Comm week brings communication in politics

Local legislators agree on the importance of constituency involvement

by Sarah L. Newton

Editor-in-Chief

Communication in Politics was the topic of discussion when Senate Majority Leader David Helbach and Assemblyman Stanley Gruszynski visited campus earlier this week as part of Communication Week 1992.

Sponsored by PRSSA, Helbach and Gruszynski were joined Monday evening by UWSP’s Special Consultant to the Chancellor for Equity and Affirmative Action, Judy Goldsmith.

“Politics is communication,” stated Gruszynski early in the program, “whether it’s in constituent work, one on one, or on the assembly floor, success in politics is measured by an ability to communicate ideas.”

Goldsmith pointed out the issue of the “American public’s cynicism with the electoral process,” and questioned the legislators about the “challenges of delivering information to and from their constituencies.”

“People have become restless because their community stability is disappearing,” said Gruszynski.

In addition to the proposed media problem, Goldsmith discussed the negative stereotyping effects of television advertising, particularly during election campaigns.

Students challenge educational environment

SGA’s “Face to Face” discusses student opinion

by Eric Meyer

Copy Editor

Improving education and strengthening the educational environment were common themes of student questions fired at administrators during the second annual Face to Face meeting held a week ago yesterday.

The event combined a dinner and discussion session, and gave student leaders the opportunity to ask questions of the six member panel.

The panel included Bill Meyer, acting assistant chancellor for student life; Randy Alexander, housing director; David Hirsh, a UW-Oshkosh student and member of the Board of Regents; Herbert Grover, state public information officer for the Department of Public Instruction; Gary Alexander, UWSP faculty member and Information Services Dean; and Keith Sanders.

On the issue of minority faculty hiring, Grover emphasized the Regents’ commitment to making sure that the UW System administration was not composed entirely of white males.

Grover cited the presence of two women and two minority members on the Board of Regents, and noted that there are several females on staff as well as a new UW System president and chancellor, Catherine Lyall, who is female.

“I would suggest that right now there are more women in the administrative positions than in the 17 years I’ve been on the UW Board of Regents,” said Grover.

Fifty percent of the people who came to UWSP last year for faculty and academic staff positions were women, added Sanders. “I’m very proud of this place,” he said, “because we are in the whitest congressional district in the United States and we’re setting the pace in hiring and retaining women and minorities on our faculty and staff.”

“The number of people (women and minority members) that are out there, unfortunately, is not that great. I wish it was larger,” said Student Regent David Hirsh in exploring the problem. “For a variety of reasons people (women and minority members) don’t decide to get involved.”

Questioned about the realignment of student life administration and the University’s Quality Reinvestment Program, Sanders responded, “The basic principle is this. When we have a choice on this campus of cutting student services or instruction, or other cuts—we’re going to use administrative costs and keep the money as close as we can for instruction as we can.”

Sanders was pressed by one student on the issue of high school students’ accessibility to an education at UWSP, given higher enrollment standards.

“We want to pick those students who are most likely to do well here. As it turns out, the two best predictors of who will come, and move expeditiously through our program, are rank in high school class, and second, ACT scores. Third, is a whole group of intangibles.”

“We’ll get 3,800-4,000 applications for about 1,400 positions in our freshman class. How do we make these choices?” asked Sanders. “I don’t know how to make those decisions any better than that,” he continued.

Gary Alexander suggested that students always have the option of going to a two or four year school elsewhere and then transferring to UWSP, an established student, during their junior year.

Other topics of concern to students were the length of time it takes an education major to graduate, UWSP’s role in promoting environmental awareness, and promoting tolerance of homosexuals in the residence hall setting.

“Promoting the programs in the residence halls, to a large degree, depends on the interests of the residents,” he continued.

California execution first in 25 years

At least three lawsuits had been filed by Monday to claim for damages caused by the disastrous Chicago flood last week.

The flood occurred when 250 million gallons of Chicago River water leaked into an underground tunnel system. In attempt to prevent further damage to the tunnels or building basements, water is being pumped out slowly.

State law states businesses shut down by the flood cannot sue for lost profits if the disaster is the result of negligence.

Damages could be collected, however, if the flood is rated a willful or wanton act.

Mayor Richard Daley has said several city workers knew of a leak in the tunnel for a month, but failed to act...

The plaintiff in the cases range from a waitress to an insurance company.

Supreme Court faces abortion issue

The abortion rights issue went before the Supreme Court Wednesday as opposing sides continue to voice their opinions.

The justices will hear arguments on a Pennsylvania law that regulates abortions. They will then decide whether the law violates a woman's constitutional rights. Their decision will be made by July.

The justices views appear varied. Two of the nine are known to favor the abortion right proclaimed in the 1973 Roe vs. Wade ruling while four are opposed and three are undecided.

Abortion in Wisconsin are banned after fetal viability except to save the women life or health.

Murderer returned to WI after unsuccessful freedom attempt

Former Milwaukee police officer and model, Lawrence “Bando” Bembeneck, was returned to Wisconsin on Monday after an unsuccessful attempt to gain her freedom in Canada.

Bembeneck was returned to Taycheedah Correctional Institution, a maximum-security prison located in Fond du Lac, to complete her life sentence for murder.

Christine Schultz, Bembeneck’s victim, was the former wife of her husband at the time, Eilfred O. Schultz Jr.

Bembeneck had escaped from Taycheedah in July 1990 after serving a little more than eight years. Her former fiancé, Dominic A. Ogliatta, helped Bembeneck scale the wire fence surrounding Taycheedah.

Charges filed for flood damages

Robert Altohn Harris because the first person to die in California’s gas chamber in 25 years. He was executed early Tuesday morning.

In the last six hours a federal appeals court stayed his executions four times. At one point Harris was in the gas chamber only to be removed...

A state request to overturn the stays was denied the morning by the U.S. Supreme Court and ruled “no further stays” by federal judges.

Harris had appealed his sentence 16 times since being convicted of murder in 1979.

Should students be allowed to view evals?
by Erie Meyer

There is a general consensus among students about what makes instructors desirable, students will steer clear of instructors who do not fit their collective model of what an instructor should be.

This leaves the least desirable instructor with no students. Without minimum enrollments, classes are cancelled and eventually an instructor is out of a job.

Should students have that much power? Are they more adept at judging a qualified instructor than faculty from that instructor’s department who are experts in the field?

Is good teaching the only criterion by which an instructor should be evaluated? What about research ability and scholarly contribution to the field? Is that something students can fairly evaluate? By determining who gets retained, students would indeed make these complicated decisions. The teacher questions deserve thought.

Standard campus evaluation forms don’t answer the question of whether an instructor is “easy.” In fact, they don’t answer any of the common questions about course difficulty, grading procedures and attendance that many students want to know about.

Take a look at the standard form some time, (as I did before I wrote this) and you will be amazed at how unhelpful it is.

You say you want a quality education? Perhaps part of your education is learning to deal with the variety of professors and personalities that make up the university faculty.

Turn evaluations over to students and they will eventually define the scope of who we retain enough that we may as well hire dynamic speakers who give every student an “A” and do away with evaluations. We don’t turn faculty evaluations into the equivalent of a pro football scouting report. The evaluation process currently in place may leave something to be desired, yet it has served the trials of many years.

American bashing rings true
Auto industry base for competition
by Kristin Hoffman

U.S. Lazy? How dare those Japanese say that about us Americans.

They sure do. Because we Americans have lazy contests. It’s the reason we are friends competing to determine who’s the laziest. We take pride in it. It’s the reason we are friends competing to determine who’s the laziest.

It’s all around us: “I waited ‘til the last minute to do my homework” is our motto. Usually someone is saying they just printed their paper out five minutes before class. We brag about being lazy when we should be trying to get about what we should be doing.

Oh, I forget, that’s not cool. Sorry. How dare those Japanese call us lazy!

I passed a group of guys the other day and I overheard one say he was too lazy to drop his clothes, so he let his clothes hang there. That’s double lazier.

Is he too lazy to fill a form and then be too lazy to study for the course.

How dare they call us lazy!

But, how dare those Japanese call us lazy!

There are few American garages to fix American cars. If we want them to buy our cars, we have to make it convenient for them.

For I am saying we should burn the American flag and boo the “Bad American” slogan. Absolutely not—it’s important to support our country. But of equal importance is the realization that Japan is not at fault for our economic difficulties. Who’s us? Those of us who won the procrastination contest.

Why don’t we get so mad, then, when the Japanese tell us we are lazy? Because on the whole it’s true and the truth hurt, but it becomes from someone else.

Consequently, the Japanese automobile industry is out of a target of persecution once again. In San Francisco, hate letters and threats are being sent to Japanese, who are American citizens. In Detroit, people with Japanese-made cars have to park in the last row of parking lots. The Japanese have pinpointed our weakness, but in each case have quickly retracted their statements. Why? Because their statements are lies? Doubtful. Because we are bigger than they are? More likely.

In any case, realize we are the source of many of our own problems and the only way to prove the Japanese wrong is to begin to work harder and care more about our country. I hope we can do this. If not, the United States will not be as great as it was, and is today. This will directly affect us and our children in a way that will not make us proud to be Americans.

Theatre and SGA show commitment to budget issues
by Erik Oberg
Contributor

This w-rk’s article about SGA’s funding and its recent veto of $2,000 from the Theatre Department’s budget shows the tension that often occurs between student groups and those who hold the purse strings.

This isn’t just a conflict between theatre students needing money for one of the best theatre programs in the U.W. system and SGA saying “No.”

Both sides have legitimate arguments. Producing productions money away from the Theatre Department is tantamount to taking money for field studies and microscopes from CNR.

At the same time, SGA has responsibility not to saddle next year’s student body with a carryover deficit.

Money is tight, and getting tighter for education. We must stop squabbling amongst ourselves and take the fight to those who can effect the change: the Board of Regents, the legislature, the governor.

I sat in awe and with a deep respect for Mr. Brechem and others who stated their case eloquently.

They renewed my faith in student body’s ability to arrive themselves. If we all showed the commitment the theatre students had April 2nd, and SGA members show every week to the aforementioned, change can be made.

There is a spark within each of us. We need only act upon it.

Grading on a curve designed for special interest students

Dear Editor:

It's been suggested that our University is infested—or infected with lazy students.

It has also been inferred that there are sub-standard and undeserving students lurking about our classrooms.

Students that don't put forth a good faith effort and are consequently a burden and embarrassment to all the hard working pillars of academic excellence (whether we are known as honor students...or is that students)? I agree there are a few students who survive by the power of the curve, while they party their lives away.

However, I also know that there are a lot of students that work as hard as their academic superiors.

Unfortunately, for these students, there are those students (that they are required to take) that are extremely difficult to digest. It is for these students, that the grading curve was designed.

I believe it would be a crime to deny the world the talent of a great artistic mind simply because there was an unforgiving grading system.

It seems a little wasteful to fail someone in a subject that is unrelated to his or her major, and ultimately driving that person away from school, just so we can brag about "being all we can be."

As for those who think they can continue to ride the curve, I believe eventually those students either see the light or weed themselves out of the system.

I think we should keep the curve, and talk to those party animals about trying a little harder.

Recycling not enough, sorting a necessity

Dear Editor:

Recycling is becoming a household word. Many of us think of aluminum cans and paper in terms of monetary profits. However, the significance of recycling goes well beyond the dollar sign.

Many of us still live a throw away life style; now we have to learn a new one. If we are to save our natural resources, as well as our environment, we must all do our part in the recycling process.

In most of the University buildings there are four containers labeled aluminum, paper, plastic and waste. People on campus, for one reason or another, are having difficulty disposing of their waste in the proper container. As a result, maintenance personnel must spend extra time sorting.

Furthermore, materials that could have been recycled are contaminated and have become unusable. If we are to preserve our world we must all do our part in the recycling process.

Please take a moment to improve our future by sorting your trash.

Environmental ears to be soothed by L.J. Booth

Dear Editor:

Earth week should be a time for us to consider the damage that we are inflicting on the earth and to take action to help the planet begin to heal itself.

It should also be a time for celebrating life and all the joy the world holds for us.

Tonight, L.J. Booth will help us in our celebration. L.J. is a songwriter and singerextraordinary! His songs are diverse in style, melody, and mood, but they're sure to make you smile. As one reviewer put it, L.J. is "one of those rare performers who leaves your heart warmer upon hearing him."

So, if you'd like to leave your cares behind for a few hours, come to the Freemont Terrace in the U.C. tonight from 8:30 - 11:00 and hear L.J. Booth. You're sure to leave with a smile on your face and a song in your heart.

Thanks to SGA, Campus Greens, and all the students on this campus, it's also free! See you there.

Old homes as rental units need help in energy efficiency

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to the very high utility bills I've received from Wisconsin Public Services.

I'm not upset with W.P.S., I am upset with the lack of regulations on landlords of off-campus student housing.

Too many rental units, such as the one I reside in, are old and poorly maintained, which results in massive energy loss.

As a student, I have neither the time nor money to make my rental unit more energy efficient.

Baseball’s season full of new looks
by Mike McGill
Sports Writer

As I woke up a little bit earlier than I had wanted to on Easter Sunday, I stumbled through my living room. I rubbed the sand out of my eyes and cocked my head to the left, zeroing in on the empty coffee table baskets on my coffee table.

How nice. After years of being passed over, good ol’ Peter Cottontail remembered me and my brother this year. Hey, you want to remind St. Nick, Pete? I don’t know what made him resign his gift-giving at my house, maybe it was because I cracked a 3.0 GPA last semester, but I’m not complaining.

And just like in the old days, I was all wide-eyed and young, the Easter Bunny left some jellybeans, chocolate bunnies, and... baseball cards! Baseball cards! Yes! And just in time for the start of the new season!

"My favorite dark horse of the year goes to our very own Milwaukee Brewers. Hey, I’ve just got a feeling."

As I thumbed through my six packs (four Topps and two Fleer for you avid card collectors out there) I noticed a few cards that were already outdated.

Dave Winfield, Bobby Bonilla, Gary Sheffield and Kirk Gibson are all on new teams now. I also saw players who are demanding multyear, multimillion dollar contracts like Roger Clemens, Darryl Strawberry and Ruben Sierra.

It got me thinking, $7 million a year for Ryne Sandberg? Wow. The free agent market has blown salaries out of proportion and it is getting players to switch teams more often than their underwear.

I can’t even keep up with current rosters, I still think Strawberry’s and even Eddie Murray’s arrivals at L.A. are fresh news.

NBA’s second season starts

Bulls begin defense of title against the Heat

by Mark Gillette
Sports Editor

Can the Chicago Bulls do it? Can they repeat as National Champions?

They certainly have prepared well for the 1992 playoffs, the NBA’s second season, winning the fourth most games in NBA history with a 67-17 winning percentage (97-15).

Michael Jordan missed a couple of games toward the end of the season, playing the last game of the regular season despite injuring his back during the Bulls last victory against the Pistons.

In order for the number one seeded Bulls to reach the Finals, they must first smoke the Miami Heat, who are making a first-ever appearance in the playoffs this year. With pivotal sixth man Willis Burton injured, the Heat need somebody else to step up and take the pressure.

If the Bulls get by the Heat in the best of five series, they’ll play the winner of the New York Knicks - Detroit Pistons matchup.

These four number and number five seeded Eastern Conference teams will see Patrick Ewing and Coach Pat Riley up against Isiah Thomas and rebound master Dennis Rodman.

Boston and Indiana pair against each other in the battle of number two and number seven seeds.

The Celtics hope that Larry Bird will be in playing condition against the Pacers, who have the second worst road record at 14-27 among the playoff teams behind the 10-31 Miami Heat. The Pacers will have a hard time beating the Celtics at the Boston Garden.

Cleveland may pose the biggest challenge to the Bulls in the East, as they own the second best record in the NBA, along with the Portland Trailblazers. The Cavaliers face the New Jersey Nets, who are making their first playoff appearance in what seems like ages.

In the Western Conference, the Trailblazers have the best record at 57-25. But for the Blazers to win over the Lakers, they need a healthy Clyde Drexler, who has been limited playing time due to injury. Preliminary pointer Terry Porter may be expected to carry more of the load with Drexler not 100 percent.

The Lakers barely made it to the post season, narrowly edging the Houston Rockets, who only had to win one of their last three games but who managed to win none. The playoffs will not be as easy for Magic Johnson’s playmaking.

The Phoenix Suns and San Antonio Spurs are the number four and five seeds in the West. The Spurs may get past the Suns, but aren’t expected to go much farther as they turn to the run and gun style under Jerry Tarkanian next year.

Number two seed Utah will challenge Larry Brown’s number seven seeded Clippers. Karl Malone and John Stockton will be too much for the Clippers to handle; they are making their first appearance in the playoffs since they were in California.

The new world champions in ’92 may be from the Golden Gate city of San Francisco. Golden State has a coach in Don Nelson who is one of the best in the business and players in Chris Mullin, Tim Hardaway and Billy Owens who can do a lot of damage.

Their first step is to get by the Seattle SuperSonics. If they get by the Sonics their next two opponents will likely be the Jazz and then the Blazers. The Bulls will stop the Sonics; the Warriors make it that far and the Bulls are in the NBA playoffs that is the champion won’t be crowned until June. Who postpone the inaugural NBA playoffs is that the champion won’t be crowned until June. Who postpone the inaugural NBA playoffs is that the championship would be won until June.
The Pointer Poll: Have you been able to register for the classes you need to graduate?

(Compiled by Julie Apker and Al Crouch)

"I never had a problem until this semester. The requirement to have the instructor's signature before registering for a class is ridiculous and really takes away from the whole idea of priority by class registration. Supposedly it will be abolished next year. If it is - all the better."

"I was in and out in under 2 minutes! I suppose being a 2nd semester senior they're anxious to see me leave!"

"I've only had a few problems with certain classes, but I was able to get into every class I initially wanted to."

"Being an undeclared major, I haven't had much difficulty getting into classes that may be important in any one major. I have found it frustrating in the past trying to fill my general degree requirements when classes close while I'm standing in line to register."

"I've only registered a couple of times but already I had one problem trying to get a class I wanted. It only happened once, but I've heard that Comm. core classes are sometimes hard to get into."
Communication is key for South Asia Society prez.

by Meredith Medland

"International students often tell me that I am different and American students ask me why I am different; however I don't feel different," stated Sally Jane Rimple, 32 year old non-traditional senior.

Rimple is president of South Asia Society, a student organization established in 1989 to foster global family ideals and promote an exchange of culture, friendship and understanding among members and the community.

The 20 members of South Asia Society are getting ready for the Fifth Festival of India to be held at SPASH on September 17.

The Festival of India brings cultures together to produce something better than any other one culture could produce. The project provides an Indian dinner and entertainment for over 800 participants so that they may pursue an education and become active leaders in the India of the future.

Money raised by the Festival of India educates the disadvantaged, widowed and divorced women, so that they may become active leaders in the India of the future. It also provides a yearly scholarship at the Shrimati P.N. Doshi College in Bombay, India.

Rimple has learned a lot about communication through her experiences with this culturally diverse group. "We can never communicate enough. Often meanings and interpretations of things I say get confused," said Rimple.

Rimple finds that being the only American in the group can sometimes cause problems. "Americans are often seen as the leader and even though they would like to see themselves in leadership, often they don't know how," Rimple said.

Rimple has been challenged throughout the semester to change the idea held by the group that she is the American she is the leader. To avoid this, Rimple encourages input from everyone and tries to delegate responsibility.

"Even though they (international students) are thinking, they have concerns like any other person, they are dedicated, and they do want to be members," Rimple said.

Rimple will graduate this year with a major in Political Science and International Studies. She also works at Shopko and St. Michael's hospital.

Next year's president, Jami Hussain, comes from Bangladesh, and will be the only representative of this country in the organization.

Upcoming events include a Literary Symposium on April 22nd at 7:30 in the Communication Room of the U.C.
Fun with Nitewalkers

by Buck Jennings

A man is driving his car early Sunday morning. He pumps his brakes helplessly as his car slides through an intersection, he narrowly escapes an accident. The roads on this Easter Sunday morning were slippery indeed. Not because of snow, ice or oil, but because of worms. Yep, like Jesus Christ himself returning from the grave, the weekend rains and warm weather combined to drive hordes of night crawlers from their earthly catacombs.

The earthworms flocked to the warm asphalt, creating at once a bon-danza for local wildlife and a serious driving hazard. Where are these worms in late summer? When catfishing and carp tournaments force the angler to pay up to $2.00 for 12 little worms. The frugal and opportunistic angler can capitalize on this worm "run" and stockpile the worms with a healthy supply of crawlers.

"But Buck," you ask "how can I catch in on this worm bonanza?" Well, the midwest worm enthusiast simply cannot compete with the spawning, million acre worm ranches of the west, where stanced "worm-boys" get paid to do nothing but rope and wrangle wily worms.

Show highlights minerals and gems

The Heart of Wisconsin Gem and Mineral Society is hosting its 19th annual show on May 2 and 3 in Wisconsin Rapids. Our society is a non-profit, educational organization made up of about ninety members from all over the central Wisconsin area.

Interested parties should attend the:
Heart of Wisconsin Gem and Mineral Show
Saturday May 2 and Sunday May 3
10 am to 5 pm, each day
East Junior High Fieldhouse
Wisconsin Rapids
Free donations acceptable
It is our hope to reach as many people as possible who share our interest in Earth Science and rocks, minerals and fossils.

However with a little bit of foresight and a minimum investment one can insure a good supply of crawlers to last throughout the summer months. WHAT TO USE:
The first things you need to do is learn how and where to pick worms. A flashlight with a red lens or red cellophane taped over the lens and a coffee can are standard worm pickin' equipment. Take the plastic lid from the coffee can and press it onto the bottom lip of the can. This will deaden the sound of the can being placed on the sidewalk.
WHERE TO GO:
The sidewalk is an important component of pickin' night crawlers. The concrete seems to dispense the vibration of your footsteps allowing you to sneak up on your amelid prey.
Good walking soil are slightly basic in pH, black humus versus sand soil. Should have good tilth as well as worm food available. Worm food consists of fallen leaves and grass clippings.
Therefore the presence or absence of a sidewalk or other hard

Peregrine falcons choose the capital as a nest site

A pair of peregrine falcons have chosen the State Capitol building as their nesting site and—so far—have produced one egg, reports Charlene "Charlie" Gieck, Department of Natural Resources nongame biologist. The pair have taken up residence in a peregrine nesting box built and placed atop the Capitol by Ken Vind, a state carpenter. Two peregrines attempted nesting at the Capitol in 1991, but nested on a sloping ledge on the corner of the dome and the egg rolled off and was destroyed.

This year a new female is involved in the nest attempt," Gieck said. "The female is a one-year-old named Alula who has come to Wisconsin from a Minnesota nest where she was raised in 1991. We've not been able to read the leg band on the male yet, but will soon."

Peregrines lay up to four eggs in a clutch, but Gieck's doesn't know what this one-year-old bird will produce. Incubation takes about 30 days, with hatch expected sometime in early May. "We're not disturbing this pair at all," Gieck said. "I do plan to inspect the nest sometime in the next week and a half to see if more eggs were produced."

The nest box is located on the southeast corner of the Capitol and is visible from street level. "We will be hiring an intern through a donation from the Wisconsin Power and Light Company," Gieck said. "This intern will be around the Capitol during lunchtime with a spotting scope to help people see the

State archaeologist visits UWSP

The state's head archaeologist will visit the regional ar- chaeological center at UWSP this week to discuss facilities and meet with faculty and students.

Robert Birmingham, State Architectural Preservation Division, State Historical Society, and his assistant, Rodney Riggs, will come to UWSP on Wednesday, April 22 for a general review of the UWSP program, which was begun early in 1991.

"One of nine regional centers throughout the state, it is directed by John Moore of the anthropology faculty and funded by the State Historical Society. All of the people involved with the centers throughout the state will meet in Madison on April 24 to do a general review of the entire program."

The center's office at UWSP, located in D314A Science Building, houses videotapes, records, reports, maps and other computerized information open to the public. The facility serves as a resource for professionals and as a training site for students. About 15 students, who receive training in archeology, including how to make presenta- tions about Wisconsin prehistorical periods, currently work at the center.

Moore is available to lead workshops and talk about ancient cultures and artifacts. He instructs a field school during the spring interim session, and does "walking" surveys of sites such as the Green Circle and the Amherst Gravel Pit. He also collaborates with Jeff Behm of UW-Oshkosh on training Soil Conservation Service Personnel. The agency is federally mandated to provide cultural resource identification training for its employees. A one-credit course also is offered at UWSP for potential soil scientists.

In addition, Moore is involved in curating materials in the university's artifact collection, identifying the objects and bringing them up to National Park Service standards. Birmingham and Riggs' visit to campus is part of statewide tours to all centers supported by the society. So far, UWSP has received $15,000 in annual funding from the historical society and about $6,500 in private donations.

crawlers. The worms will emerge and attempt to make short trips ashore. Generally speaking, freshly emerged worms are spookily, they retreat into their holes as soon as you flash a light on them. As the evening wears on and the heat thermophiliic for worm in reaches a fever pitch they be- come less wary.

Pounce on an extended crawler as close to it's hole as possible and apply gentle pressure until it relaxes and slips from its hole. Don't force the worm or it will damage or break. At that point you might as well throw it back.

This will take some practice to perfect but after a while you'll become a pro. See if you can beat my record of eight crawlers as to call everyday.

YOUR WORM FARM:

The best time to look for worms is during the spring, and you'll find them with a few yards of your building. There are many forms of worms. They usually consist of a fine powder and a mix- ture of soil (pH is too acidic). I feel however that the best solu- tion is to buy a kit from the Magic Worm Bedding Co. in Amherst Junction WI. Local businesses carry the kits and they work quite well.

The Magic Work Bedding Co. was started by George Sroda who is the self proclaimed "Worm Czar" who first peddled his products from the bed of a Model "T" Ford pickup.

The kits come complete with a box, bedding, and worm food. The kits should be stored in the refrigerator or a cool corner of your basement. Properly main- tained, the kit will produce healthy worms throughout the year.

Support the local economy, save money, and ranch a herd of healthy night crawlers. When you step up to the podium to receive that carp tournament trophy, you'll thank me for the suggestion.

Falcon

Falcon's recovery goal is to have 20 nesting pairs in the state. Historically, Wisconsin had 20 to 25 nesting pairs, mostly on the bluffs along the Mississippi River, Gieck said. "Now we're trying to get urban peregrines established so that their young will reoccupy those historic sites." Before recovery efforts began the last peregrine was seen in Wisconsin in 1964.

The Peregrine Fund has been involved with peregrines for over 25 years. They work quite well.

Brehm, however, believes there were other reasons why the budget was cut.

“12 senators that voted in favor of the budget knew it was a 26 percent increase when they approved it,” he said. “They felt we deserved the money, and it was taken from us anyway.”

According to one SGA senator, Butts-Townsend took the budget into her own hands because she “felt the senators were not acting in a rational manner and were swayed by emotion from the University Theatre students’ pleas.”

Despite the fact that the budget raise was vetoed, Brehm and the other Theatre students do not regret protesting the cut.

“It was a noble cause,” said Brehm. “I would go back and fight again today if it would make a difference. Every student should fight for their rights, even if they don’t always win.”

Sanders, who used humor throughout the evening to lighten the discussion, concluded with a remark about the attendance for the event which was about half of what it was last year: “Let’s keep doing this year after year until we’ve got the audience down to one,” he said.

The event was moderated by Greg Diekroeger of the Campus Activities Office.

Grant McDonald named captain of next year’s hockey team

by Marc Strapin

Contributor

Grant McDonald, a junior from Cowichan Bay, British Columbia, has been named captain of the 92-93 Pointer hockey team. The position of captain is voted on by the players only. “What makes this such a special honor is that it’s decided by your peers and those are the people you want to respect you the most.”

McDonald, voted the most improved player this year, also was named a Wisconsin State University Conference scholar athlete. He made the National Dean’s list with a 3.63 grade point average in managerial accounting. McDonald was named to the 13-man academic all-Northern Collegiate Hockey Association team as well.

After graduating from Cowichan Senior Secondary, McDonald went to play for the Nanaimo Clippers of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League. In his final season with the Clippers, 88-89, he scored 36 goals, 16 of which came on the powerplay, and added 62 assists in 55 games.

“What makes this such a special honor is that it’s decided by your peers and those are the people you want to respect you the most.”

- Grant McDonald

Before coming to UWSP, McDonald married girlfriend Jill in August of 89. The two of them have resided in Stevens Point, ever since. McDonald played in just one game his first season after having his arm cut by a skate in practice.

Grant saw consistent playing time his second season with the Pointers. This past year was McDonald’s finest as a Pointer. He was a mainstay on the Pointer blueline in his first season as a defenseman. “This last year I think I found my role on this club. The more I played, the more confidence I felt in my abilities.”

I’m really looking forward to next year. The people we lost this year are quality people and players but, we still have the personnel to be right in the thick of things next year.”

After graduating next May, Grant and Jill plan to move back to Canada near the Vancouver area. McDonald hopes to find a position in some type of accounting there.

Individuals interested in volunteering may pick up registration forms at Hardee’s in Stevens Point and Plover; public libraries in Stevens Point, Wisconsin Rapids, Amherst, Neenah, Plainfield, Wausau and Iola; and the Stevens Point Area Convention and Visitors Bureau. The deadline for volunteers to pre-register is May 1.

see the pitchers do well. You can’t simulate a game situation in practice. Our pitchers are starting to attack their hitters. They’re really coming around,” said Ote.

This weekend the Pointers take their bats to the road to play three doubleheaders. On Friday they travel to Platteville, Saturday they challenge the Titans of Oshkosh, and Sunday they battle Marian College in Fond Du Lac in a non-conference game.

“We could go from fourth to second if we do well this weekend,” Ote said. “We’re swinging our bats now. We hadn’t been giving our pitchers help in the last few games. We hope to continue to hit well into the weekend.”
