third ward here. He only lost by 75 VOTES. Two residence halls were in his district, and if at least two more floors of residents would have voted, he would have easily won. We would have had better representation on our city government. THINK ABOUT IT. Students do have impact. So think about the impact YOU CAN MAKE, and think about it seriously because the shape of Wisconsin politics can completely change, but YOU MUST VOTE IN ORDER FOR THIS TO HAPPEN.

If you really want to stir things up, STUDENTS FOR LOFTUS is currently being organized and could use your help. It'll be an experience you won't regret. But if this isn't for you, that's okay, because more than wanting your help, I WANT YOU TO VOTE AND GET INVOLVED.

Sincerely,
Lynn S. Rosenow

Catch more walleyes by jigging

by Ken Jackson
Contributor

Most of what you see in the ice fisherman is the burning desire to try what has been successful in the past. Turning this hearty breed on to something new is an extremely difficult task. I know it was for me. My philosophy was to put out three tip-ups and wait for a flag. Not so anymore.

It all started last summer when I was muskie fishing with a fellow by the name of Pete Geiss. In our conversation, the subject of ice fishing came up. "Caught quite a few last year," I recalled. "I murdered em'; even threw a few 2 and 3 pounders back," Pete boasted. "Wait a minute", I said. "You mean to tell me you were throwing back several walleyes 23 and 24 inches long back?" I questioned. Pete countered with, "Hell yes! You can't keep more than five right?"

I figured that it was easy to brag about how great an ice fisherman you are when its 80 degrees outside in the middle of August. So when first ice rolled around in November, I talked to Pete again. "Anything over six pounds yet?" I asked. "Naw, just the basic 20 inchers," Pete muttered. I had to give in. "OK Pete I can't stand to listen to your smug little fish stories. How do you do it?"

After seeing me squirm he had the satisfaction he wanted and let me in on his big walleye secret. It was no more than a basic jigging rapala.

The more I thought about it the more it made sense. When a school of walleyes moves in, the minnow you put on your tip-up is darn likely to start playing possum. You see it all the time when muskie fishing. A muskie will not hit a lure stopped dead in the water. I've seen muskies cruising through weed beds and when bluegills or crappies pick up his signal they simply freeze. Its a natural defense system of predator-prey survival. A constantly moving jig offers a lively meal that is a lot more noticeable.

This theory was reinforced the first time I used this rapala. I had my two Beaver Dams in with golden shiners bout three inches long. I was jigging no more than 20 feet from one of my Beaver Dams when I felt a thump on the rapala. Whap! Up came a 15-inch walleye. The tip ups were still sleeping. Two minutes later I yanked up another walleye. This one was a fat 19 inch. Hey, this jigging stuff is fun, I thought. Just then a flag went up. Ha! I laughed. Here comes my trusty tip-up walleyes. My golden tidbit produced a 32-inch northern pike. Hmhmhmhm, they hit dead smelt, don't they? Back to the jig.

It was a jigging rapala party for me that day. My first limit of walleyes (5) since first ice. I left that lake a little smarter that day.

This little jigging adventure made me think back to the days in my ice fishing past when tip-ups did extremely well. If I had a jig pole with me, what would the results have been? If this particular day I told you about is any indication, it would have been more productive.

For the jigging rapala to work properly, a couple of simple guidelines should be followed.

LINE CONNECTION—

The rapala should be attached with a loop knot up from the lure about two inches. This allows the lure to hang at about a 30 degree angle with the head up. If you have seen baitfish in tanks or underwater, this is the pose they strike when feeding on zooplankton. The jigging action simulates inattentive meal feeding and not paying attention to predators near by. In short, this jig looks like a dead duck. By tying the proper knot, you are able to simulate this most effectively.

JIGGING MOTION—

The proper motion is to hold the jig about 12 inches off the bottom. Then, quickly jig the rod upward about a foot and a half and return the rod tip back down to its origin. When doing this you will see the line move to the perimeter of the hole. When the jig goes down, the line will slowly creep its way back to the center of the hole. When you see the line doing this, your jig is working properly. This is the swimming action that is provided by the two tail fins when it gets jigged.

ECO-BRIEFS

by Timothy Byers
Staff Writer

Did any of you see the TBS special "If Dolphins Could Talk" last Sunday night? It was an excellent special, one of the acclaimed National Audubon Society series. Michael Douglas narrated this story about dolphins and deadly interactions with man.

It was appropriate that the special was on this past week. Just a few days before the Environmental Educators and Naturalists Association (EENA) held a regular monthly meeting with a program on dolphins as an important feature.

EENA member and CNR graduate student Suzanne Trapp showed pictures and related her experiences at Dolphins Plus in Florida. She also warned us about the dangers that face dolphins and other marine mammals from human fishing activities. Dolphins Plus is a place where humans learn about dolphins.

Trapp and husband Paul were actually able to swim with these intelligent, curious creatures at the facility. Trapp was quick to point out that the dolphins are not "trained" at this place. They are able to swim to open water, but so far they have returned to the compound. The swimming was not cheap either, in time or money.

Trapp said the facilitators at Dolphins Plus spend at least an lowed to enter the water. They are looking for aggressive individuals who would not mesh with the gentle sea animals. This preparation is important, according to the facilitators, so that the entire experience is positive for human and dolphin.

Trapp's photos of swimming with the dolphins looked exciting. She told of their brushes near your body. She explained that this was a way the dolphins "smelled" you or, more accurately, got a fix on your physical makeup. The power of the animals was apparent as was their restraint and grace in your presence, said Trapp.

The disturbing part of the message in Trapp's program and on the TBS special was the fact of dolphins being killed by a variety of man's activities. Purse seine fishing for yellowfin tuna is one of these atrocities. In the central Pacific off South America, for reasons as yet unknown, tuna and dolphin swim together albeit at different levels in the sea. The dolphins are near the surface and the tuna are down below.

Fishermen noticed this and in the 1960s began to "set on dolphins" to catch tuna. What this means is the fishermen spread a large net called a purse seine that closes at the bottom around the dolphins and the tuna. The net is winched up and the tuna are caught but so are the dolphins. They are air-breathers like us. When they tangle in the net they drown. Sometimes they are crushed when pulled through power blocks or simply die of fright and shock from the experience. Over 6 million dolphins have been killed since the 1960s because of this method.

Not all tuna is caught "on dolphin," but the problem is knowing what tuna to buy. Package labeling is not yet an answer. There is no way to tell if the tuna were caught in-nets that kill dolphins or if they were caught some other way as packaging exists now.

That could change if a California legislator has her way. Barbara Boxer (D) has introduced HR 2926 in the House of Representatives. This bill would require a "clear, legible, and conspicuous label" with the following warning: "The contents of this product have been captured with technologies that are known to kill dolphins."

Other consumer actions are working. These actions are usually boycotts of all tuna products with a message for the producers: "clean up your act." Tuna packing companies have noted a decline in sales in the past year. School children are asking their districts and lunch programs to remove tuna from the menu and have successfully done so in some areas.

What can you do? You can stop buying tuna until you know the way it was caught did not kill intelligent, social dolphins. You can tell the store manager or buyer why you are not buying tuna anymore. Ask food preparers where you eat to not make tuna dishes anymore and tell them why. If you don't eat it they won't prepare it. This type of pressure will work and will make the catching of tuna safer for dolphins.

You could also write Congressman Gerry Studds, Chair of the House Subcommittee on Wildlife, Conservation, and the Environment, Washington, D.C. 20240. Thank him for supporting stronger legislation such as the Boxer bill, HR 2926, and to press for its passage.

Estimates are that over 25,000 dolphins are killed each year during the tuna fishing season. This is down from the annual 200,000 kills in the 1960s but is still too many. Reductions came about through tough legislation and a zero kill can be achieved through tougher measures. One shame among many in this story is that only 5% of the canned tuna catch is responsible for the slaughter.

Just ask someone like Suzanne Trapp what it was like to swim with dolphins and you will realize that this is too high a price to pay.

THE OUTSIDER

by Timothy Bishop
Business Manager
Outdoors Editor Emeritus

Last Year, I wrote a column for The Outsider entitled "A Comm Major In A CNR World." There I took a bunch of complicated environmental issues and boiled them down so that even a Comm Major (Like Myself) could understand them.

So, by popular demand, I am returning to The Outsider for one week with the 1990 edition. So here, in the tradition of Rocky and Friday the 13th, here is a Comm Major In a CNR World II.

In the last year, quite a few things have happened in this little environment of ours which deserved to be noticed. Unfortunately, the experts are still using terms designed for the CNR major, and ones which leaves us poor Comm majors out in the acid rain.

For example, last year, the Exxon Valdez stumbled upon the beaches of Prince William Sound in Alaska. There it left millions of gallons of crude oil to float upon the water. And this winter, oil from another shipping disaster has fouled the beaches of California. To the CNR major, this is clearly a disaster.

But why doesn't anyone tell the poor Comm major what is wrong with this. This just sounds like a little oil on the beach. Who knows, maybe that oil might make for a better sun tan.

What nobody tells us poor low life writers and speakers is that this means that the fish sandwiches and other seafood we buy is going to cost more, and that the toll of the environment is going to cost us in more ways than just money. Recreation areas are destroyed and animals are threatened with destruction.

And what about all of this we here about nuclear leaks and accidents. Now that stuff really leaves us common folk out in

Recycling reduces garbage production

by Brian Leahy
Outdoors Editor

Wisconsin will soon have a new mandatory recycling law. The intent of this law is to prolong the usable lives of our landfills. Various ideas have been proposed. Some of those have been opposed by some of the affected industries, such as plastic manufacturers.

As of yet, a recycling bill has not been passed. The state legislature has many members and each has their own particular ideas. Each also has their own particular constituents.

Through the democratic process a compromise will be reached and a law will result. Let us hope that the right thing will be done-- not just the most popular thing.

Politically it would be foolish to oppose the recycling bill. Voters have become increasingly environmentally aware. We all want to decrease the amount of garbage we entomb in landfills. We feel guilty about the large amounts of garbage we produce.

We should feel guilty about the garbage we produce. Recycling is one way we can limit the amount of material tossed into dumps. Some of us already recycle what we can. It's dumb to throw something out if it can be reused. For instance, aluminum cans are easy to recycle. You can get money when you turn them in. Throwing them out is a waste.

Throwing things out is also the easy thing to do. Once something is put out on the curb it's out of our minds. The sanitation engineers will come along and toss our trash into the back of a big truck. From there it goes to a hole in the ground. Unless the landfill is in your backyard you'll never see any of your junk again.

Unfortunately, due to Law of the Conservation of Matter, junk doesn't just disappear once it's in the dump. Landfills can take in so much before they become full and need to be closed. New ones then replace the old ones.

Old dump sites are not prime real estate. Old dumps like to leach nasty slime into groundwater and expel noxious methane into the air. That sounds like just the kind of place where I want to raise a family.

We have established that garbage is bad and landfills are a necessary evil. Recycling would limit both of these.

There is another way to limit garbage. It's very simple. The secret is this: don't buy so much. Garbage comes from the stuff we buy. Packaging constitutes a large percentage of garbage. Cheap consumer goods that self destruct also fill up trash cans.

Don't buy items with unnecessary packaging. Buy good quality items and not items that are destined to break.

No one spends good money to buy something they just intend to throw out. A customer doesn't go to a store and say, "Hey Joe, got any good cheap junk I can buy so I can fill up the trash can and lug it to the curb."

Noticing all of the trash piled up on the curbs it would seem if people do buy garbage for the sake of garbage.

By limiting consumption and recycling we can reduce the amount of garbage we produce. Recycling isn't anything new. Ask your grandparents about how widespread recycling was during World War II. Recycling can be done. It won't kill us.

However limiting consumption, intentionally, is something new. Shallow minded, self centered materialistic individuals may suffer but some feel they deserve to.

Our sacrifices will be the environment's gain. We can't turn our world into a large landfill. Saving the planet is no garbage.

Eagle walk driver needed

Organizers of the Ninth Annual Eagle Walk are looking for a driver to transport the 200-mile walkers back to Stevens Point at the end of Spring Break. The weekend of March 24 and 25 would be involved or just March 25 if that can be arranged.

The driver would have to be university-approved on the 48 passenger bus. He or she would have to drive to Eagle Valley, a five hour drive from Point, and then drive the Walkers back on Sunday, March 25. Classes resume March 26.

The Environmental Council is the student group sponsoring this event and is willing to pay a driver for their time. Contact Jason Rabuck at 346-2823 if you are interested. The walkers need you! It's a long walk back!

New hours for water testing

Beginning March 1, the Health Lab at Portage County Community Human Services will extend its hours for acceptance of water samples. Samples may be brought to the Ruth Gilfray Human Resources Center, 817 Whiting Ave., in Stevens Point, from 7:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Monday-Wednesday.

Water samples can be tested for coliform bacteria, nitrates, iron, and Ph. For further information, call the Health Lab staff directly at 345-5955.

Maybe if there was more concern with the actual effects of these accidents on people, the dead cities in the Soviet Union around Chernobyl, and the lives of the survivors, the Comm majors of the world might wake up and really learn about this stuff.

I could go on, but what's the use. The experts will just find some other natural disaster to confuse and confound us Comm majors.

Walleyes

WHEN THEY HIT—

Generally, the fish will hit when the jig is in the swimming motion, or when the line is working its way back to the center of the hole. Don't be surprised if you get a hit when you first drop the lure down the hole. You may drop it right on somebodies' head.

MODIFICATIONS—

Most of the rapalas are ready to go when you purchase them. I like to make sure I have a number eight size Eagle Claw laser sharp treble hook. I like a smaller treble hook underneath because it seems to get more fish. The bottom treble does 75% of the fish catching. By using a smaller hook, you can pick up bonus panfish.

MAINTENANCE—

This is no big secret. Just keep your hooks sharp. I do this with jigging rapalas as well as my muskie lures. Walleyes can hit with a very light nudge. With sharp hooks, you can sting em' even when they're hitting light.

SIZES—

My preference is the number seven size for walleyes. I generally use this during good light conditions and a little past sunset. After that, I may switch to a number nine size so they have a little more target to see. Normark makes all sizes including a deadly one for crappies and perch. The smaller rapala keeps you from running up big bills on minnows.

COLORS—

Bright colors have always been good for me. The orange and yellow are effective with silver close behind. Remember, not only are you fishing in predominantly low light, but you're also on 25 inches of snow covered ice. Fish have to see what they eat.

Hopefully you give this a try before the ice goes out. I know I was kicking myself for not trying it earlier. Just be patient, keep jigging, and don't pay attention to your die-hard tip up companions. Soon the day will come when you will eat fillets and he eats leftovers.

SGA elections

Schoenfeld sees lack of interest as the biggest problem. He would like to see more students get involved.

"There are a 150 student organizations out there, there is no reason that there can't be 150 more," said Schoenfeld.

He would also like to focus on problems closer to home, not what's going on in Washington; problems such as parking, which directly affect UWSP students.

He would also like to continue the fight against administrative chargebacks and the fight to keep the rising costs of tuition down.

Schoenfeld would also like to see increased programming by expanding the educational opportunity outside the classroom.

"As far as funding for student organizations, I would like more of a focus on educational opportunity. Instead of two students on a field trip, I'd rather see a speaker for 500," said Schoenfeld.

"I would like to encourage people to vote for the individual who will represent them the best," said Schoenfeld.

"You can't expect students to give a damn if they're not informed," said Madison. "I think if students are informed, they will make intelligent choices."

"The senators aren't paid and maybe the money could go back into SGA," said Madison.

Another problem Madison wishes to deal with is fiscal responsibility.

"Students have been isolated from the money they pay in segregated fees," said Madison.

Madison proposes giving students more direct control by giving them a scan-tron sheet to fill out during checkpoint. Students could choose what organizations they would like to see funded. Students would have direct control of 60% of their money. SGA would still have control of 40%.

When and why graduate students teach

by Chip
Contributor

You've heard of graduate student having research assistantships--that is they get paid to do research for the University. What about teaching assistants? They are graduate students who get paid too, but take on the role of professor/teacher. You may be indignant, ignorant or arrogant to the fact that graduate students, some younger or older than you are teaching an accredited class at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point. Here are some facts.

A current full time assistantship at UWSP consists of at least a 20-hour work week and pays $5,500 per year. The graduate students must also be enrolled in at least three credits, depending on the assistantship. A full-time graduate student is enrolled for nine hours of graduate credit. They pay tuition and fees as undergraduates do.

A chief concern among those who care, is that UWSP will turn into a Madison where undergraduates never even see a professor in the class until senior year.

"We are not allowed to have, because of the nature of the university, teaching assistantships," says David Stazack, Dean of Graduate Studies. "We are allowed to have graduate assistants that can assist with instruction. That means that students on this campus cannot be confronted with walking into a class and having that class solely taught by a graduate student. It's not like Madison where you may see nothing but graduate students."

"We've created a category that we refer to as instructional assistant which means that some of these students may on occasion get in front of class and learn to teach it. But the point," says Dean Stazack, "is that many of the people who are in graduate programs are planning to eventually teach at a university."

Dean Stazack also noted that while elementary and secondary teachers need certification, college instructors do not. Most university teaching positions require a doctorate degree, but not teaching certification.

"Since this campus is so well-noted for its quality teaching," the Dean states, "why not train graduate students to teach as well."

"I think that one of the things that is positive in using the graduate students in the classroom is the consistency," says Chris Sadler, director of the oral communication program known as Communication 101. The School of Communication boasts the most instructional assistants. "I think in some situations it's inappropriate to have graduate students in the classroom because they're asked to deal with content that is too complex. That's what professors are hired for. In the capacity that we are using them, I think it's a perfect situation." The situation referred to by Dr. Sadler is one where the content and criteria is controlled by him, and where policy, attendance and grading procedures are controlled by the instructional assistants. The result is a highly uniform and standardized class.

Says teaching assistant John Deeth, "I think the graduate students are screened very well here. The reason I came here is I plan to teach and had the opportunity to teach."

The thought is echoed by students, whose evaluations for instructional assistants in the Communication Department equal those for professors. Both Deeth and Sadler maintain that graduate students bring a level of energy and enthusiasm into the classroom that some professors lack in introductory classes.

"I think that with level of graduate students we have here, we are expecting from them a level of expertise that is appropriate," declares Sadler.

A rising sentiment, according to Deeth, Sadler and Stazack, is that students enjoy being taught by a person close to their age and sympathetic with their views.

As for Communication 101, it has been two years since the program incorporating teacher assistants into lab began. It is currently under review and must be re-approved by the Committee of the Graduate Council. It is expected to pass and then will be sent to the Faculty Senate and the Chancellor after the current semester.

Amnesty International: a light in the darkness

by Brian Koller
Contributor

Early last semester a group of students from UWSP got together and decided they wanted to make a difference. They felt that no matter how small their contribution it was the contribution that mattered. Thus was funding of the Amnesty International chapter here at UWSP.

The Amnesty International chapter here on campus is one of many chapters spread throughout the United States and the world. The purpose of Amnesty International is to secure the release of all prisoners of conscience and fight for the end of executions and torture of all people without bias to culture, creed, or political orientation. This organization feels that every person has the right to be treated with respect to humanity.

No government is safe from the wrath of the members of Amnesty who wage their war through the power of the pen and public information. The million-plus members set out to petition a government for the release of wrongfully held prisoners by flooding the leaders of these countries with letters asking for the release of these people, favorable results are often attained.

However the chapter on campus is young and inexperienced, so if you would like to become involved there is plenty of room for you and any ideas you might be able to bring along.

Becoming a member of Amnesty means that you are part of the solution in a world full of injustices. In a world full of the darkness of apartheid, executions, torture and fellow humans being wrongfully held against their will, every little light in the darkness matters. It is only through enough light that the darkness will be forever extinguished.

The next meeting of Amnesty International UWSP, will be held March 7. Check the "Daily" for the room and time.

International Club to feature annual dinner

The University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point will feature foods from about 10 different countries March 10 as part of its 20th annual "International Dinner."

The Saturday evening event is being planned by the UWSP International Club, and many of its members will be involved in the preparation of the food and the staging of entertainment. It will be held in the Allen Center, beginning at 6 p.m.

Tickets will be available beginning February 23 at $10 each at the University Center Information Desk and the Foreign Student Office in Nelson Hall.

The dinner will begin with yakitori and egg rolls, appetizers from Japan and Taiwan, respectively. Goi, a salad from Vietnam, and ketoprak from Indonesia; domoda from Namibia; sweet and sour pork from Hong Kong and Korea; and chicken in paper from Singapore are all main entrees. Mamool, dessert from Jordan, and jasmine tea and punch will complete the menu.

International Club President Anne Durosaro of Nigeria announced that, following the meal, singing, dancing and instrumental music will be performed by students from Japan, Palestine, Singapore, India and Indonesia.

UWSP has about 250 foreign students from 28 countries and their annual dinner has, from its earlier years, been a sellout with more than 500 attendees.

Student Legal Society offers help: joint custody in Wisconsin

by Jim Bablitch
Contributor

Since the early 1970s, Wisconsin has allowed its courts to award joint custody of minors to parties seeking a divorce or legal separation. "Joint legal custody" means the condition under which both parties share legal custody and neither party's legal custody rights are superior, except with respect to specified decisions as set forth by the court or the parties in the final judgment or order.

For years, the courts could award joint custody of children only if both parents agreed that joint custody of children should be awarded. A big change in this law took place about two years ago. Now the courts can award joint custody on the request of only one party.

If one party asks for joint legal custody and the other party objects, the court may grant joint custody only if it finds that all of the following exist:

1. Both parties are capable of performing parental duties and responsibilities and wish to have an active role in raising the child.

2. No conditions exist at time judgment is entered which would substantially interfere with the exercise of joint legal custody.

3. The parties will be able to cooperate in the future decision making required under an award of joint legal custody.

Joint legal custody assumes that the parents can reach mutual decisions on such matters as religion, child rearing, education, medical treatment, and life style. If child abuse, domestic abuse, alcoholism, or drug addiction are present at the time of a divorce or legal separation, statutes specifically instruct judges that the parties are probably not able to cooperate in future decision making.

Joint legal custody should be distinguished from physical placement of children. Only in the most unusual case will children be placed with parents for approximately equal periods of time. More often than not, an award of joint legal custody will not affect the amount of child support one parent must pay to the other for the care of the party's minor children.

An award of joint custody is nevertheless important because it indicates both parents have been determined fit custodians of their minor children and because it indicates both parties care about their children. Moreover, an award of joint custody can lessen the pain for a person who has been denied primary physical placement of children.

If one party seeks joint legal custody and the other party objects, the law now provides a process which by mediation must take place. At mediation, the parties try to reach an agreement on custodial rights to minor children. If mediation fails, the court has the power to order a custody study. In Portage County, custody studies

How to find more time

by Tolana Day
Contributor

"Time is life. It is irreversible and irreplaceable. To waste your time is to waste your life, but to master your time is to master your life, and make the most of it." (Alan Lakein, "How to Get Control of Your Life and Your Time" p. 7). Let your time work for you. If you don't have effective time usage skills, let time management help.

Time management means using time more productively. There are different techniques of time management and they help the individual work more efficiently and effectively, not longer or harder. The ability to manage time leaves more time for yourself, family and friends.

According to one speaker at the National Invitational Conference on School Organization and Effects, time is said to be a "resource having alternative uses." Combining it with educational resources can "optimize the output of specific objectives," and can also allow students to "exercise discretionary control." (Karweik, The Organization of Time in Schools: Time Scales and Learning, San Diego).

These techniques aren't difficult to understand and don't take long to learn.

One quick system is the ABC's.

This system allows a person to set a list of priorities along with placing a value of either "A," "B," or "C," according to importance; "A's" being the first things to do. If there are a lot of items on the list and several important projects you use A1, A2, A3, and so on. The same with the "B's" and "C's." This system forces you to develop a way of establishing priorities. Another technique is to make a "To Do List". All you do is simply make a list and check off the objectives as they are completed. Another alternative is simply making a schedule which is sometimes just as effective.

SEED offers help with eating disorders

by Greg Lavin
Contributor

Are you a compulsive over eater? Do you suffer from bulimia or anorexia nervosa or feel you have a problem in your relationship with food? Maybe you should check into SEED (Support and Education for Eating Disorders).

SEED was started by the Counseling Center and a group of psychology students of UWSP last semester to help students who feel they have an eating disorder.

Ruth Getsinger, support group adviser said, "SEED is intended to provide ongoing support for students at UWSP who are experiencing difficulty in their relationship to food and eating. It is not the purpose of this group to be an alternative to appropriate medical and psychological intervention."

Getsinger also went on to say, "many people benefit most from being in a support group like this and informal treatment."

The support group has three goals which are: to offer a supportive environment where individuals may share common problems and provide each other encouragement. To develop and provide a referral network and a list of resources relative to "Eating Disorders," including programs specializing in eating disorders, bibliography of written material, and self-help organizations.

To be a member of SEED, all individuals must be willing to admit they have difficulty with their relationship with food; express a desire to improve this relationship, i.e. recovery; and be a student of UWSP.

FASHION — POINT

At a loss for what to pack for your cruise this season? Okay, so you're not going on a cruise this year. But with the crazy weather we've been having, it's difficult not to think about spring. It can also be frustrating deciding what to wear when the temperature is changing so readily. Many of the colors and calls from blizzard to spring in Stevens Point).

Big colors this season are navy, white and red. Classic combinations of navy and white are spiced up with red accents. These colors are also showing up in big bold stripes. Stripes are mostly in navy and white or red and white, but there are some stripes of red, white and navy.

Navy, red and white work perfect with the nautical styles lately as transitional pieces from ship to shore (or more realistically this season. Keep an eye out for epaulettes, gold chain belts and jewelry, and gold buttons everywhere—jackets, sweaters, cardigans, and dresses. Nautical or not, clothes this season have a great variety of detail.

The shape of jackets, sweaters, cardigans and t-shirts are cropped. Pants have high waists to compliment these cropped tops. Many of these styles are shown in softer, fluid fabrics rayon and knits. Knits work especially well for packing since they don't need to be ironed.

Now when you begin packing for your cruise, or maybe just dressing for Stevens Point spring weather, remember navy red and white in softer fabrics. Need one new piece this season? Buy a cropped jacket or sweater with gold buttons and you're set to cruise.

Theatre in review: "Ghosts"

by Blair Cleary
Amateur Critic

The rain slowly fell during the dark and oppressive night providing the atmosphere for the UWSP Theatre production of Henrik Ibsen's "Ghosts."

Starring Guy Adkins, Laurie Empen, Jim Newman, William Bolz, and Amy Liz Schaub, the play "Ghosts" had both good and bad points.

All the actors did an exceptional job performing their respective parts. Empen, who portrayed Mrs. Helene Alving and Adkins, who played Pastor Manus, tended at parts to dominate the play with their powerful actual acting and made this production will worth seeing.

The set itself, designed by Gary Olsen, was real treat. They did a very realistic job of simulating rainfall on the outside of the house where the play took place. One could hear the "rain" fall and also see it hit and run down the windows. Even more impressive than the rain was the gradual "sunrise" that they simulated near the end of the play. One might think the sun was really coming up if one didn't know better. The burning down of the orphanage was also a good effect.

The plot wasn't that difficult to follow even though it had several unexpected twist. So as no to ruin the play for anyone who may see it this weekend, there will not be a plot summary here. All that shall be told here is that several issues that are as controversial now as they were when the play was written by Ibsen 1881 are addressed.

The actor's costumes were either very good or rather dull.

Admittedly, not many 20th century critics know much about the clothes from last century, but it seemed that the male's clothes were more "modern" than their female counterparts costumes. Even if they were historically correct, they seemed out of place somehow.

The lighting and sound were good, even if the music was a bit oppressive and Robert Baruch, the director did a admirable job meshing everything together into one solid ensemble.

The biggest turn-off in the production was the production itself. "Ghosts," through no fault of the UWSP Players, was oppressive, and very depressing, especially to people who like happy endings. Almost all the characters have had, or get their lives hopelessly wrecked during the course of the play. Whoever chooses these plays should pick lighter productions to keep the weekend crowds from going home depressed.

Overall though, the powerful acting, directing, and set more than make up for the depressing plot and make "Ghosts" well worth it.

it--all of it. Ask S.G.A. what they have done, as well as what the Jacobins have done. Then ask the Jacobins what they have done, and what S.G.A. has done. Between all these accounts, you should receive a fairly reasonable idea of what the facts really are Second, I find Hauck's reference to the Jacobins' competency disgusting. Apparently, according to Senator Hauck, outward physical appearance can be construed as an accurate measure of dedication and competency. This is ridiculous. This campus is changing, precisely because students are taking initiative and speaking out against "decisions that have been made for [them]." The fact that some of these students may look or dress somewhat "strangely" should bear no weight in the area of student representation.

I am prompted to ask just what Senator Hauck's motivation is: does he want the students to have the truth, or just his version of the truth? Does he want students to get involved and vote, or does he only want this involvement on the condition that they become involved one-sidedly?

I hope students will take the time to get all the facts, because I know that armed with the facts, they will make the right decisions.

Some suggestions for using your time more effectively through the day is to go to the library in between classes finding the most comfortable place for you to study. Another way is to go to the study lounge in the U.C. or a dorm. Instead of being bored through the day or night begin reading an assignment, or read over notes. If you go to your room or back home it may be important to adjust the temperature for the right studying atmosphere.

If your want to learn more ways for managing your time, there are books and courses available.

One book I would recommend is "How To Get Control of Your Time and Your Life," by Alan Lakein, and for courses ask your counselor, look in the timetable, or course description catalog.

Pointers wrestle well at regionals

Berceau, Weix, Voigt move on Augsburg, Minnesota may have marked the end of the road for many members of the UW-Stevens Point wrestling team, but for some, the journey continues.

The three journeymen are Bob Berceau (134 pounds), Tom Weix (167), and LaVerne Voigt (190), who will travel to Ithaca, N.Y. to compete in the NCAA Division III Wrestling Tourney this weekend. All three athletes won their respective weight classes. But even though others were unable to qualify, everyone must be congratulated for their efforts.

"More than qualifying three wrestlers to Nationals, I am happy about the way our other team members wrestled," said head coach Marty Loy. "Everyone on our team won at least one match and they all wrestled their hearts out. I think they felt the need to prove themselves after their performance last weekend at the WSUC meet."

Last weekend, the Pointers dropped from second to fourth place in the Wisconsin State University Conference after a poor showing at the conference meet. Coach Loy enjoyed the way his team bounced back in such a short amount of time.

"I was happy about the way we rebounded from our showing at the WSUC meet a week ago. It looked to me like we came here to wrestle. I'm excited about the way we wrestled up and down the lineup."

Berceau, a returning National Champion, is currently ranked No. 1 by "Wrestling USA" magazine - which is no surprise to coach Loy.

"Bob is way ahead of last year at this time when he won nationals. He is very confident and I find it very hard to believe there is another NCAA III wrestler that can beat him. Bob's goal is to become a Division I All-American. He must win Division III's to get to (Division) I's."

Voigt, who is only a sophomore, placed in the top 12 in NCAA Division III last year and has a good opportunity of finishing even higher this season.

"LaVerne has been fighting his injuries all season, but if he is on he is a powerful individual who can beat anybody," said Loy. "With a good tournament, LaVerne can also come home with a high placement or a championship at nationals."

Weix, a junior from Merrill, has over 80 wins as a Pointer and will be making his first trip to the tourney. And according to Loy, it should be a good one.

"I'm glad Tom finally got to nationals. He has been good enough in each of the past two seasons but, for one reason or another, has not gone. Tom is one of the most intense individuals I have coached - he has been especially intense in anticipation of the upcoming national tournament. He is capable of placing high or bringing home the championship."

ing home the championship."

The Pointers finished 13th in last year's tourney with just two wrestlers, and coach Loy said that they are "in a great position to improve" on that finish if they "wrestle like they are capable."

The early favorite is Ithaca (NY). The returning champions and host school will rely on the strength of five returning All-Americans to repeat. Augsburg (MN) will challenge them for the title as they qualified eight wrestlers from this past weekend's West Regional. They are led by 2 returning All-Americans and returning National Champion John Beatty at 142 pounds.

UW-Whitewater also qualified three wrestlers for the tourney and are the No. 5 ranked team. Beating Whitewater would make the journey very worthwhile for coach Loy and the Pointers.

"It sure would be nice to take honors among WSUC schools," said Loy.

Women runners fulfill expectations; finish third

Amy Voigt

Beth Mears

The Lady Pointer track team, competing in the conference indoor championships at River Falls last weekend did everything expected of them...and more.

"We expected to place third in the conference meet but thought it would be a closer race between us and Whitewater," said head coach Len Hill.

The close race turned more distant when many of the athletes fulfilled their expectations and others did even more than what was expected of them.

"I was very pleased with our performance and efforts," said Hill. "The people who were to score big for us did exactly that. Those who I hoped would score, did. And some who had outside chances of scoring, scored. This was a great team effort. I was very pleased with the support that the team members gave each other."

Oshkosh won the meet with 228 points, followed by La Crosse (145), Stevens Point (76), Whitewater (58), Eau Claire (49), Stout (22), River Falls (9), and Platteville (2).

Amy Voigt set two conference and school records with first place finishing times of 42.49 in the 300 meters and 59.53 in the 400 meters. She was also the anchor leg of the 4 X 400 meter relay team which placed third. Voigt was selected as the WWIAC Outstanding Athlete in the running events.

"Amy Voigt did an excellent job in showing the conference what a dominating force she can be," said Hill. "She got out hard in all her races, and was in the lead right from the gun. By the time she got to the cut mark in the 400 she had a commanding lead that no one could make up."

Beth Mears was the other first place finisher for the Pointers as she also set a school record by throwing 46'11" in the shot put. "Beth dominated the shot put," stated Hill. "She put her first throw out there at 44'9" which was good enough to win, however, in the finals she popped one out there at 46'11" and the competition just folded after that. She is currently the leader on the national honor roll."

Second place finishes were turned in by Kortenkamp in the 1000 meters (3:10.55 timing), and the distance medley relay team of Kortenkamp, Maureen Seidl, Beth Weiland, and Marlene Sullivan (12:49.01).

Weiland turned in a third place in the 800 meters (2:21.96) and was also the opening leg in the third place 4 X 400 relay team along with Kortenkamp, Beckie Sherwood, and Voigt (4:13.00).

Jenny Schoch finished fourth in both the 1500 (4:54.57) and 3000 meters (10:25.34). Sherwood added a fourth place finish in the 400 meters (60.68) and a fifth place in the 300 meters (45.01).

Sarah Sonneman took fifth in the triple jump with a leap of 35'4", while sixth place finishes were turned in by Suzy Jandrin in the 5000 meters (18:23.10) and the 4 X 200 meter relay team of Kaylene Peterson, Sara Salaj, Michelle Versland, and Lisa Schultz (1:59.44).

The Lady Pointers will compete in the Eau Claire Invite held this Saturday.

Men's track finishes fifth at conference indoor

Dean Bryan

Facing tough competition in last weekend's conference indoor track meet, the UW-Stevens Point men's track team finished a disappointing fifth place as a team but turned in some good individual performances.

"We are all disappointed with the 5th place team standing, but I am not disappointed with the efforts that were given by the men," said head coach Rick Witt. "After you have continually been at the top and in the hunt for championships, it is sometimes hard to look for the bright spots when you have a rebuilding year, but we had some excellent performances from an extremely young team."

One of those performances came from freshman Dean Bryan who placed fourth in the 400 meters but set a new school record with a 49.65 clocking, qualifying him for the NCAA Championships.

"Dean has the potential to be one of the best ever," stated Witt. "He just has to get consistent."

Point skaters pass first test

by Steve Rebne
Sports Writer

The two-time NCHA and WSUC regular season champion UW-Stevens Point hockey team successfully passed their first test toward a second straight NCHA playoff title and a trip to the NCAA tournament by sweeping a weekend playoff series from UW-River Falls last Friday and Saturday.

The series between the two arch-rivals has traditionally been characterized by close, nail-biting hockey games filled with aggressive checks and numerous penalties -- which, for the latter, was very true, as the teams combined for a two game total of 61 penalties (UWSP-31, UWRF-30).

"We expected this series to be a tough, aggressive match-up, but it's kind of a shame that a playoff series between two good teams resulted in so many penalties," said assistant coach Rick Fleming. "That's not the way hockey was intended to be played."

On the other hand, this weekend's contest was very uncharacteristic for the two teams, as the Pointers routed the Falcons by scores of 8-1 and 7-2. Previously this season, Point held a slim 15-12 total goal advantage in four regular season games over the Falcons.

"They were the only team to beat us this year on our home ice and that was just three weeks ago," said Fleming. "Before the game, the guys were very serious and very intense. They knew what had to be done."

Friday night, the Pointers' Scott Krueger drew first blood with 7:18 remaining in the first period when he came out of a four man scramble for a loose puck in front of the River Falls net, notching his ninth goal of the season and a 1-0 lead.

Joe Butcher followed less than three minutes later, putting the Pointers up 2-0, before senior Ralph Barahona added his 14th goal of the season with 38 seconds remaining in the first period for a 3-0 lead.

Senior Pete Supple scored the first power-play goal of his career just 1:18 into the second period when he tipped a Marc Strapon slapshot past River Falls goaltender Roger Rougelot for a 4-0 lead.

River Falls retaliated nearly 13 minutes later as senior defenseman Joe Lagoo tallied his school-record setting 16th goal of the year, closing the margin to 4-1.

But that was as close as River Falls would get as Paul Caulfield, the Pointers' leading scorer, gathered his 23rd goal of the season with less than three minutes remaining in the second period, increasing the lead to 5-1.

The score remained 5-1 until the 18:03 mark of the final period, when Stevens Point erupted with three unanswered goals, one by Caulfield and two by Tim Hale, in less than 1:30 for the shocking 8-1 trouncing.

"In our two previous series with River Falls, we played good at times but never put together a complete game," stated Fleming. "We really tried to stress that all week long and the guys came out and were consistently effective all weekend."

Goalie Kevin Marion, a junior from Hibbing, MN., stopped 24 of 25 shots on goal while increasing his record to 11-1-2.

The Pointers didn't let up in Saturday's contest as they jumped to a 4-0 first period lead on goals by Shawn Wheeler (11th of the season), Barahona (15), Craig Porazinski (3), and Krueger (10).

Hale and Mike Stahley added two more goals for the Pointers during the second period before Jim Haw, River Falls' leading scorer, put the Falcons on the scoreboard with his 28th goal of the season, ending the two period scoring at 6-1.

The teams traded goals during the third period, one by Stahley (10) and one by Lagoo (17) to give the Pointers a 7-2 victory.

Stevens Point's Todd Chin (13-2-1) stopped 31 of 33 shots on goal while River Falls' Mark Tyska (5-4-0) turned back 34 of 41 shots.

The weekend series sweep improved Stevens Point to 24-3-3 on the season, while River Falls finished at 13-13-3.

The No. 1 ranked Pointers will host Mankato State (13-12-5) in the NCHA finals on Friday and Saturday nights at K.B. Willett Arena. Face-off is set for 7:35 both nights.

Lady Pointers finish successful season

by Jeremy Schabow
Sports Writer

The Lady Pointer basketball team just finished an exceptionally well season due mainly to the careful and terrific guidance of head coach Shirley Egner and the strength and togetherness of the team. Hard work and confidence are definitely major attributes of these lady athletes.

The two games over this past weekend showed this. UWSP's Lady Pointers had an overall record of 12-12 this year and 9-7 in the conference. All those involved are extremely thrilled with the results, especially since last year's record was 5-17 and the athletes were the same as this year. This demonstrates tremendous improvement.

Traveling to Superior, the Lady Pointers challenged their opponent on February 23 and defeated them 73-70.

"This really was a big one for us," said Egner. "We were ahead at first, but fell asleep a little, letting Superior get back into the thick of things. They have yet to win a conference game though. Amy Felauer had a huge three-point shot that she made which iced the game right there. Superior did show a great will not to give up and I admire that. I also think that our team was saving some energy for our final game against River Falls. We did not play quite up to par, but we will surely take the win."

Pointers end regular season; begin playoffs

by Kevin Crary
Sports Editor

"It was everything it was built up to be," said junior co-captain Chas Pronschinske.

The UW-Stevens Point men's basketball team hosted conference leading Platteville last Saturday for the final game of the 1989-90 regular season -- a game that was nothing short of what was expected.

On the line for the Pointers; their undefeated home record, a chance to win 20 games on the season, and the opportunity to say they beat every team in the Wisconsin State University Conference at least once this season.

For the Pioneers; claim to the WSUC title.

Playing in front of 4,107 fans -- the Pointers couldn't have asked to be in a better situation, and the game couldn't have been any better -- except, of course, for a Pointer win.

Platteville pulled out a 68-64 win to claim themselves champions of the WSUC at 24-2 overall and 15-1 in conference. Point finished in third place at 19-7 and 10-6.

"It was a great game," said head coach Bob Parker. "It was close the entire game and we had an opportunity to win at the end, we just turned the ball over too many times against the press."

The Pointers had 24 turnovers in the game, with many of them coming on a full court press displayed by the Pioneers, ending up as easy baskets. But even so, it was the Pointers' showing on the free throw line (or lack of) that played a major role in the outcome.

Point made only three appearances at the charity stripe, all of them coming in the last 1:31 of the game in the bonus situation and all of them by Pronschinske. Needless to say, the Pointers were 0-3 in the second half and just 4-12 for the game.

"We're all disappointed about the loss," said Pronschinske, "especially me after missing all three chances I had at the free throw line at the end of the game."

Scott Anderson hit the last field goal of the game when he connected on a three-pointer with 2:23 remaining, tying the score at 64. From there it was just a free throw contest between Platteville's Shawn Frison and Pronschinske. Frison connected on four of six (14 of 17 for the entire game).

Frison led all scorers with 26 points. Robby Jeter added 13, Delano Brazil pitched in with 12, and Brian Gilmore had 10 for the Pioneers.

Domino's with Pointer athletics: The perfect combo

Beth Ostrowski is this year's winner of the $500 scholarship given away by Domino's Pizza. The drawing took place at halftime of Saturday's basketball contest between Stevens Point and Platteville and symbolizes the long friendship between Domino's Pizza and Pointer athletics.

"Domino's Pizza has always been willing to help out, not only the athletic department, but the entire student body as a whole," said Sports Information

Director Scott Roeker. "The annual scholarship is just one example of the fantastic support Domino's has shown the university community."

The drawing was the fourth in as many years, and students can look forward to it continuing.

"We think that being involved with the university is very important," said Richard Brunner of Domino's. "And we will continue to be a part of the university and Pointer athletics for years to come."

Rod Garcia turned in Point's highest finish with a third in the 5000 meters (14:47.38 timing). Kim Lasecki ended up fifth in the same event (14:56.87).

"Rod Garcia and Kim Lasecki both ran tremendous in the 5000," said Witt. "That race was like the 400 with four and may be five people qualifying in the race for the NCAA Championships. Rod did everything that he could to win the race and just fell victim to people with better kicks that last lap."

Other fourth place finishers were Dave Rupp in the triple jump with a leap of 46-02.25, John Ceplina in the 600 meters (1:22.61), and the 4 X 400 meter relay team of Ceplina, Kevin Schedlbauer, Rick Meinke, and Bryan (3:24.96).

Along with Lasecki in fifth place were Meinke in the 800 meters (1:58.56), Scott Johnson in the 1000 meters (2:33.26), and Chris Larsen in the 200 meter hurdles (25.95).

Sixth place finishes went to the 4 X 200 meter relay team of 20. Julius was the only other Pointer in double figures with 10, despite playing only 18 minutes due to follow trouble. Julius fouled out with 8:39 left in the game.

Despite the loss, the game provided the confidence the Pointers need as they head into the District 14 playoffs.

"We feel we can beat anyone right now," said Pronschinske. "We know how to win and feel confident about going into the playoffs."

"We're looking forward to the playoffs," said Parker. "The crowd support we got for the Platteville game as well as for the entire regular season was great, and we hope that we'll see that same type of backing for the playoff game against Parkside."

The Pointers will host Parkside this Saturday at 7:30 in Quandt Gym, marking their ninth straight appearance in the District 14 playoffs.

As a Marine Officer, you could be in charge of a Mach 2 + F/A-18A, a vertical take-off Harrier or one of our other jets or helicopters. And you could do it by the time you're 23. But it takes a special commitment on your part. We demand leaders at all levels. We teach you to be one. If you're a freshman or sophomore, ask about our undergraduate officer commissioning programs. If you're a junior, check out our graduate programs. Starting salaries are from $20,000 to $24,000. And you can count on going farther...faster.

We're looking for a few good men.

Go farther... faster.

up five points and everything looked fine. Deb Shane did a remarkable job considering her knee injury a couple of weeks ago.

"Near the end of the game, however, we threw the ball away four times in a row. This was the turning point of the entire game because up until that moment, we were in control. We had a chance to win again. There was 36 seconds left and Tricia Fekete got fouled with our team being behind by one.

She sunk one of the free throw shots and the game was now tied.

"The ball went back and forth quite a bit until a River Falls player made a basket with six seconds to go. By the time we got the attention of the officials and called a time-out, the clock registered one second. We threw it the length of the court and they tipped it out of bounds, so we lost 57-55."

The team, nor Coach Egner, sees this season as a loss. They met their goal of .500, Shane got to play one last time. They hope to contend for the title next year, and also have earned the respect of students, other athletes and coaches, and each other.

"The kids have given me all I could have hoped for this year," said Egner. "They are all so very special to me and I too have learned."

You'd like your roommates a whole lot better if they didn't show up on your phone bill.

John called Chicago. Andy called L.A. Or was that Pete?

Don't sweat it. Sorting out roommates is easy when you get AT&T Call Manager Service. Because with it, you can all get your long distance charges listed separately, even though you share the same phone number. And it costs you nothing.

To find out more about the free AT&T Call Manager Service, dial 1 800 222-0300, ext. 600. It'll make both your bills and your roommates much easier to live with.
