Decorations damage dorm room

by Jodi Ott
News Editor

Decorating dorm rooms can be dangerous is exactly what two UWSP students found out.

Travis Peterson and Jeffrey Froelich of 310 Hansen Hall returned to their room on Monday evening to find it ablaze.

Apparently, miniature Christmas lights that were suspended from the ceiling along with some flags started the fire. The fire alarm went off at 11:41 p.m.

Both men were on the wing at the time. Froelich returned to the room first to find both beds on fire. He grabbed a fire extinguisher and put out most of the fire himself. A UWSP Protective Services Officer also used an extinguisher on the fire before the fire department arrived.

Resident Assistants evacuated the hall. Students were outside until approximately 1:30 a.m.

"Staff members mentioned to me how rude the firemen were to them and also to the students," said Travis Hilliard, assistant director of Hansen Hall.

An estimate of $600 in damage was given. Besides the beds being burnt, the carpet and curtains were also damaged. Other damaged items include: a television, stereo speakers, a typewriter, scuba equipment and a pair of Oakley sunglasses.

"But our fish survived," said Froelich.

In a residence hall fire, the student or students who occupy the room may be held responsible and even receive fines. Possible penalties include paying the fire department bill and also being held responsible for damages to the room.

The residence hall is not responsible in compensating for damages nor does it have insurance for student belongings.

Resident assistants are supposed to inspect rooms for fire safety.

Governor's race Thompson vs. Loftus

Property tax relief: Thompson does not have a specific plan for property tax relief. He instead favors more general principles, two of which stress control of local spending. He has stated that he will also oppose any new state mandates on schools that are not also paid for by the states. He plans to continue to increase state aid to local districts, which went up a record $500 million in his first term.

State taxes: Thompson has promised no new taxes. He believes Wisconsin is not facing a recession as others have predicted, and even if one hits, he will not cut programs or raise taxes. He would instead tighten the management of existing programs. Skeptics say this is not realistic in view of President Bush's recent "no new taxes" promise.

Welfare reform: Thompson has stated he will continue to refine his controversial Learnfare program, which reduces welfare grants to families whose teenage children skip school. He says more social service support will be provided by Learnfare to balance its "tough love" aspect.

Abortion: Thompson is anti-abortion, with exception for cases of rape, incest or danger to the life of the mother.

Educational choice: Thompson would continue to support the Choice program, in which 350 low-income students receive $2500 state tuition grants to attend private schools. The program is designed to spur improvements in public schools by making them compete for students.

Drugs: Thompson is opposed to illegal drug use, though no formal programs have been developed.

Environment: Thompson has not outlined an environmental agenda. He opposes a ban on mining, but many believe he had a strong first-term record on environmental issues.

Business development: Wisconsin has had a strong economy over the past few years, including the lowest unemployment rates in twenty years. Thompson promises to keep that up.

Property tax: Loftus has outlined a 10 year plan called "Teach, Learn, Compete" or TLC, to freeze local property taxes by shifting costs to the state. Critics say that means a state tax increase down the line. This plan would require local school districts to spend a minimum amount per student in order to create a financial foundation.

State taxes: Loftus believes Wisconsin economy is likely to go into recession if it follows current trends. If it does, he plans for an income tax surcharge to cover any state deficits. He would also increase cigarette taxes ten cents a pack. Money would go to cover health insurance for 90,000 of the state's 600,000 working poor with no coverage.

Welfare: Children's Income Support Supplement (CISS, pronounced "kiss") would scrap welfare but replace it with essentially another welfare grant. It would encourage work because it would allow welfare recipients to keep what they earned without reducing their CISS grant.

Abortion: Loftus is pro-choice, and says he would veto any bill that restricted abortion rights.

Educational choice: Loftus is opposed to Choice (for explanation on Choice, see comments on Thompson). This program would probably end in a Loftus administration.

Drugs: Loftus is opposed to illegal drug use, but has formulated no anti-drug program.

Environment: Loftus has called for two environmental bans, one a moratorium on mining, the other a total ban on the discharge of toxic pollutants into state waters.

Business development: Has no proposed business programs.

Make a difference on Tuesday Find out where to cast your ballot

by Chris Stebnitz
Contributor

Voting will occur this Tuesday, Nov. 6, from 7:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. all across the state.

Anyone 18 years or older will be voting for the state positions of governor and lieutenant governor, attorney general, secretary of state, state treasurer, congressional representative of the seventh district, assembly representative for the 71st district, and district attorney.

Voting stations are divided up by wards. If you live in residence halls, the wards are as follows: second ward includes Hyer, Roach, and Smith Halls; third ward includes Delzell, Pray-Sims, and Hansen Halls; seventh ward includes Baldwin, Neale, and Steiner Halls; eighth ward includes Nelson and South Halls; and eleventh ward includes Burroughs, Knutzen, Thomson, and Watson Halls.

If you are only a student here and are not listed as a resident of Stevens Point, you may still vote in the city by going to your ward's headquarters with your student ID.

Your name will be checked off on a residents' list. Barbara Kranig, Stevens Point city clerk, said, "Unlike last time we voted, we want to make it as easy as possible for college students to vote. We hope that there is a better turnout of students this year because of these changes."

If you don't want to vote here, you can receive an absentee ballot from your home town. To get this ballot you must first write your city clerk for an absentee application form. Fill it out and send it back.

You should receive your ballot which should be filled out immediately, signed by a witness and then sent back to your city clerk's office.

There are many heated battles in this election including races between the incumbent Tommy Thompson (republican) and Thomas Loftus (democrat) for governor, Donald J. Hanaway (rep) and James Doyle (dem) for attorney general, and a local race including John McEwen (rep) and David Obey (dem) for representative of the seventh district.

For more information regarding where you are supposed to vote or any further questions about how to vote, call the city clerk's office in Stevens Point at 346-1569 between 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday.

SHRM wins superior merit award

by Jodi Ott
News Editor

The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) from UWSP has been awarded the Superior Merit Award by the National Society for Human Resource Management. Approximately 20 clubs nationwide receive this award.

The chapter will be hosting the state convention here in March.

"Our ability to host the state convention is a real plus," said Chris Sadler, faculty advisor to the group and a professor from the Communication department.

SHRM introduces students to careers in human resources and discusses current issues in the field. They also sponsor field trips to certain industrial organizations where students meet with the human resource representatives and learn about the culture of that business.

On Nov. 5, SHRM will be touring Consolidated Papers. Past tours have been to Madison Gas and Electric, Woodward Governor and Sentry Insurance.

"This year we are focusing more on resumes and interviews. Human resource professionals are critiquing our resumes and we are doing mock interviews," said Dawn Tronick, secretary of SHRM.

SHRM presently has about 25 members from various disciplines. The club strives to be multi-disciplinary but Communication, Business, and Psychology majors tend to make up the greater portion of members.

The group is in its fourth year which makes their superior merit award even more of an achievement. They started out with only nine members in 1987.

SHRM earned points toward the award through fundraising, attending meetings and conferences, and sponsoring various programs.

Brian Koleczyk serves as president of the group. John Hillert, from Sentry, is the corporate advisor. Denise Mack is vice-president, Mike Collins, treasurer, and Kevin Young, public relations coordinator.

The Big Picture

Note: In an effort to keep UWSP students abreast of non-campus happenings, this is the first of a weekly column dedicated to briefly summarizing important state, national and international events.

President Bush is planning an increase of 100,000 troops in response to the Iraqi troop build-up and solidification along the Kuwait-Saudi Arabia border by Saddam Hussein.

For the second time, Israel has rebuked an official United Nations censure for not cooperating with UN investigations into the Oct. 8 killing of 20 Palestinians by Israeli police. Israeli officials say the incident was initiated by hostile Palestinians, and that police acted "in self-defense." All Palestinians have since been banned from entering Israel.

President Gorbachev has sharply devalued the ruble and will allow 100 percent foreign ownership of Russian businesses in an effort to spark exports and gain foreign interests to bolster Russia's transition to a market economy.

In response to President Bush's civil rights bill veto, black members of Congress have unanimously decided to vote against any Bush-backed program as a sign of protest for vetoing a civil rights bill which he (Bush) believed would only encourage quota filling.

Bush has used his veto power 16 times and has never been overridden by Congress. He came close with the civil rights bill. The 66-34 vote was one vote short of the two-thirds necessary to override a veto. For WI, Bob Kasten voted with Bush, Herb Kohl (D) voted for the override.

Saturday, Oct. 27, the senate approved a budget with a record number of taxes and spending cuts, including a 3 percent income tax hike on the rich, a nickel increase in gas tax, raised levies on alcohol, tobacco, and luxury items such as yachts.

Also in this budget is a limit on guaranteed student loans to college with default rates exceeding 35 percent in 1991. This will not, however, affect UWSP, where the default rate is approximately 5 percent. The budget now goes into Bush's hands, where he is expected to sign it.

This year's deficit was announced to be $220.4 billion, the second highest deficit ever. However, the Office of Management and Budget backs up U.S. Rep. Tom DeLay's prediction that next year's deficit will be higher because there are not enough spending cuts in the budget.

Kaufman picked as Teacher Educator

by Maria Hendrickson
Staff Writer

A UWSP faculty member is now the Wisconsin's Teacher Educator of the Year.

Dr. Nancy Kaufman, associate dean and head of education, was presented with the award by Herbert Grover, state superintendent of public instruction, at the Wisconsin teacher's convention in Madison last Friday.

The Department of Public Instruction award recognizes outstanding instructors from among beginning teachers. The program is funded by McDonalds which gives $1000 to the educator chosen.

Kaufman was nominated by the administration of UWSP. Possible nominees can be drawn from 33 different institutions across the state. According to Kaufman, there are between five and 50 educators in each.

"I became interested in working with special education kids. When I was teaching a second grade class, I had so many special needs students in my classroom. I found out I really liked working with them," said Kaufman.

She obtained her masters degree in emotional disturbance at UW-Madison. After ten years in teaching, she obtained her doctorate in learning disabilities.

Currently, Kaufman is doing research for a book together with a colleague from York University, Canada. They are analyzing the methodology involved in the research of learning disabilities.

In the past, Kaufman has published several journal articles and a curriculum guide entitled "Educational Assessment of Emotional Disturbance-An Evaluation Guide." She is also in the process of having "Program Development and Curriculum Guide" published.

Next semester, Kaufman noted that she will be on the UW-Madison campus working as an administrative intern with the vice-president of the UW system.

SGA calander update

At last week's meeting:

Joanne Leonard, consumer affairs consultant from Wisconsin Public Service, addressed the senate about the upcoming Weatherization Workshops.

Brenda Van Dornick was approved as a senator.

Save the Bus, a policy regarding the feasibility of the bus service in Stevens Point, was approved by the senate. A side note --- The service may move away from a fixed route to more of a user service.

Also, the larger buses will be gradually phased out moving toward smaller, more efficient vehicles.

Senate approved financing for travel expenses for Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM), Student Art League and Design (SALAD), Stevens Point Association for the Education of Young Children and Alpha Delta Alpha, a dietetics club, and Wisconsin Parks and Recreation. Senate also funded 90FM for technical equipment for the station.

Academic Affairs Director, Sal Cuomo, discussed the issue of complete tuition reimbursement for students who are called up for active duty in the armed services. These students would receive a total refund regardless of the time during the semester that they got called up.

This week the senate will meet on Thursday, Nov. 1, at 7:15 p.m. in the Wright Lounge.

This week:

Scott Maline and Frank D. Sturzl III are up for approval as senators.

Up for finance approval:

Anthropology Club, $35 for programming and $50 for travel expenses.

Revisions for annually funded organizations. These groups may receive additional funding above that which was requested last academic year.

First reading of remedial classes disapproval act. This states that SGA does not approve of the system policy regarding 50 and 51 classes.

Discussion of the 1991-92 new student record. The debate will regard what firm should work with SGA on this publication.

The buck stops...where?

Politicians lose credibility in refusing blame

by Ron Wirtz
Editor-in-Chief

Yes, it's that time of year again. Election time. But for the first time during Bush's administration, voter attitude reeks of dissatisfaction and distrust not only of members of Congress, but also of the president himself.

Budget negotiations have now been going on for ten months, and the public is fed up with its petty self-survance. I join them in their outrage.

The most common practice today is to blame the other guy--or even better, the other party. President Bush is now blaming the Democrats for making him raise taxes. Speaking Friday, Bush blamed Democratic leaders for presiding over "an uncontrolled spending binge for years."

Wait. Stop.

I can no longer read your lips, George, because that's no longer the end you're talking out of.

Does he expect me and the rest of America to believe that none of this was his fault? It seems like he doesn't realize the power position he's in. He just thinks Mom found the Preparation H in the Crest tube and he's putting the blame on anybody but himself.

Bush will not blame himself. And that's hurting him. I would personally respect the man a lot more if he would merely state he was wrong. The ol' saying it takes a big man to admit when he's wrong is not mere cliché.

It would show peripheral vision to the problems at hand and to the mistakes of past budgets. Mr. Bush does not realize this, yet figuratively he's the biggest man in the U.S.

I want to know whatever happened to "the buck stops here" mentality of past presidents. I guess the president thinks "the buck" has taken a bathroom break on its way to the top and is piddling on other people's shoes and never his own.

The fact remains that he is simply not fessing up to the blame he deserves. He has approved budgets that have put this country into greater debt than all other nations combined--approvals that would embarrass the best S & L executives.

He has sent Congress previous budgets which have had $15.7 billion in new levies, but called them "user fees" and not "new taxes."

Consistency in the nation's top position must be absolute. Uncertainty and fickleness will ruin a person's position with his public, and the poll's show this. Bush's ratings are at an all-time low. Bush's lack of fortitude and honesty has rocked politics, particularly the Republican Party, to the core. Polls show that 52 percent of people interviewed would be willing to fire the ENTIRE Congress.

That stat alone should help some of the bigwigs in Washington to look up at least momentarily from their golf game and pay attention to the people they are supposed to be serving. Many voters feel, however, that they have no where to go. Elections continually offer no good alternatives in many people's minds.

People no longer see the direction of the U.S. in positive terms. They think were going to Hell in a Bucket and George Bush is on the lead vocals, and I don't think anyone's enjoying the ride.

People are pissed off and they have a right to be. Leadership has been nonexistent at a time when the people need someone to step forward and pull the U.S. out of the quicksand before it sinks any farther.

A lack of voter turnout can no longer be universally labeled as voter apathy. It can also be looked on as voter protest because it appears Donesbury's "wimp" has resurfaced. Peace

Politicians create new pasttime

Mudslinging: not just for breakfast anymore

by Chip
Guest Editorial

Mud slinging is about to become a regulated national sport. Oh, you didn't know? Yep, a group of wealthy businessmen have created the American Mudslinging Federation. There will be weight classes for gubernatorial bouts, senatorial ones--you get the picture.

It's a wonder why nobody has thought of this before. American political campaigns have all the trappings of a legitimate sport and should be identified as such. It's dirty; doesn't all the mud being slung remind you of a rainy football game? And there's this instinctual, competitive air about it--an air in which politicians devolve, analogous to boxing.

Only this country's campaigns have surpassed such petty displays of animal prowess and resemble such higher sports as golf now. Even though there is much financial effort and trifling talk in both, campaigning as a sport has set itself above even golf. There are no rules.

It is political Darwinism in nearly pure praxis. What other athletic activity can say that? The beauty of mudslinging lies in the absence of stupid, stifling rules and etiquette which have tainted and constrained the aggressiveness in other athletic endeavors.

The steering committee for the NMF has yet to work out details including what medium is to be the standard arena, etc. Such problems should naturally work themselves out in the competition of the market--a feat only possible in our unique experiment of democracy.

The fact that campaigning has evolved into a sport, no--an artistic expressive form--is evidence that pop culture and free society, if allowed to develop uninhibited, are vehicles for the self-evident truths we hold so dear in America.

For the remaining 1990 campaign, mudslinging is a probationary sport, but it should be a legitimate regulated event at the '92 campaigns.

Time for a change: elect Tom Loftus

Dear editor:

With the Nov. 6 election only five days away, I thought I would write why Tom Loftus, the Democratic candidate for governor, should be elected. Mr. Loftus has set an agenda for the 1990s that will benefit all of the people of Wisconsin, not just the higher middle and upper classes that current Governor Tommy Thompson has supported.

In the area of the environment, Loftus wants further funding to go to the clean-up of rivers and lakes and especially, cleaner air. While Mr. Loftus was a state legislator, he received the Environmental Decade Award as number one legislator for his voting record and sponsorship of environmental bills. "Toxic Tommy" Thompson is well-known for his vetoes of clean water laws and as a legislator, made the "Dirty Dozen" list, which meant he was one of those who consistently voted against environmental bills. Mr. Thompson has to realize that by just purchasing two areas of large forest areas does not make him an environmentalist.

Mr. Loftus also advocates the increase of the minimum wage to make it a living wage. Mr. Thompson has vetoed increases in the minimum wage three times during the past four years. Along these lines, Mr. Thompson has also stated that unemployment has gone down in Wisconsin during his term. I can't argue this fact: unemployment has gone down. But the unemployment figure does not include people who became frustrated with trying to find a job and just give up or the man who is supporting a family of four on $4.35 an hour. Mr. Loftus will help increase the minimum wage.

Mr. Loftus would also push for a state health plan. Almost 600,000 people do not have medical insurance in this state and try to imagine what it must be like for the person who needs medical attention but is turned away because he/she does not have health insurance.

Mr. Loftus is most concerned with rising local property taxes in this state. During the Thompson Administration, property taxes have gone up a billion dollars. Mr. Thompson has always said that state funding to local school districts would increase to offset property taxes. This has not happened. Also, Mr. Thompson what has happened to the lottery revenue that was supposed to be going for local property tax relief?

Mr. Loftus is also an advocate of freedom of choice for a woman's right to an abortion and will veto any legislation that would affect this right of pro-choice. Mr. Thompson has said he is pro-life, but during this election year he has "waffled" in his stance. Could it be because it is an election year?

Due to time and length restraints, I have just given an overview of the important issues of Tom Loftus. I could probably write an article that would take up the entire Pointer and I could also write an article criticizing Mr. Thompson that would take up two Pointers. Remember to vote this coming Tuesday, Nov. 6. But also take time this weekend to think about your vote for the governorship. Are you really that well-off as Mr. Thompson says you are or are you just a pawn in his advocacy of the rich and the special interest groups? Remember, Tom Loftus is the right choice.

James Bray
President,
UWSP Young Democrats

Re-elect Tommy Thompson

Dear Editor:

Tuesday November 6 is Election day in the state of Wisconsin. I am concerned that not enough people know the facts on the races.

I am a Republican but first and foremost I am a Tommy Thompson supporter.

Governor Thompson has been kind to the UW System come budget time, whereas Tom Loftus has proposed a 10 yr. Education plan and how it is funded will run out of money in 4 yrs. if implemented the plan will cost 4.8 billion to complete, and that 4.8 billion will be coming out of increased taxes that Tom Loftus will charge us.

In Loftus the Democrats most powerful elected official, the Democratic leadership has come to new lows when many of his fellow Democrats were convicted of ethic violations, from taking Caribbean fishing trips from lobbyists to taking train trips on lobbyists credit cards, you can be sure Governor Thompson has not and never will allow this to happen.

In conclusion I would just like to say that Governor Thompson has been able to pick Wisconsin up by the boot straps over the past four years and bring us back to National prominence.

Chris M. Carter
Students for Thomson, Chairman

Tune out the TV and into self

Dear Editor:

This is in regard to the article by Mary Kay Smith about the negative stereotypes of this current generation of young people. I really liked the paragraph about "being weened on T.V." and how this has negatively affected us.

I think this is very true. I have some advice I'd like to give. I don't mean to condemn anyone, I only want to give questions you may want to ask people something to think about.

First, if you have a T.V., turn it off! Actually the best thing you can do is throw it out! Take a break from T.V., radio, newspaper, books, bars, shopping malls and all of the "outside" influences. That leaves you with you and your duties of student and/or job.

Now that there are fewer distractions ask yourself some important questions. A few are...am I eternal or am I born to live in this world until I die? If I really am eternal what will be doing after this temporary body dies? Do I have any lessons to learn in this lifetime?

Who am I? (other than name, body or relation to someone else)? How do my actions affect other living beings?

Human beings, unlike animals have the capacity to contemplate life, and this is a beautiful gift! You don't need to devote your life to the environment, AIDS, or your job or even family.

If you devote yourself to realizing who you really are, you can be a help to humanity in your own special way!

Anyway, it's just something to think about.

Deb Havlik

Clean it up

Dear Editor:

Perhaps those souls who proclaim that they're "PROUD TO BE A PHI OMEGA PLEDGE" also have pride enough in the looks of their school that they might clean up their scruffings from the sundial---now that they have faithfully served their master/mistresses.

Thanks for the consideration.

Corner is health hazard

Dear Editor:

Why does walking to class have to be such a health hazard? Students at UWSP seem to be risking life and limb to attend their classes.

Attending classes just doesn't seem important when there is a chance that you might not make it home again.

I am of course talking about the hideous task of crossing the streets that lead to campus. I thought I heard somebody say that Evil Kneivel was going to make his come back by crossing Division Street blindfolded, (that's just a rumor, I also heard he chickened out).

Everyday I, along with numerous other students, cross Division Street by the Stevens Point Fire Department. There are no crossing lights located there, only white lines to let drivers know where their best chance of hitting someone is. Maybe there are no lights at that location because the city figures that, if by chance, someone does get hit there, at least the victim will be able to crawl the 20 feet to the firehouse to receive medical attention.

The campus just spent millions of dollars building a new fitness center. Of what use will this center be when students coming from class to use the facility get creamed by a car while they try to cross the street that runs in front of it?

The campus could have saved some money by not building the facility, and just sending more cars down 4th Street between classes. I hear car dodging burns about 1500 calories per hour.

A new housing bill overhauling the federal housing policy for the first time in a decade has been passed the House and has been sent to the Senate. Costing over $57.4 billion over the next two years, the program focuses on helping low and moderate-income families obtain reasonable housing.

In the courts, Marion Barry was sentenced to six months in jail and one year's probation for his misdemeanor conviction of cocaine possession.

Three former Northwestern pilots were sentenced 12-16 months in jail for piloting a plane with 91 passengers while intoxicated.

Richard P. Matty, Wisconsin's top state tourism official, has resigned for arranging a pro-Wisconsin article in a Japanese skin magazine. Pictures of Gov. Thompson were also used, but the context of their use was never discussed between Matty and Thompson.

Recent polls show that neither gubernatorial candidate's advertising has been very effective. 11 percent said that the ads on TV made them more likely to vote for Thompson, while 12 percent said that it would make them less likely to do so. Loftus fared even worse, with 13 percent reacting positively, but 22 percent reacting negatively to TV ads.

DNR fights cranberry growers for wetlands State aims to abolish century-old exemption tradition

by Steve Schmidt

Outdoors Editor

by Ron Wirtz

Editor-in-Chief

While cranberry growers in Central Wisconsin clean up after the 1990 harvest, the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) continues its crusade for wetland protection.

The DNR seeks to gain control over the cranberry industry, which has been exempt from DNR regulations due to a law passed in 1867. Two main issues the DNR is focusing on are water rights and marsh expansions into wetlands.

The DNR believes current exemption of cranberry growers from water use regulations allowed destruction to the regional wetlands in central Wisconsin. The cranberry industry, however, maintains their marshes are off-shoots of area wetlands, and they believe their efforts help area wildlife flourish and not diminish.

But despite the large populations of waterfowl and other wildlife species inhabiting these marshes, the DNR believes cranberry marshes have little value.

Tom Smith, DNR Water Management Specialist, commented that, "We have no argument whatsoever that cranberry reservoirs attract a lot of waterfowl, furbearers and other animals."

Our main contention is that converting natural wetlands into monotypic cranberry beds has very little value except for growing the cranberry vine and the berry."

Jerome Wirtz, an area cranberry farmer, is seen here in the first stages of harvesting the crop. Metal reels spin in the water which pick the berries from the vines. The berries then float to the surface and are gathered by a floating boom.

However, farmers counter with the fact that this "little" value contributes $62.3 million

"We (the DNR) would like the cranberry growers to comply with the same regulations as other private property owners."

-- Tom Smith

to the central Wisconsin economy for the growth of a native fruit.

In addition, some growers have voluntarily withdrawn their previously approved plans for marsh expansion in an effort to show the industry's concern for the environment they depend on so heavily.

Bob Duckart, president of the Wisconsin State Cranberry Growers Association feels that the DNR has been unnecessarily stringent in granting approval to expansion applications. "They've objected to basically every permit we've applied for."

They claim there are sites that could be developed where they would not object. But we ask them time and time again to cite one of these areas and to let us see what they look like, but they never do."

"They (the DNR) on one hand say 'trust us, trust us, we aren't out to shut you guys down,' but I guess we look at the past ... and things just don't work."

-- Bob Duckart

The DNR is also aiming to gain control of water rights. They feel that the cranberry industry is killing plant life necessary for wildlife survival and that sponges are being lost.

These sponges, consisting largely of moss and cattails, prevent flooding and help clean the water through filtration.

Cranberry farmers, on the other hand, feel that environmentalists are filling people's minds with misconceptions about the adverse effects of cranberry farming. Said one farmer, "Mismanagement of water resources would negatively affect your own business. Water, and the resources it provides, are vital to the health of the industry."

Trout Unlimited has also joined the fight with the DNR. According to Smith, "They do not want to see any marsh development or construction of a dam put on a cold water stream that is or has the potential to be a trout stream." He added, "We (the DNR) would like the cranberry growers to comply with the same regulations as other private property owners."

Growers argue that they need additional water rights because the cranberry is widely regarded as a water dependent crop. The DNR holds that "essentially, cranberries do not have to be grown in a waterway," said Smith.

Growers point to the fact that virtually no crop is actually grown in a water-way. The cranberry is water dependent because it relies on water not only for its health, but also for protection during cold spells and during harvesting.

Cranberry marshes are in low lying areas, where temperatures

DNR and Consolidated Papers cooperate for land management

RHINELANDER, WI --

Consolidated Papers, Inc., and the Department of Natural Resources have joined in a cooperative agreement to enhance wildlife management and habitat development on lands adjacent to the Mead Wildlife Area in Portage and Marathon Counties.

Consolidated Papers, Inc., and its wholly-owned subsidiary, Consolidated Water Power Company of Wisconsin Rapids, announced the cooperative venture on 3,668 acres of company lands bordering the Mead Wildlife Area.

Mead Wildlife Area Manager, Tom Meier, welcomed the agreement because of the impact it will have on the lands he supervises. "This agreement acknowledges that waterfowl, prairie chickens, and other wildlife species that live in this area, do not recognize the artificial borders of the Mead Wildlife Area. Instead, they will travel back and forth to areas where the habitat best suits them." The agreement recognizes that fact, adds Meier, and will provide for the continuity of management from state lands to private and back again.

The agreement calls for the Department to determine the suitable forms of wildlife management and habitat development for the lands held by Consolidated. The Department will submit project proposals to the companies for joint review and approval. Development and maintenance of approved projects will be funded on a 50-50 basis between Consolidated and the Department.

Consolidated will continue to conduct timber management practices on the land in a manner compatible with approved or completed projects.

DNR North Central District Director, Dale Urso, said, "We are delighted to have reached this agreement with the companies."

Not only will this agreement help in our management efforts for that portion of the state, but it ensures the public of years of future opportunities to observe nature, hunt or fish during the seasons, or just hike in the rolling hills and lowland marshes that make up the region of the Mead Wildlife Area."

Consolidated has a history of keeping its lands open for use by the general public and adjusting

Mailing of Hunter's Choice permits

Applicants for Hunter's Choice permits for Wisconsin's 1990 gun deer season should begin receiving their permits during the first week of November, according to Dick Royston of the Department of Natural Resources licensing section.

Hunter's Choice permits allow a deer hunter to kill a deer of either sex in a specified deer management area. This year a record 514,370 Hunter's Choice permits are available; in 1989 a then-record 342,321 permits were issued and gun deer hunter harvested a record 310,192 deer.

"Hunter's Choice permits will be mailed starting November 1," said Royston. "We hope to have them all out by November 9."

Wisconsin's nine-day gun deer season begins Saturday, Nov. 17 and runs through Sunday, Nov. 25. This year an extended seven-day gun deer season is available for only those hunters having Hunter's Choice permits for 67 specific deer management zones.

The extended season begins Monday, Nov. 26 and runs through Sunday, Dec. 2; hunters may only take antlerless deer during the extended season.

Deer hunting licenses for residents ($15.35) and non-residents ($106.60) are available at DNR and county clerks offices, and at some retail outlets. Licenses must be purchased before the gun deer season begins. More than 660,000 deer hunting licenses were purchased in 1989.

Trapping seasons underway

MADISON, WI -- The 1990 trapping seasons, a multi-million dollar industry in Wisconsin, are opening across the state with favorable prospects, Bill Ishmael, Department of Natural Resources deer, bear and furbearer specialist, said.

Fox, bobcat, coyote, mink, muskrat and beaver seasons all opened on Saturday, October 20 in the northern zone of the state north of Highway 64. The raccoon season is open statewide.

"The biggest issue facing trappers this season is low fur prices," Ishmael said. "Fur market analysts predict that there should be a rebound in prices in 1992." Muskrat, mink and raccoon prices have remained low during the past seasons.

Statewide in 1989, raccoon fur topped the state market, bringing in more than $1 million to trappers. Muskrat was second at more than $800,000, followed by mink at $600,000 and beaver at almost $300,000. Red fox fur almost hit the $200,000 mark in 1989. The total pelt value marketed in Wisconsin topped $3 million.

The newest change in regulations for 1990 allows the use of snares for the first time in Wisconsin. Snares cannot be used as dryland sets. They can be used only as wet or watersets and any snare noose must be half submerged at all times.

"Snaring regulations were authorized primarily to aid beaver trappers, but they are also legal for other aquatic furbearers," Ishmael stated.

Other regulations covering snares and traps are published in the 1990 Wisconsin Trapping Regulation pamphlet, which is available at all license outlets and DNR Offices.

are 10-15 degrees colder than in normal upland areas. If water is not available on demand, it is of no use to them after crops have frozen overnight.

Two efforts have been started to take current exemptions from the industry. One would invalidate the exemption law of 1867. The second would force compliance to new administrative rules restricting cranberry farming activities in wetlands despite any changes in state law.

State Representative Spencer Black (D-Madison), chairman of the Assembly Natural Resources Committee, has created a committee of environmentalists, growers and lawmakers aimed at finding a compromise to the exemption conflict. Black stated that he is not trying to stop all expansion, but that he is trying to ensure reasonable control while facilitating growth.

Duckart feels that unresponsive DNR behavior that growers have experienced, combined with DNR actions in the past, have crumbled any possible

"They on one hand say 'trust us, trust us, we aren't out to shut you guys down,' but I guess we look at the past. We (the growers) look at any kind of cooperation we've tried to work with and things just don't work," concluded Duckart.

Crock Pots are key to cooking game

by Bart Sexton

Contributor

Now that we are several weeks into the hunting season, most folks have some meat stored up in the freezer. This could be venison, duck, goose, squirrel, or rabbit. The real problem now is how to prepare it.

You may have a limited or poor range and stove to do your cooking on. Let's admit it, we're fair cooks at best. How can we prepare our game so it's tender, juicy and quick to make rather than fired shoe leather? The answer is a crock pot.

Many people reading this article no doubt already have a crockpot and know of its virtues. The benefits are little preparation time, fewer dishes to wash, and great game meals. Crock pots are inexpensive and cost between twelve and thirty dollars.

Crock pot meals start in the morning, prior to school. Smaller times such as grouse and rabbits can be thawed overnight in the sink, but geese and venison roasts had best be taken out of the freezer a day prior to cooking.

Most items can be put into a crock pot whole. Geese usually must be breasted and have the hindquarters and wing meat removed from the bones.

Once the meat is prepared, it's decision time. What else do you want with your meal? Items such as onions, potatoes, rice, pearled barley and carrots work great in a crock pot. Sauerkraut is another favorite to add a little zing to dishes. Cream soups such as cream of mushroom or asparagus can be used with chunks of meat to create stews.

The next decision is what spices to use? The old standbys of salt and pepper are fine, but crock potting really allows the flavor of spices to permeate the food. Be daring, visit the spice section of your local grocery store and read a few of the recommendations on the bottles.

A few personal favorites include sage and soy sauce with birds, thyme, bag leaves and Worcestershire sauce with venison, garlic salt and cream of mushroom soup with rabbit and Point beer with any of the above.

The usual question is, "how much do I use." Coming from a German family where measurements are done by handfuls, pinches and "enough until it looks right," it's hard to say.

As a general rule, about one half to three quarters teaspoon for powders and two tablespoons of liquids for every two pounds of meat should suffice. One note, don't use this rule with garlic! Cut it in half.

It is best to use little spice, you can always add more. Needless to say there is room for experimenting with a crock pot. Creating your own favorites is just another plus for crock potting.

Once all the ingredients are combined, you should add about a half cup of water to prevent scorching at the start. The crock pot is put on low for a full day, high for a half day and off you go to class.

The best part about crock potting is returning home after a long day, when you don't feel like doing any cooking. Upon entering your home from the chilly outside, the first thing to greet you is one of the greatest olfactory sensations in the world.

The smell of a complete meal, which has been slow cooked, is tender and even tastes good too!

Turkey applications due

Permit applications for Wisconsin's 1991 Spring wild turkey hunting season must be postmarked on or before Friday, November 2, reminds Ed Frank, turkey program coordinator for the Department of Natural Resources.

"Spring of 1991 will mark the ninth year Wisconsin has had a spring turkey hunting season, and once again we're able to offer more applicants an opportunity to hunt wild turkeys," said Frank.

A total of 41,340 permit are available in 20 turkey hunting zones for the Spring 1991 season. In the Spring of 1990, almost 33,000 hunters applied for the 29,696 permits issued in 19 hunting zones. The wild turkey harvest in Spring 1990 totalled 6,501.

The Spring 1991 wild turkey season will consist of six separate Wednesday-Sunday hunting periods: April 10-14, April 17-21, April 24-28, May 1-5, May 8-12, and May 15-19.

To hunt wild turkeys in Wisconsin, hunters must have a turkey hunting permit, a valid hunting license and a current Wisconsin wild turkey stamp.

Right now Wisconsin is in the middle of its second fall turkey season; the season ends Oct. 28. Frank said that he expects hunters to take about 3,000 wild turkeys this fall.

"She Loves Me" to open next Friday

After performing in scores of musicals as a professional actress, faculty member Susan Rush directs her first musical production, "She Loves Me," which opens at 8 p.m., Friday, Nov. 9 at UWSP.

The show continues at the same time on Nov. 10 and 13-17, and at 7 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 11 in the Jenkins Theatre of the Fine Arts Center. Tickets are on sale in the College of Fine Arts and Communication box office.

Rush, who spent several years of acting in theatres throughout these United States, including performances on and off Broadway, calls the play, "a cult musical."

The love story, adapted by Joe Masteroff, Jerry Bock and Sheldon Harnick from a play by Miklos Laszlo has experienced a new resurgence in popularity, including the recent release of a compact disc featuring the original cast.

The Broadway production, directed by Hal Prince, starring Barbara Cook and Jack Cassidy, opened in 1963 for "a respectable run," according to Rush.

In the 1940s and 50s, two films were adapted from Laszlo's play, "Shop Around the Corner," with Jimmy Stewart, and "In The Good Summer Time," starring Judy Garland and Van Johnson.

The action is set in "1935 fantasy Budapest" (any urban European city in the mid-30s), where the characters all work in Maracek's Perfumery, including Amalia, a clerk, and Georg, the store's manager.

The two think they hate each other, but little do they know, they have been corresponding through a lonelyhearts club as "Dear Friends" and have fallen in love.

The action is centered around their difficulties in getting together, plus the various relationships of the other clerks, the owner and the owner's wife.

Rush says the show, her "Christmas present to Stevens Point," is filled with music, old-fashioned, heartwarming and humorous. She says this is a "singers' show," her cast is "incredible," their singing is "remarkable," and she predicts audiences will "eat this show up like a big fruitcake."

Playing the role of Amalia will be Tari Attoe, a sophomore from Madison; Guy Adkins, a senior from Chippewa Falls, will play Georg; Jonathan Balcerak, a freshman from Greendale, will be Mr. Maracek; Dennis Schultz, a senior from Baraboo, will portray Kodaly; Kari B. Nelson, a junior from Wisconsin Dells, will play Ilona; Eric Brehm, a senior from Colby, will be Sipos; Mike Hobot, a sophomore from Champlin, MN., will appear as Arpad; and Darren G. Zipperer, a senior from Antigo, will portray the headwaiter.

Adriane Fang, Stevens Point, a freshman dance and psychology major, and Matthew Centner, a musical theatre major from Antigo, will perform "Tango Tragique," a duet created especially for the show by Joan Karlen of the dance faculty, the production's choreographer. Nicholas Price, Stevens Point, a sophomore theatre major, will accompany them on the gypsy violin.

Other members of the cast will be Jim Watson of Rothschild, Krista Wozniak of Milwaukee, Dawn Timm of Waukesha, Jace Nichols of Oak Creek, Michelle Dickmann of Oak Creek, Ann Zawadzki of Greendale, Kathryn Ambler of Monroe, Joseph P. Schmitz of Hartland, and Lisa Sopha of Arcadia.

The "art nouveau" set is designed by Stephen Sherwin of the theatre faculty, who also conducts the 11-piece orchestra. The period costumes are by Mark Schuster of Greendale, who is assisted by Beth Burrows, also of Greendale.

Deni Holl of Green Bay is the lighting designer, Peter McKenna of Antigo is the stage manager, and Stephanie Martens of Green Bay is the piano accompanist.

"Script doctor" to hold workshop

"Creating Unforgettable Characters" will be the subject of a one day workshop led by "the script doctor," Dr. Linda Seger of Hollywood on Saturday, Nov. 10 at UWSP.

A native of Peshtigo, Seger runs a script consulting business in California working with producers, writers, directors, and film and television production companies.

As a script consultant, Seger's work revolves around strengthening the narrative structure of screenplays. "Almost 90 percent of the problems with bad scripts are structure problems."

When I'm let down for a while, when I'm watching a movie, I presume it's because of a structure problem."

Seger has a patented method of analyzing scripts. This method allows her an important objectivity when working with writers and other creative people.

"Traditionally, film writers have had good instincts and follow through a number of rewrites. My process saves the time and effort of rewrites. Instinct isn't involved in what I do."

My process uses the most detailed version of classic structure that I know. That's why it's patented.

It takes me one week of hard work sitting at my desk to analyze a screenplay or script and identify the problems. I don't sit there and create. I search for what's there and identify what's not there and vice versa."

Seger has taught workshops on narrative structuring for screenplays throughout the United States, as well as in Australia and Europe. Her book, based on her method is entitled Making Good Script Great.

This summer Seger published a new book, Creating Unforgettable Characters in which she addresses an issue as crucial to a great screenplay as sound narrative structure.

"Creating Unforgettable Characters" is also the title of the workshop she will present at UWSP. She will discuss such topics as creating dimensional characters, developing relationships among characters and writing effective dialogue.

This workshop is sponsored by UWSP College of Fine Arts and Communication, the Division of Communication, Wisconsin Screenwriters Forum, and the UW-Madison Outreach Communication Programs.

Workshop sessions will run from 9:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. in the University Center on the UWSP campus. Fees including lunch, breaks and materials are $65 for the public, $55 for members of the Wisconsin Screenwriters Forum, $25 for college students.

FASHION POINT

by Susan Stadler

Contributor

Today more people than ever are taking advantage of mail-order. You can purchase almost anything, the list goes on.

The reason for this explosion in direct marketing? Mainly time and convenience. Despite the rise in use of mail order, many are still hesitant to take advantage of it-especially when it comes to buying clothing.

Some problems directly influence prospective customers while there are others that many customers do not know about. Despite this, many catalogers-especially those in apparel-are working to correct these problems.

The most obvious problems associated with mail ordering clothing are improper sizing, slow delivery, poor quality, and poor return policies. Most clothing catalogers today have sizings similar to those found in retail stores. A good catalog will include a sizing chart with measurements consistent with the catalog's sizing.

Problems with poor quality and poor return policies can be avoided by buying items from a credible source. A good catalog will have detailed descriptions of each article including: sizes, fiber content, price, colors, and source of production.

Catalogs with an unconditional guarantee can alleviate dissatisfaction with returns. Spiegel for example, has a policy to pay postage for any returned item. More and more companies are doing this, so look for this or other guarantees before ordering.

Some lesser known problems associated with all catalogs involve environmental issues. One major issue is that of paper usage. Catalog production contributes to the destruction of over 50 million trees for approximately 3 million tons of paper per year.

Air and groundwater are at risk of contamination from inks, solvents, and other chemicals used for printing. Landfills are being filled with these catalogs that are unlikely to break down because of the coated paper.

These are some big problems to which catalogers contribute, but some are working to improve them. This includes recycling catalogs and using vegetables and plant based inks for printing.

Patagonia has implemented conservation on site by recycling nearly all waste paper, using low-water toilets, energy-efficient light bulbs, cloth towels, and washable china.

They have also donated 10 percent of pretax revenues to more than 100 organizations; many dedicated to improving our environment. Other catalogers such as Talbots and Spiegel have also made contributions to social organizations.

These lesser known problems associated with mail order may or may not influence your choice of catalogers if you order through the mail.

However, if you do order clothing through the mail keep in mind to order from a credible source, make sure sizes are backed with specific measurements, and make sure the company has some type of guarantee for delivery and return. Most companies also have a toll-free number and 24-hour a day ordering to make it even easier for you.

Barney Street is published by the University Writers Club. Students whose work has been chosen for publication will be awarded two free copies of Barney Street. The magazine is usually available in the first week of April.

Guidelines for submitting are as follows: Submit from November to January. Put your name, address and telephone number on a cover sheet attached to your submission. Do not put your name on individual submissions.

PRSSA offers Happy Hour

Another Happy Hour you say? That's right. Beginning this Friday the Public Relations Student Society of America (PRSSA) will offer a happy hour at Mojo's bar, 916 Maria Dr. The happy hour "Mojo's Rising-TGIF" will run from 5p.m. to 8p.m. and offer unlimited beer for $3.00.

"Mojo's Rising" is part of an image campaign that PRSSA students are running. PRSSA will be promoting Mojo's Bar on this campus throughout the month of November to show students and faculty that Mojo's Bar is a great place to unwind and have a great time.

PRSSA thought that Mojo's Rising-TGIF happy hour would be a perfect opportunity for students and faculty to unite socially after a hectic academic week. It would also give people a chance to experience the fun but relaxing atmosphere of Mojo's Bar.

Through this image campaign, PRSSA is attempting to catch the attention of the UWSP campus and offer students and faculty a new place to end a hectic week.

Mojo's Rising-TGIF will be held every Friday in the month of November, except Friday November 23. Along with unlimited beer for $3.00, music will be provided by Paul Pannick.

Pannick's DJ show has a large range of music from rock to dances tunes.

Phi Sigs to sponsor party

A nonalcoholic Halloween party will be hosted by a fraternity from 8 p.m. to midnight on Friday, Nov. 2 at UWSP.

Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity will sponsor the event in The Encore of the University Center. Tickets at the door are $2 per person with a costume and $3 without a costume. The hosts will give away 150 glow-in-the-dark glasses to the first 150 participants, and prizes such as free pizzas donated by Domino's, will be drawn throughout the evening. A disc jockey will play music for dancing.

Joe Quisler, a sophomore forestry major from Wisconsin Rapids, and social chairman of the fraternity, says his group wants to promote nonalcoholic events on campus.

Last year, some members of the fraternity were arrested and fined for having a large drinking party, and Quisler says he and his brothers want to make up for that occurrence and show that people can have fun without consuming alcohol.

Habitat for Humanity gives a helping hand

by Lisa Stubler
Photography Editor

A poorly insulated trailer home sits in an empty lot. The one 10x10 bedroom is shared by three young children and the lumpy couch passes for another makeshift bed.

The supply of heating fuel is always low, so the family members bundle up their sweater and try desperately to shake the chill from their bodies.

The faucet in the cramped kitchen spews rust-colored water and makes cooking nearly impossible. They try to keep their head up and they pray the winter has sympathy for them and their home.

Although this is a hypothetical situation for most, this grim scenario represents the actual living conditions that a Portage County family once lived in and attempted to prosper in. This substandard environment is a chilling reality for approximately 13 percent of the county's residents.

Habitat for Humanity of Portage County is a Christian organization dedicated to building sound homes for poverty level families. "These families are not homeless," said UWSP Professor Dan Dieterich, "They have a very low income and just need a helping hand to get them directed to a prosperous life-style."

Dieterich has volunteered the past three years to Habitat. As this year's president, Dieterich acts as a liaison between the contractors and the workers, organizing board meetings, assisting in fund raising and even helping to construct the houses.

Some families are too poor to be approved for a bank loan and are economically trapped into substandard ways of living. The homes, which are built and sold, are exempted so that the family is not charged an interest rate when they purchase the house.

"Families are chosen by the Family Selection and Nurture Committee on the basis of their dire need," Dieterich said. "Those selected are not required to put a cash down payment on the house, but they contribute actual labor to the construction of their home and future homes as well."

An average home that sells on the market for $57,000 for example, will only cost the Habitat family approximately $25,000 thanks to the volunteer help and the donated materials. The family is then placed in a 15-20 year mortgage which includes the price of the purchased materials and services, the lot, insurance, and taxes.

Dieterich explained, "Habitat affiliates, such as Portage County, also give a percent of the cost of the house to the international division. This Habitat organization uses the money to build homes in foreign countries such as Haiti and Sudan."

Habitat for humanity continues to work with the families long after the house is occupied. Dieterich said, "We teach money management and home repair skills."

Most importantly, Habitat boosts the self esteem of the owners by giving them a feeling of pride, as well as a productive environment where they may raise their families."

Crystals -- fashion mixed with mystic powers

by Goi Ferraro
Contributor

Crystals have become the latest mystic fad since reading the stars was popular. These rocks can be found hanging around people's necks or dangling from their ear lobes.

Crystals are shaped in many different figures. One of the most common is a smooth crystal ball hanging from the talons of a falcon. The other is a four sided exalibur sword.

The rocks vary in color and clarity. Some are a clear, while others are a cloudy white, pink, or purple color.

Crystals may be merely decoration for many people. Some people, however, believe in these rocks for their healing power. "They are solid friends and help with emotional and health conflicts," says Laura, a UWSP senior (not her real name). "You have to believe to feel the power, it takes a lot of practice."

Every crystal, gem, and stone has a unique healing power. Some of the most common:

The quartz crystal (clear) enhances the blood, body and mind. It is a emotional balancer and stimulates brain function.

The rose crystal eases sexual and emotional imbalances. It also clears stored anger, resentment and guilt. It is known as the love stone because it aids forgiveness and compassion.

The amethyst enhances the right brain activity. It is a powerful blood cleanser and energizer.

The tiger eye is beneficial for the spleen, pancreas, digestive organs and colon. It helps to soften stubbornness and enhances clear perception and insight.

"Crystals are a private way to transform yourself and your beliefs," commented Laura. "Don't get frustrated, the power has to come from within yourself."

OUTDOOR REPORT

Deer are being seen more frequently as their mating season has begun. Buck rubbings on small trees and scrapes on deer trails indicate the bucks are becoming more active. When in rut, deer often dash across highways without regard for vehicle traffic hazards. Alert, defensive driving is your best bet to avoid a collision.

Many bucks are being taken throughout the state. Last week, bowhunters shot two trophy bucks in the Flambeau State Forest. One was a 13-pointer with a 22 and three-quarter-inch spread; it weighed 194 pounds. Larger bucks are beginning to be taken by archers in Florence County.

An aerial survey has counted 46,000 geese at Theresa Marsh. There's some good goose viewing around Highway 28 in Washington County. Goose hunting opportunities are excellent in northeastern Columbia County and at Horicon, Theresa and the exterior zones. There are still good numbers of ducks in the Wisconsin Rapids area, as well as in Fond du Lac County. There's also good duck hunting to be found on the Mississippi River near Trempealeau and Nelson.

Anglers will find some good crappie and walleye fishing on flowages in Iron County. Bass are biting on the St. Croix River, and there's some good musky fishing in the north. A 48 and one-half inch musky was caught on Sawyer County's Connors Lake two weeks ago during a heavy rainstorm. Smallmouth bass anglers continue to fish the waters of the upper Wisconsin River and walleye fishing is picking up on the lower Wisconsin.

Perch fishing is still great at Oconto County's Geano Beach, though the size is dropping off and the fish are spreading out. Perch action is picking up on Brown County's Duck Creek; brown trout and chinook are being caught at Egg Harbor and Ephraim in Door County.

Rainbow action is improving on the Menominee River in Marinette County, with newly-planted fish being caught. Brown trout and rainbows are being caught on the Peshtigo River.

In Sheboygan County, Pigeon River anglers have been catching steelhead, brown trout and chinook; steelhead action has been very good on the Sheboygan River near the Kohler dam. There's some good fishing at Port Washington's power plant.

Racine County's Root River is loaded with trout and salmon, including some nice steelhead. Good numbers of chinook and coho can be found in the Pike River. A reminder that snagging is NOT allowed in Lake Michigan or its tributaries, and night fishing is not allowed after October 1.

its forest management plans to acknowledge wildlife and recreation values, according to Richard L. Hilliker, manager, land resources development for Consolidated Papers, Inc.

"The cooperative management agreement for the paper company and power company lands adjoining the Mead Wildlife Area reflects our companies' continuing commitment to multiple-use of natural resources. Both wildlife habitat and the citizens of Wisconsin will be beneficiaries of this demonstration of business and government working together for better land management," Hilliker said.

Today, the project boundary encompasses nearly 27,000 acres, with plans to increase this total to about 31,000 acres to fully utilize the potential of this area. The addition of the Consolidated lands brings the total area under management to nearly 35,000 acres.

founder of Consolidated Papers, Inc., of Wisconsin Rapids. In 1959, the company donated to the people of Wisconsin, 20,000 acres of land in the valley of the Little Eau Pleine River in Wood, Marathon, and Portage Counties to be used forever for wildlife conservation purposes. That 20,000 acres became the core of the Mead Wildlife Area.

Waste programs receive grants

Two counties and two communities were awarded state grants that will be used to sponsor household hazardous waste disposal efforts in 1990 and 1991, announced Colleen Hellenbrand, a solid waste official with the Department of Natural Resources.

Grants were awarded to: Oconto County, $15,000; the city of New Richmond, St. Croix County, $15,000; the city of Milwaukee, $15,000; and Door County, $5,000.

"The grant money will be used to set up, publicize and operate temporary 'Clean Sweep' sites where people may drop off unwanted pesticides, lead-based paints, cleaning compounds or other hazardous substances commonly used in the home," said Hellenbrand, grant coordinator for the DNR's Bureau of Solid and Hazardous Waste Management.

Communities may limit the types of waste they accept, so citizens should watch for publicity or check with local Clean Sweep sponsors to find out which types of wastes may be dropped off at locally operated collection sites, Hellenbrand added.

The grant program was authorized by the state Legislature in November 1987. Grants pay up to 75 percent of locally sponsored Clean Sweep programs.

Non-animal tested cosmetics means big business

Selling cosmetics and personal care products that are not tested on animals is "good business," says The Humane Society of the United States (HSUS).

In national poll commissioned by The HSUS, two in five Americans (41 percent) said they would shop in a store solely because it offered cosmetics or personal grooming products not tested on animals.

The poll also showed that most people (60 percent) believe that it's not necessary to test on animals to ensure a product's safety. And, of those people, more than half (55 percent) would shop at a store just because it offered products not tested on animals.

"It's just good business to offer consumers what they want," said Patricia Forkan, HSUS senior vice president. "Considering the fact that people might have to go out of their way to shop in a store that offered non-animal tested products, the fact that two in five said they'd be willing to do that, is very significant."

The HSUS has launched The Beautiful Choice (tm) campaign, in which manufacturers who agree not to test on animals may use a logo declaring that the product is pledged to The HSUS to be non-animal tested.

The poll, which has an accuracy rate of plus or minus 3.1 percentage points, quizzed 1,000 Americans throughout the country on their attitudes about a variety of issues.

Pointer hockey team ready to defend title

by Timothy A. Bishop
Sports Editor

The UWSP Hockey Team is coming off two consecutive NCAA Division III National Championships, and is the overwhelming favorite to repeat as Northern Collegiate Hockey Association champion, but Pointer Head Coach Mark Mazzolini is discounting the high expectations and rankings that his team has.

"Rankings are rankings," said Mazzolini, who enters his fifth season as the Pointer ice hockey coach. "You have got to be ranked until someone comes along and beats you. Rankings are deceiving. Nothing has been played by anyone yet."

The Pointers begin their season Friday night when they will play the annual Purple-Gold intrasquad game starting at 7:30 p.m. at the K.B. Willett Arena. The Pointers travel to UW-River Falls for a two-game series November 9-10, and then host Bemidji State University November 17-18 for a two-game series.

Mazzolini said that experience is a big question for his team this year.

"When you look at a program like Mankato State, who played us dead even last year, they lost only one senior, we lost nine. UW-Eau Claire lost three seniors, we lost nine. Bemidji State lost two seniors, we lost nine.

"There are a lot of teams in that situation. Mankato has 14 seniors on their roster and if they are going to get UWSP, this is the year in their eyes that they have to do it.

"We are in a different situation now than we have been in, as we are quite a bit younger than we are used to. We carry a roster of 26 kids and 10 of them are new people. Out of our 26, we have 15 freshmen and sophomores."

Despite the youth of his team, Mazzolini does not think that it will have any trouble competing with the other schools in the NCHA.

"We don't think we will be any less of a club than we have been," he said. "Our talent is very good, it's just young."

"We have demonstrated with an experienced team what can be done. It will be interesting for our coaching staff and our fans to see how we can perform."

"We are not an underdog, we are very much on even ground with other people. You just can't be misled by what a poll says. If you are number one, someone has got to beat you before you are number one."

"We feel we have the capabilities to compete for the NCHA championship. We will

Football teams loses to River Falls

RIVER FALLS--The UWSP Football Team fell to 2-4-0 in the Wisconsin State University Conference and 4-4-0 overall with a 41-17 loss to UW-River Falls here last Saturday.

Whitewater scored a touchdown and a field goal in the first quarter to take a 10-0 lead. Then early in the second quarter, the Falcons added another touchdown to take a 16-0 edge.

The first Pointer score of the game came midway through the second quarter when Dave Schneider capped off a 11 play, 47-yard drive with a 31-yard field goal.

Late in the half, River Falls added another touchdown for a 22-3 lead.

River Falls extended its lead with touchdown runs of 58 and 13 yards, but the Falcons fourth straight failed conversion made the score 34-3.

The Pointer offense came alive late in the third quarter and UWSP quarterback Roger Hauri connected on passes of 10, 27 and 14 yards to set up an eight yard touchdown pass to R.A. Caves. Schneider added the extra point and the Pointers trailed 34-10.

Early in the fourth quarter, Hauri connected on eight of ten straight pass attempts including a five-yard touchdown pass to John Bushland. Schneider added the extra point to make the

Pointer runners in conference meets

Men take third behind Oshkosh and La Crosse for conference title

MENOMONIE--Rod Garcia raced to a second place finish to lead the UWSP Men's Cross Country Team to a third place finish in the Wisconsin State University Conference Meet here last Saturday.

UW-Oshkosh took four of the top five and seven of the top 16 places to win the race with 25 points. UW-La Crosse finished second with 50 points, followed by UWSP with 67, UW-Eau Claire and UW-Whitewater with 140 each, UW-River Falls 157, UW-Platteville 175 and UW-Stout 253.

Garcia led the Pointers with his second place finish in a time of 25:17.19. Bill Dean also earned all-conference honors for UWSP with a 10th place finish (26:09.64). Other top finishers for the Pointers were Matt Hamilton (14th, 26:26.33), Jason Ryf (19th, 26:36.55), John Cepline (25th, 27:00.52), Robert Martin (29th, 27:10.19), Jon Smith (35th, 27:19.69), Kevin Mahalko (36th), Jason Zuelke (39th), Pat Crawley (42nd), Shawn Becker (64th) and Harvey Hill (77th).

Pointer coach Rick Witt said that the race left him unsure of how he feels about his team.

"I have very mixed emotions with regards to the meet," said

Witt. "I am very pleased with the efforts given by every man on the team. I thought each and every man on the team was focused on what we wanted to do and ran well. I am disappointed for the team in that they were not able to reach the goal they had set for themselves of being in the top two teams."

Witt said that he knew it would be Oshkosh, La Crosse and Point who would finish in the top three.

"We knew going in that it would basically be a tri-angular meet with Stevens Point, La Crosse, and Oshkosh," said Witt. "Those three are all in the NCAA Division III top 10 and it was just a question of how things would fall between those three. As I look back, I probably made a mistake in that our men were keying on Oshkosh. La Crosse surprised us by going for the front at the start and we were not able to make the ground back up."

Women finish fifth after Oshkosh sweeps top five

MENOMONIE--The UWSP Women's Cross Country team finished fifth in the Wisconsin Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference meet here Saturday at Menomonie High School.

UW-Oshkosh took the top five places to win the meet with a perfect 15 points.

UW-Whitewater finished second with 64 points, followed by UW-La Crosse with 88, UW-Eau Claire 102, UWSP 114, UW-River Falls 190, UW-Platteville 209 and UW-Stout 226.

Suzi Jandrin was the top finisher for the Pointers, taking tenth individually with a time of 18:51.50. Aimee Knitter also earned all-conference honors with a 17th place finish in 19:22.00.

Other finishers for the Pointers were Marlene Sulivan (28th, 19:41.70), Tina Jarr (33rd, 19:52.90), Amy Voigt (39th), Nancy Kortenkamp (42nd), Tami Langton (47th), Debbie Hartz (56th), and Kathy O'Brien (68th).

Pointer coach Len Hill said he was happy with his team's performance in the meet.

Women's soccer ends with win, tie

by Kris Kasinski

Assistant Sports Editor

The UWSP women's soccer team completed their season with an 11-4-3 record after defeating St. Mary's of Minnesota 1-0 and settling for a 3-3 tie with UW-Green Bay.

The victory over St. Mary's was as important to the team as winning the state tournament.

"This game was important because of St. Mary's reputation as being one of the best soccer programs in the Midwest. Their record is outstanding and this team has made several National play-offs showings. This truly is a big win for us. Our team played tremendous soccer today," said Head coach Sheila Miech.

The Pointers goal was scored by Aimee Jewrman coming off a corner kick from Suzi Lindauer. Lindauer was credited with the assist. Point had 19 shots on goal and St. Mary's had 15. Goalkeeper Lisa Mortensen recorded 13 saves.

In the final game of regular season play on Saturday, the Pointers took on UW-Green Bay and fought to a 3-3 tie.

The wind played a big factor in this game. When going against the strong winds it was difficult for either team to get much of an attack. Coach Miech, however, credited the team for their effort.

"We knew earlier in the season when we played Green Bay we didn't play up to our potential and we would have a great game against them," she said.

The three Pointer goals came from three different players. Suzi Lindauer, Jenny Bradley and Kim Luenenberg all scored for Point, and assists were credited to Olson, Bradley, and Keri DuVall. Point had 13 shots on goal and Green Bay had 26. Mortensen had 21 saves.

Coach Miech said she is proud of her team's play and happy with their overall season.

"We concluded our season very strong and I am nothing but pleased with this team's effort. Seniors Lynn Olson, Heather Gottschalk and Trainer Anne Mrochinski will be greatly missed," said Miech.

Volleyball team falls to St. Norberts, Oshkosh

The UWSP Women's Volleyball Team battled St. Norberts College and UW-Oshkosh closely, but still dropped matches to both the Green Knights and the Titans last Wednesday in Berg Gym.

The Pointers lost to St. Norberts, 6-15, 4-15, and to Oshkosh, 6-15, 9-15.

Meghan Keller led the Pointers with 6 service points, while Jodi Lundquist had 15 kills.

Pointer coach Sharon Stellwagon said that her team performed well.

"We played extremely well against both teams," said Stellwagon. "Especially against Oshkosh. I was very pleased with our team effort and concentration."

The losses dropped the Pointers to 3-28 overall and 0-7 in the Wisconsin Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

The Pointers travel to the WWIAC Championship this weekend in Superior.

Domino's to support athletics

Domino's Pizza has announced a deal to help support the UWSP Athletic Department.

Domino's is running a special coupon offer in the Pointer, Stevens Point Journal and Stevens Point Buyers' Guide over the next two weeks.

For each of the coupons which are redeemed, Domino's will donate $1 to the UWSP Athletic Department.

Basketball to host Russian team

The UWSP Men's Basketball Team will open its 1990-91 season with an exhibition game against the Russian-Ukrainian National Team on Sunday, November 11 starting at 7:30 p.m.

That night will also be Terry Porter Recognition Night. Porter, who led the Portland Trail-Blazers to the National Basketball Association Finals last spring, played for the Pointers from 1982-86.

The Pointers, who had a record of 20-8 last year, are one of 12 opponents the Russian team will face during its tour of the Midwest.

The Russians will also be facing the University of Wisconsin-Madison, the University of Minnesota, and UW-Green Bay.

At half-time of the game, Porter will be recognized with a full-size photo of the former Pointer all-American unveiled.

Men's cross country

"Our men learned a good lesson. You cannot give any ground to teams of equal ability and hope to make it up."

Witt said that Garcia was looking to win the race.

"Garcia wanted to win the race in the worst way," said Witt. "We knew that the race would probably come down to him and Scott Steuernagel of Oshkosh. It was a classic race between what looks like two of the top five runners in Division III."

Will also commented on some of his other runners.

"Bill Dean had his best race ever as a Pointer," said Witt. "He is the perfect example of what hard work and dedication can do. He is now one of the top runners in the premier Division III Conferences in the country."

Matt Hamilton and Jason Ryf also had good races, but I feel that both of them think they could have run a little better. John Ceplina did a good job as our fifth man. He has been really coming in in the last two races and I look for him to run well in the Regional meet, which is on a flat course which is more to his liking."

The Pointers will have another shot at La Crosse and Oshkosh on November 10 when they travel to Rock Island, Ill. for the NCAA Division III meet.

Women's cross country

"I was very pleased with the team's effort and performance," said Hill. On paper, we were fifth coming into the meet. We ran aggressively and were hoping that one of the teams above us would not run well.

"This was the most exciting conference meet that I can remember. At the one-mile mark, there were five different teams in the pack."

Hill also complimented some of the Pointers' individual efforts.

"I was pleased with the efforts of Jandrin, Knitter, Jarr and Voigt," said Hill. "Jandrin made all-conference first team while Jarr made second team despite being injured and not running very much all week."

"For Jarr and Voigt, it was their first intercollegiate conference meet. I thought they ran well and did a nice job of handling the pressure."

The Pointers travel to the National Collegiate Athletic Association Regional meet on November 10 at Rock Island, Ill.

score 34-17.

On the next possession, however, River Falls put away the chances of a Pointer comeback with a 10-play, 67-yard touchdown drive. The extra point made the score 41-17.

Hauri completed 35 of 59 pass attempts for 342 yards and two touchdowns, but he did have three passes intercepted by the River Falls defense.

Jason Sicchio had 11 receptions for 90 yards to lead the Pointer receivers, while Barry

Rose caught six passes for 69 yards, Rick Skaar had six receptions for 68 yards and Scott Zirschwitz had five receptions for 66 yards.

Rose carried the ball five times for 21 yards, while John Bushland had three carries for 20 yards.

Overall, the Pointers passed for 342 yards and rushed for 19 for a total 361 yards. River Falls, who attempted only four passes and failed to complete any of them, rushed for a total of 488 yards.

The Pointers return to action this weekend when they host UW-Superior at Goerke Field starting at 1 p.m.

The Pointers finished the season seventh in the overall WWIAC standings.

Conference champion UW-Whitewater won the meet with 55 points, followed by UW-La Crosse with 45, UW-Eau Claire 31, UW-River Falls 23, UW-Stout 18, UWSP 17, UW-Oshkosh nine and UW-Platteville three.

Whitewater, who went 7-0 in conference dual meets, won the WWIAC title with 24 points, followed by La Crosse with 21, Eau Claire 18, River Falls 15, Stout 11, Oshkosh eight, UWSP eight, and Platteville three.

At number one singles for the Pointers, Shelly Locher took a third place finish, losing only to Whitewater's Wendy Seymour 6-0, 6-1 in the semifinals. In the third place game, Locher defeated Stout's Ehrigott 6-1, 6-1.

Sarah Bather took sixth place for UWSP in the number two singles competition. Bather lost to Stout's Kim Cavera in the fifth place match, 6-2, 6-0.

At number three singles, the Pointer's Tammy Jandrey finished sixth, losing to Stout's Amy Jo Jankowski in 5th place match, 7-5, 6-0.

At the number five singles, Jamie Jensen defeated Oshkosh's Becky White in three sets, 6-4, 5-7, 6-2, to finish in fifth place for UWSP. Jensen's only loss was to River Falls' Angie Graber in the opening round, 6-1, 6-0.

Another fifth place for UWSP was scored by Stefie Hoff, who battled back from a first set loss in the fifth place match to defeat Jenny McCordle of Oshkosh, 3-6, 7-5, 6-2.

The Pointers' number three doubles team of Bather and Locher battled back from first set losses in the first two rounds, only to lose to UW-Whitewater in the championship round, 6-3, 6-4.

have to play very well and be disciplined. We can't rely on experience."

Among the players that Mazzolini is looking to for leadership is senior Mark Staley, who was selected by the rest of the team to be captain this year.

"Mike has been with us for three years and two national championships. He knows what it is all about."

Mazzolini said that he is also looking for help from the other returning players.

"Paul Caulfield is also back this year. He was an all-American last year and his record speaks for itself. He was the leading goal scorer in the NCHA."

Todd Treadler returns from last year. He was our second leading scorer, behind Caulfield, and was also the freshman of the year for the hockey program and freshman of the year for male athletes here at UWSP.

"We are also looking for big output from Scott Krueger up the middle, Tim Hale and Jeff Marshall at the wings. Those are people we really need to have step up and take a major role in scoring. I am also moving Mark Strappen up front."

"We also return veterans in Pat Moran, Grant McDonald, and Bill Horbach on defense."

Mazzolini said that while his duties as the head coach will not be seriously affected by his recent promotion to the position as athletic director at UWSP, they will be different.

"Joe Balderoda was promoted to the position of associate head hockey coach. He will be doing the daily administration of the hockey program which I used to do. He will be continuing his work with our defensemen and goal tenders, and he will also assume about 70 percent of my recruiting duties."

Balderoda has served as an assistant coach under Mazzolini for the past five years.
