Harassment charges filed
UWSP employees claim sexual harassment

On September 3, 1991, two individual notices of claim of injury from the State Attorney General's office were filed against former Assistant Chil­ lcellor for Student Life, Fred Leafgren. University sources indicate one complaint was made by a former student, and the other by a University admin­ istrator, both male. The latter says he can "confirm not deny" the claims filed with the State Justice Department.

Attorney for both complainants, Jared Redfield of Stevens Point, has no new comments at this time on either situation, but stated in the notices of claim that "no sexual harass­ ment began to occur at the time the claimant became a student at UWSP in 1983. This sexual harassment continued to occur through June, 1991."

The claim also states that in July of 1991, the claimant received "psychological counseling" and suffered "extreme psychological stress."

Leafgren denies all allegations, and when asked what provoked the claims to come forward, he replied, "I am not sure what has caused this."

Although official notice was not filed until recently, University officials have been working with Leafgren's case since last summer.

On Monday, July 8, 1991, the UWSP office of Affirmative Action received an informal, verbal complaint of sexual harassment allegedly com­ mitted by Dr. Fred Leafgren.

Shortly after that, the same complainant was at the office of Chancellor Keith Sanders, presenting the allegations. University sources state that after Leafgren's discussion with the Chancellor, and after making his decision to first, take a leave of absence, and then retire, he was admitted to a Madison hospital.

After hospitalization, Leafgren sought legal advice.

"The entire situation contains only allegations, nothing has been proven."

William Meyer, Associate Vice Chancellor for Personnel and Budget, has been appointed to succeed Leafgren on an interim basis, while a search and screen committee seeks a permanent replacement.

Included in Leafgren's accompl­ishments, honors, and achievements in the past 26 years at UWSP, are receiving the highest award from American College Personnel Association for his long time ad­ ministration of special services for students, holding title of As­ sistant Chancellor for Student Affairs, Associate Dean of Stu­ dents, and Executive Director for Student Life, and gaining the honor of "Best in the United States" for his resident hall programs in 1988.

Leafgren also served on the Board of Directors of the Portage County Drug and Alcohol Abuse Council and has been active in St. Stanislaus Catholic Church.

Chancellor Sanders urges everyone to remember that "The entire situation contains only allegations, nothing has been proven. These allegations have been brought against only one person, not the entire Univer­ sity, nor the entire community. Regardless of any feelings for Dr. Leafgren, my job is to put policies and procedures that have been designated by the University Senate, into effect. These policies and procedures have been designed to protect the confidentiality of all those involved."

Slumping enrollment slashes budget

by Paul Matuda
Contributor

Reduction of student enrollment may raise the student-faculty ratio, reduce the cost for academic programs, and allow more students to get a single room. But it can also mean less income source for the University.

The Housing Office received $4,613,452 from on-campus residents this semester, about $292,248 less than expected.

The number of students who signed the housing contract was 3,182, less than the initial plan, and only 3,127 actually paid the room fee because there were 55 "no-shows", said Randy Alexander, Director of University Housing.

The renovation of residence halls, except Pray-Sims Hall, will be postponed because of the deficit. "There are no other areas we can cut," he said.

Net revenue for the consolidated budgets for the University Center, Allied Center and Debot Center is over $5,000 less than projected, according to Jerry Linberger, Associate Director of the University Center.

"What's good for campus is not necessarily good for us," he said, "because we get paid based on how many students are en­ rolled."

Twenty-eight percent of the Center's revenue comes direct­ ly from the student fees -- $50.70 per semester from each full-time undergraduate stu­ dent.

The rest of the money comes from various areas of the Center. Sales from the Univer­ sity Store constitute 44.7%, and Food Service 10.6%.

A decrease of income from student fees is not the only problem for Food Service. Most four-year campuses in the UW System have food service contracts, adjusted quarterly based on Cost of Living Index. For some reason, the formula for the adjustment did not work properly and caused "made-Debot renovated; Allen to close

by Eric Meyer
Asst. Copy Editor

While the Debot Center renovation may leave fewer students standing in the cold of December, it will mean a longer hike to breakfast and lunch for many Allen Center boarders. Starting Monday, Sept. 23, the Allen center will be closed for breakfast and lunch, and students with meal plans will be fed at Debot. Allen center will be open for continental breakfast and dinner only.

The rerouting of students to Allen Center is part of a savings plan that University food service officials say may include the eventual complete phase-out of Allen center as a student dining facility.

"Because we have fewer boarding students, the University isn't taking in as much money," said Director of University Centers Bob Busch. Busch said the University's two options include putting out another bid or trying to consolidate Allen with Debot to save on labor.

Busch favors the continued contract which is a renewal of the old contract because of only a minor cost increase at the time of the contract's renewal. Matching the current contract by putting out bids during a recession would be difficult, he explained.

Busch doesn't foresee completely closing Allen Center for a few more years. He notes that much is dependent on future enrollment caps and birth rates. "Presently we really can't do that because there isn't enough space. With a couple more years enrollment caps like those of recent years, we may soon be able to do that."

Students who regularly eat at Allen Center have strong feelings about the closing. Freshman Joanna Clinton, does not think the closing is constructive. "I know quite a few freshman that are going to be inquiring for lunch and if they have a 20 minute wait in line, they can't eat. I think the students will go off meals and go on patrols," she said.

"It doesn't seem like they've expanded very much seating area. It's just a lot of hallways and open space," said Kristine Clark, a Sims hall freshman. Another anonymous male student was concerned about the crowding and commented that, "It could have been organized so more (hot serving) lines could be going- and more tables too. It's not that bad once you get a table because there are many food items to choose from."

Busch said that as many tables and chairs as possible were added yesterday. He also feels that long lines and crowding results in part from students who tend to come at the beginning of the meal period.

Busch did offer some solutions for those students having trouble squeezing lunch into their schedule. "We can give them a pass to this building (the U.C.) to eat here. We can give them a sack lunch."

Busch also pointed to a new program that would help ease the burden on Debot. "The (student boarders) will have a meal allowance on their board card that will allow them to come to this building (the U.C.) to eat. We have room in this building that we don't have there," he explained. He also feels continuous service will help to spread out the masses at Debot.

Having undergone its first major renovation since its construction in 1967, Debot Center will now offer more services on the lower level to the additional student boarders that it will take on. Busch mentioned that a much better handicapped accessible, an indoor waiting hall for inclement weather, a hair salon, and the expansion of the convenience store will be welcome additions.

Busch said that the removal of asbestos, the construction of a new roof, and the replacing of pipes, floors, and walls will also add to the building's safety and appearance, while a dramatic savings in maintenance and utilities costs will be realized as well.

Busch says that he has talked with a number of students about the renovation and encourages students to come and see him with their questions and suggestions regarding Allen Center's closing or the Debot renovation.

Renovations make residence halls safer

by Chris Stenbret
News Editor

UWSP campus is receiving the final touches on a summer's full of renovations to residence halls.

Director of University Housing, Randy Alexander coordinated the renovation project which included the modernizing of Pray-Simms Hall and the remodeling of front desks in the eight halls located around Debot.

Alexander said, "Many of the things we did this summer were done to make the buildings more efficient. In all the residence halls, maintenance crews cleaned all the hot water heater cores which would help eliminate the loss of hot water at eight o'clock in the morning."

The hall that received the most attention was Pray-Simms, which is now almost fully handicap accessible. An elevator shaft is now in place but the elevator itself will not be ready until mid-November. Along with easier access to the upper floors in Pray-Simms, rooms also renovate the bathrooms to make them handicap accessible.

Other agencies that spoke included the Women's Resource Center, Habitat for Humanity, Portage County Literacy Council and Big Brothers, Big Sisters.

ACT is a student volunteer organization that places students in community agencies to benefit the community while gaining experience within their major or minor. Womert concluded by saying, "If you are interested in volunteering, there will be a chance for you to sign up in the UC Concourse on Tuesday September 17 or just call the ACT office at x2266."

In Praise of Commitment

Discussions on campuses across the nation struggle to define sexual harassment. Where the line is drawn on what constitutes discrimination or even assault, is in body debated and unfortunately that line is now under the microscope on our campus.

When I heard about the sexual harassment claims against Dr. Fred Leaflgren, I shrugged them off as another rumor. Many people did. Though I've never had Leaflgren as a professor or an employer, I've heard about him from students and faculty, suggests a dedication to his students and profession.

None of those comments--not one--was negative. And his list of honors, awards and accomplishments is a credit to this University.

If it's sad when someone who has been a role model for so many must stand in the hard light of doubt and feel a career of more than a quarter century slip into sorry pools of disgrace.

Sad for Leaflgren...sad for his family...and sad for the University.

Chancellor Keith Sanders agreed saying, "[it's] a sad time, a very painful time for Fred and his family."

Still shadowed among the shame, both of the accused and the accusers, is the encouragement that there exists a way for people to address issues on this campus like sexual harassment. For too long certain situations, like sacred cows, were above reproach. Hidden away in files, covered up in tears.

It appears those days are gone.

The policy in place states that the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point is to:

* foster an environment of respect for the dignity and worth of all students, employees, and guests of the University;
* provide an environment which is conducive to the free and open exchange of ideas; and
* strive to eliminate bias, prejudice, discrimination, and harassment in all forms and manifestations.

I'm not so naïve to believe every situation is either black or white, or that one printed policy will change values and beliefs overnight. But to have a conscious awareness of the complexity of issues like sexual harassment—or any kind of harassment—suggests to me a dynamic commitment to respectful consideration of everyone.

Chancellor Sanders expressed this consideration when he said, "We've thought a lot about this. If the allegations are true, the complainants are experiencing pain, too. And there are many people suffering."

The rumors concerning Leaflgren and the charges against him may have been lies, but until the issue is resolved, that's really all they are--rumors.

It is with an eye to that respect that we've chosen not to use the names of the people bringing charges against Dr. Leaflgren. On the other hand, we've tried to report the facts regarding the case as they were given to us.

We are all saddened by what is, and the suspicion of what might be, but we applaud the chancellor for supporting a campus climate that gives us the opportunity to find out.

In Sanders' words, "we will remain absolutely committed to creating and sustaining a harassment free environment on campus."

What shall we do?
Oh, what shall we do?

Dear Editor:
A problem has arisen concerning the green space around the Health Enhancement Center. The space on the north side is being considered for many different possibilities, basketball/volleyball courts, green space, parking, or an ice skating rink in the winter.

All of these ideas are good ones, but it is obvious not everyone will agree on one. There has to be a way of making everyone happy. The south and west sides of the Enhancement Center are now green space.

So why not allocate a small chunk into parking, and a small part into recreational purposes? I foresee a problem making everything into green space due to lighting. As on any other campus, the student body isn't completely safe wandering around in the dark. If the university is willing to put a lot of lighting by all means, go green!

Express opinions in THE POINTER

Dear Reader:
It seems we have run into a small problem down at THE POINTER — apathy. We are getting wrapped up and busy, trying to fit school, work, relaxation, and even a little barley and bops (now and then) into our schedules. But let's not forget about the little old "letters" page at your friendly and dedicated campus newspaper.

We are sincerely interested in your input, insight, and views on any campus issue. If you feel the need to bitch about something, what better place than in THE POINTER? Thank you for your time, you better have read this.

The other day, I was helping a foreign student with his English homework. He was supposed to show the difference between the words 'legible' and 'readable.' I said, "That's easy, THE POINTER, with its new typeface, is more legible, but no more readable."

The Hunting Experience

Small game hunting season opened on Saturday. The weather was tepid and steamy. I watched the sky for any signs of autumn. However, the weather or the photo-period I was unsuited. I hadn't made any plans to pursue game. After much deliberation I decided to inspect my bow deerstand before the September 21 season opener.

I slipped through the low, swampy woods towards my stand. A thick haze exagerated the beams of light which penetrated the thick forest canopy and tried for the floor. Such dramatic effects quite moved me and I imagined a forest primeval with I in only intruder.

I found my stand much as I had left it last season and I climbed up and sat down. The customary deer trails had not moved. In all I was struck by the familiar of it all. A log was a bit more rotten here, a sapling taller there, but largely unchanged. I say for a while and remained over seasons past.

In my mind's eye I see the image of a derogable among greater fishing incident across an open section of woods. The bird dematerializes into the same forested surroundings of the opposite bush. Scott and I are left standing in a cloud of gun smoke, with barrels jiggling and quite empty laughing at our own absolute incompetence.

I clearly recall a buck my rifle took one opening day, and

State Wide Hunting Forecast

Despite recent days with temperatures in the 90's, summer in the DNR's North Central District is clearly in decline as shorter days and longer nights forecast the first signs of fall.

The change from summer to fall also indicates a switch from summer recreational activities to hunters anticipating small game, such as ruffed grouse and rabbit, and big game, such as bear and white tail deer. In general, the fall hunting outlook appears favorable for most species with robust numbers of deer potentially to be harvested by bow hunters.

DNR North Central District Wildlife Manager, Arlyn Loomans, predicts ruffed grouse hunters will encounter bird population numbers similar to last year. "Spring drumming counts were not quite as high as last year's record count. Nevertheless, we think heavy vegetation, a good food source, and beneficial early summer weather helped ruffed grouse broods to thrive this year."

The ruffed grouse hunting season started in the northern zone September 14. The season ends December 31.

Wild muntain and three successive years of good acorn crops indicate that squirrel hunters should find ample animals to harvest this fall.

There will be mixed results for rabbit hunters, however. Loomans says snowshoe hare continue to struggle to rebuild sufficient numbers. "We have seen some signs of recovery, but snowshoe hare have not rebounded from their low numbers of the recent past," Loomans said. On the other hand, hunters may have better success harvesting cottontail rabbits. Snowshoe hare may be hunted all year statewide, and the cottontail rabbit hunting season opened in the norther zone September 14 and ends February 28.

The early archery season for deer hunters begins September 21 and closes November 17. The major change facing bow hunters this year is the possibility of obtaining a second permit to harvest another deer during the bow hunting season. The procedure to obtain a second permit will work like continued on page 7
Why Should I Care?
by Buck Jennings
Outdoors Editor

A typical response from an apathetic generation. Above and beyond the typically anthropocentric monetary value arguments are our ethical responsibility to the environment and our fellow inhabitants. For those who don’t believe this is reason enough to give a damn, do you understand that as a consumptive user or not, your lives are threatened and most certainly shortened by a polluted environment? The 1990 Greenpeace “Guide to Paper” indicates that most bleached white sanitary products (tissues, toilet paper, tampons and disposable diapers) as well as bleached white coffee filters, have been found to contain traces of the super poisons Dioxin and Furans as well as other toxic organochlorines. These chemicals are residues of the chlorine bleaching process. Greenpeace reports that as many as 10,000 of these chlorinated organic compounds can be formed during the bleaching process. Studies have shown that the milk products packaged in bleached paper cartons can absorb Dioxin in alarming amounts, a discovery that has prompted New Zealand to abandon this use.

The sulphite pulping process (sulphite pulping gives paper mills their characteristic rotten egg smell and results in the release of sulphur dioxide into the atmosphere. Sulphur dioxide is the “active ingredient” in acid rain). And the chlorine bleaching processes have doubtlessly had a substantial negative impact on the Wisconsin River. The best explanation found for why these hazardous processes and their products are still used is: First, purchase a bow hunting license as usual. Harvest a deer in any of the 61 deer management units designated a 2-deer bag management unit. Register your deer in the same unit you harvested it in. However, if the first deer is an antlered buck, the second permit will be for any sex deer in any management unit in the state.

North of Highway 64, deer management units are generally well above their population goals, says Loomans, with mild winters, increased overwinter feeding of deer, stiff poaching fines, and timber cutting practices accounting for the high number of deer. This translates into a potential harvest greater than that of 1990. The Department estimates the annual archery deer harvest may exceed 60,000 this year due to the 2-deer tag limit in 61 deer management units.

South of Highway 64, the DNR’s North Central District deer management units are generally within their population goals, says Loomans; therefore, hunting success and hunter expectations should be similar to that of 1990. Waterfowl hunters can again expect a split season for ducks, opening October 5 in the north. Annual production of local ducks has been termed excellent; however, there will certainly play an important role in hunter success. Loomans points out that by October 5, teal and woodducks may already have left the far northern portion of the state.

Goose hunters should experience similar hunting success as last year, says Loomans. As with ducks, hunting success is dependent on weather conditions. Look for geese to congregate, as they do, near open agricultural fields. The goose season in the District gets underway September 21.

Certainly shorted by a polluted environment?

Sexual harassment plays on power

by Julie Apker

Features Editor

"UWSP cares about what happens to students, we try to keep the university a discrimination-free place," said Mary Williams, special assistant to the chancellor and affirmative action officer.

In conjunction with the UWSP Affirmative Action Office, a committee has been formed to investigate complaints of sexual harassment filed against Fred Leaghen, former assistant chancellor for student life.

The committee, chaired by Joseph Schuler of the Philosophy Department, will ultimately present Chancellor Sanders with the findings of the investigation.

These allegations against Leaghen have brought about a variety of responses from students. In particular, there is a concern about the issue of sexual harassment at UWSP and exactly what is the university's policy.

According to Williams, "Sexual harassment is a form of discrimination. One example of this discrimination is an individual thinking that he or she can exercise some power over another person, such as getting some type of sexual gratification or forcing unwanted sexual attention on someone in a class or work setting."

In an interview Tuesday, Sept. 17, Williams stressed the importance of empowerng people to confront situations of harassment and speak up on their own behalf.

"Educationally, we don't want to be overly suspicious," explained Williams. "But by the same token, we want to support reporting patterns of behavior people either don't like or feel is inappropriate."

The University of Wisconsin System defines sexual harassment as "unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other physical conduct and expressive behavior where -submission to such conduct is made either explicitly or implicitly a term or condition of an individual's employment or education; -submission to or rejection of such conduct by an individual is used as the basis for academic or employment decisions affecting that individual; or -such conduct has the purpose or effect of substantially interfering with an individual's academic or professional performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or demeaning employment or educational environment."

Sexual harassment involves several levels, including sexual coercion that brings about economic harm and affects the class or work environment and any behavior or subtle activity that contributes to a hostile setting. It is recognized as a violation of civil rights laws, U.S. Equal Opportunity Commission Rules and by the civil law courts.

"Sexual harassment involves a wide spectrum of behavior," said Williams. "It can range from posting sexual cartoons in the workplace to more physical issues of taking opportunities to deliberately touch an individual or requesting for physical relations in return for better grades or certain job situations."

According to Williams, in the six years she has been affiliated with affirmative action, there have been fewer reports of sexual harassment made by students about faculty members than with complaints involving work situations.

Although 98 percent of all sexual harassment is experienced by women, men can also be victims, as in the Leaghen case. Assistance for both men and women in this situation exists at UWSP and Williams encourages students to contact the Affirmative Action Office with their concerns.

"People who are subjected to all forms of harassment tend to feel they don't have any power in the situation and think they should avoid it," commented Williams. "UWSP is committed to providing its faculty, staff and students with a harassment-free environment."

A festival for all cultures

On Saturday Sept. 28 the UWSP South Asia Society (SAS) of will co-sponsor the fourth annual Festival of India.

An evening of dancing, dining and entertainment the festival's menu includes authentic Indian dishes such as Tandoori Chicken, Patri (an In­dian bread), Vegetable Curry, and Mango Ice Cream. Guests will be able to observe or participate in popular dances of India. Mehandi Aba -Lalched, an internationally renowned professional dancer from India, will perform classical and folk dances.

According to Brogna no, the foodservice company, Servicemaster Education Food Management, has lost about $68,000 within the first two weeks of school.

The company has determined it can no longer afford to keep the facility fully open and operational. Several options exist to compensate students on meal plans, and Brogna no thinks that its time for negotiation.

"Student option is mixed. People are upset and don't want A&F to close. But the last thing we want to happen is for this foodservice company to leave," he explained. "We need to focus on providing students with options, such as extending Allen Center dinner hours or allowing students to change their meal plans. Administration seems to work with us and make up for the inconvenience."

Serving as RHA President keeps Brogna no as extremely busy. He makes time to serve as a senator for Student Government Association.

An English major, he enjoys reading and identifies James Joyce and Charles Dickens as his favorites. In addition to his student involvement and academics, Brogna no is an avid ophthalmologist.

Brogna no considers his start as House President "extremely busy," but "it did stumble into it, but it all fell into place-I've liked every aspect of my experiences!"
.38 Special" in concert

Guitar-driven rock band "38 Special" will perform its popular blend of pop and rock n' roll Friday, Oct.11 at 7:30 p.m. in the Quandt Fieldhouse at UWSP.

The S13 reserved seating tickets are currently on sale at UWSP UC Information Desk and The Store locations in Stevens Point, Wisconsin Rapids, Marshfield. The concert is sponsored by the University Activities Board (UABS).

The band's tour follows the release of their album "Bone Against Steel" on the Charisma label. Featuring the hit song, "The Sound of Your Voice," the album boasts "crunching guitar pop," long considered the .38 Special's trademark.

Lead vocalist Donnie Van Zandt has defined the band's .38 Special" in concert latest offering as the result of "an intensive year writing individually and in collaboration, the highways are littered with the songs we wrote and discarded until we found the right balance."

According to a publicist, four months of studio work went into the 13-song "tour de force," an album rich with American story-telling spirit and tradition. Jeffries music that lifts the spirit and quickens the pulse—classic .38 Special" and then some. On "Bone Against Steel," the group offers their fans a collection of compelling songs destined to rank alongside past .38 Special" accomplishments.

The band consider their recent effort a display of distinctive strength, and a result of the comaraderie.

Any additional donations will also be accepted.

The annual Festival of India is just one of many projects for the South Asia Society. In addition to informal meetings, the group celebrates holidays and special events from a variety of cultures on a monthly basis. Some highlights include the Festival of Colors and the Festival of Lights. SAS also regularly holds potluck dinners featuring foods from many cultures. Since SAS is dedicated to fostering the exchange of culture and aiding global relationships, events are open to the general public as well as group members.

Over 600 people attended last year's Festival of India and about $5000 was raised for the Donah College scholarship fund. Volunteers are needed to help with the expected turn-out. A meeting will be held on Monday, Sept. 23 at 9 p.m. in the Mitchell Room in the UC. Anyone who would like to help is encouraged to attend. All volunteers will receive dinner after the festival.

The Society of South Asia is open to anyone of any cultural background. Persons interested in joining can attend the Sept. 23 meeting of contact Jamil Hosain at 345-1209.

by Mark Gillette
Sports Editor

This past week both the men's and women's cross country teams traveled to hot and muggy North Central College in Illinois to participate in the invitational there. Each team finished second, the men in a field of 17, and the women in a field of 12.

On the men's side, Coach Rick Wit was happy with the meet. "I am extremely pleased with the way we did as a team. Our guys know we are one of the best teams in the country." Wit added, "We were ranked 9th last week and I feel we are better than that. In this invitational, both North Central didn't take first with 36 points, right in front of Point.

Rod Garcia placed highest among runners from Point, coming in second with a time of 26:41 right behind John Collert of North Central, who had a time of 26:30. Matt Hamilton finished 4th for Point with a time of 27:03. In sixth place was a time of 27:13 By Ry.

Point runners Jason Zoltek and Dan Gliemici came in 14th (27:21) and 15th (27:29) respectively.

The United States Hockey League has announced its schedule of 240 regular season games for the 1991-92 season. Many of the teams have played with the Madison Capitols. Some of those ties include current Pointers Paul Calofield, Jeff Marshall, Monte Conrad and former Pointers Rick Fleming, Joe Boucher, Jared Redders and John Basill.

The Madison Capitols are the only team on the change in the USHL. As for the first time this season, they will be known as the Wisconsin Capitols. The Capitols will still be based in Madison and play their games in Hartleyana. There are 71 playing dates for the regular season. Most of the games is concentrated on the weekends. Other than the Wisconsin Capitols, the nine other teams are located in Sioux City, Dubuque, Waterloo, and Des Moines, Iowa, St. Paul and Rochester, Minnesota, Omaha, Nebraska, and Thousand Bay, Ontario, Canada. The USHL regular season concludes on March 8.

Packer Madness Firsthand

by Mark Gillette
Sports Editor

As I was roaming around the outside of Lambeau Field with my dad and brother in search for tickets for last Sunday's game against the Bucs, I was amazed at the excitement surrounding the game. Think about it, the Pack lost two straight games that many think they should've won and they're still gathering from around the state to see them.

Still searching for our entrance to the game, we laughed at a guy who's trying to "deal" us a ticket for eighty bucks. Instead, the smell of brats attracts us to the nearest grill. Tailgating is the life, before and after a Packer game.

I wish I could do it every week. We finally find tickets and as we fight our way into the turnstiles of the stadium, I notice Mike "Mad Dog" Douglas in the distance. Remember him, he used to play defense for the Packers back in the 80's. He was introduced before the game with many other ex-Packers including Ray Nitschke, Jan Stenerud, Willie Wood, Willie Davis, Larry McCarren, and John Anderson, to name a few.

The place was totally packed as the Bucs won the coin toss and elected to receive the opening kick off.

There were so many mental mistakes that the Packers made it would take forever to mention them. For instance, Keith Woodside's two penalties in the first half. Ron Hallstrom's big holding penalty that offset a spectacular touchdown pass from Don Majkowski to Sterling Sharpe. The most frustrating of them all was when Chris Jacke missed not only one, but two field goals at the end of the first half.

The bright spot of the first half was Bryce Paup's safety on Vinny Testaverde. Paup ended up with 4 1/2 sacks and the Pacifiers finished with seven for the day. Not bad for a team without Tim "Holdout" Harris. In the second half, I was_distraught as temps started flying nearby me in the stands as a lady won and they're still gathering from around the state to see them.

Forward to the Kickoff to the Bucs, the rejuvenated Packer defense stopped them cold. The Bucs punted the ball to the Packers for their last chance to score. On the first play, Majik launched a long pass from the Bucs 44 yard line to tiny Perry Kemp at the 8 yard line, who managed to hold on to the ball.

I didn't like. When the P.A. announcer informed the fans that anybody was being a hassle in the stands to contact security personnel, fans in the vicinity of this lady started pointing fingers at her.Security immediately escorted her out of the park, much to the delight of the fans. I thought this was hysterical-talk about power of the people.

Next thing I knew, the Packers were inside the 10 yard line threatening to close Tampa's lead to 13-12. The following play, Majik threw a screen to Vince Workman, who tipped into the end zone for a TD.

There was still 2:03 remaining in the game for the Packers to score one of their famous come-from-behind victories.

HOMECOMING 1991

.38 Special Talent Night Yell Like Hell Hidden Treasure Maps
New Gn’R album a ‘hurricane’
by Jason Fare

It was destined to never happen. The first five lines of the album provide a fitting beginning before the tidal wave breaks. "I'll take a nicotine, caffeine, sugar fix 'cos I don't get tired of trying to find when your innocence dies/You'll find the blues/Seems all our heroes were born to lose".

A hurricane might be a better description of the third Guns 'N' Roses record, or a freight train wreck. It is a truly mammoth collection of music (2 CD’s each with at least 75 minutes of music). 27 new songs, a cover of Bob Dylan, and another of Paul McCartney. The compositions twist, turn, and slither like a 100 m.p.h. survival ride.

It's evident from the start that this band refuses to compromise an inch for the sake of record sales or fame. There are no clichés, flashy guitar solos, sappy lyrics, contrived ballads or wasted songs. Hearts are torn from sleeves and put on public display. Nervous ends are exposed with razor blades.

After all the unnecessary hoopla and controversial nonsense surrounding the band, this record is a beautiful bucket of spit in the face of its premise critics. The guitar talents displayed by Slash are among the most intricate and interesting of anyone that picked up the instrument. His playing is one of the highlights throughout, adding a haunting atmosphere and presence to songs such as "Coma", "Civil War", "Locomotive", and "Live And Let Die".

The range of styles the band utilizes this time around is especially impressive. "Dust N' Bones" is wild, grungy blues overblown. The cover of "Live And Let Die" frenetically screams with speed and passion. "November Rain" features piano work by Axl Rose, an expansive, touching ballad-of-sorts.

Elements of funk, thrash, and even country flourish among the usual blues-driven hard rock. "Use Your Illusion" is the most innovative and encompassing record that the band has ever bumbled into the metal genre, stereotyped like the rest. If Queen's "The Game" was a critique to the disease of the eighties, "Use Your Illusion" is the landmark on intelligent rock and roll analysis: Mindcrime" was the landmark on intelligent bard writing, but "Use Your Illusion" is the landmark on intelligent bard rock. Of course, the music is not the only spectacle. The opening inner screen of the video utilizes Ibis hoopla and controversial lyrics. The video for "November Rain" features David Fincher, who did "Empire of the Sun" and "Shivers." The video for "Use Your Illusion" features "Civil War" and "Live And Let Die". The music video for "Use Your Illusion" is released on February 1, 1992.

"A hurricane might be a better description of the third Guns 'N' Roses record, or a freight train wreck. It is a truly mammoth collection of music (2 CD's each with at least 75 minutes of music)."

Spud Bowl 1991 adds flavor to UWSP
by Lisa Lemke

What is it about watching a good football game that just makes you want to eat and eat and eat? Well, why not indulge these unexplainable urges at Spud Bowl 1991?

Mark your calendar for Saturday, September 28. The activities begin at 4:30 p.m. on the field adjacent to Allen Center with the "Spuds and Suds Picnic."

Potato's in all forms will be on the menu at the picnic. There will be big potatoes, Little potatoes, tan potatoes, pale potatoes, round potatoes, flat potatoes, happy potatoes, sad potatoes...you get the idea. They’ll all taste good.

A deck jockey for WSPT along with lots of crazy people competing in various potato games will provide entertainment.

John Jury, Director of Campus Activities, promises the games will be "poofy" and "stupid," but "lots of fun."

The "Spuds and Suds" picnic will have a different form this year, due to the enthusiastic participation in last year’s event. A preliminary competition will be held Thursday night to choose 16 teams of four potato competitors who will compete at the picnic. At the picnic the field will be narrowed again to four teams. Deadline for entering teams in Spudlympics is Monday, September 23.

To add a little flavor, Stevens Point Brewery's Spud Premier Beer will again be featured at this year's Spuds and Suds Picnic and other Spud Bowl activities. The beer actually contains potato starch that provides the beer with a unique taste.

"There will be big potatoes, little potatoes, round potatoes, flat potatoes...you get the idea."

Stevie and Stephanie Pointer will also be on hand to sign autographs. You'll want to attend the picnic just so you can try to figure out if Stephanie is that girl in your computer class and Stevie is that guy you saw in Debo.

Following the picnic, the Pointer football team will kick off their home season at Goerke Field. The Pointers take on UW-Whitewater at 7:30 p.m. Halftime will feature entertainment from the Pointer Pon Pon Squad and the Spudlympic finals.

Immediately after the game the festivities will continue in the Allen Center basement with the 5th Quarter Party.

Now that you're all pumped for potato-rama, admission to all three events is as follows: adult, $11.00; student with UWSP I.D. or youth, $5.00; and student with UWSP All Sports Pass, free. Tickets are available at the door or in advance from the Stevens Point/Plower Area Chamber of Commerce, UWSP University Relations, the UWSP Information Desk, and Rural Insurance of Plover.

Spud Bowl, now in its fifth year, is designed to promote awareness of the strong potato industry and unite the community and university. In addition, money is raised through the event for the Spud Bowl Scholarship Fund. Winners of 1991 Spud Bowl Scholarships will be announced at halftime of the game.

long enough before he dropped it while going out of bounds. The Bees thought he never had possession, but the play stood. After a couple more plays to run down the clock, the Packers brought in Chris Jacke to kick the winning field goal. Jacke escaped being the scapegoat as he made the field goal, and the Packers held on to win despite a very close play at the end of the game on a Vinny Testaverde pass to Willie Drewery that could’ve easily turned into a touchdown if he had caught the ball.

After the game the people around me were going crazy. Nothing can beat a good o’ day at the stadium.

Volleyball Struggles through Up and Down Season

by Jim Lauty

The UWSP women’s volleyball team started the season on a good note beating Mammouth College at the Elmhurst, Illinois Tournament. The team then slipped, losing two matches to St. Augustine and Elmhurst. The team then bounced back beating a highly powerful and flashy team in Purdue Calumet. This was great to see considering last year’s slow start. The team was 2-3 in Elmhurst after losing in the first round to North Central.

The team then played St. Norbert’s at home last Tuesday night, September 10. They started out with a bang, showing Pointer fans their high powered explosiveness but failing to finish off their opponents. St. Norbert’s lost the first game but salvaged the next three to win the match. Jodi Lindquist and Dawsie Updated and the powerful attack along with Jodi Soderberg’s 26 assists.

Point then traveled to Whitewater to play Carthage and Whitewater Friday night. They failed to win either match but played impressively, hopefully good enough to bounce back for their next match. The next morning Point played St. Mary’s and had many opportunities to win but came up short, losing the match.

Point will travel to Oshkosh Wednesday and then host a quad meet on Saturday in Berg gym. Please help support the women’s volleyball team and come cheer them on.
