"Hostile environment" at root of latest harassment claim

by Eric Meyer

A former Student Life receptionist at UWSP has filed a claim of injury with the state Attorney General’s Office accusing UWSP administrators of creating a hostile work environment.

Barbara Weeks, a typist who worked in the Student Life Administration Office from July 8, 1990 to Oct. 18, 1991, has named Fred Leafgren, Keith Sanders, John Birrenkott, Roland Juhnke and others in a Feb. 13 claim.

According to the claim, Weeks believes she was unjustly relieved of her probationary appointment by acting Director of Student Life, Bill Meyer, and Personnel Director Roland Juhnke for poor work performance caused by budgetary cutbacks.

Weeks maintains that insufficient training from Student Life administrators, the lack of a clear chain of command, and the presence of uncooperative, unfriendly student coworkers prevent her from doing her best work.

"If an employee is on probation, and is not performing satisfactorily, it is my required action given sufficient evidence, to write a letter of dismissal as a signature authority," he said. Juhnke wrote such a letter to Weeks on Oct. 1, 1991 after she received a memo from Weeks’ then acting supervisor, John Birrenkott.

In the memo Birrenkott told Juhnke that Weeks’ work was unsatisfactory. Juhnke also had confirmation of this from Meyer, acting Assistant Chancellor, prior to writing the letter to Weeks. Juhnke said he was told that Weeks had made excessive errors in keeping appointment calendars of staff, and that she did not respond quickly enough to incoming calls.

Meyer was unavailable for comment.

Jared Redders, Stevens Point, has filed the claims with the Wisconsin Department of Justice on behalf of Weeks.

United Council burns Wisconsin State flag
Protests flare over student rights

Members of the United Council representing UW-System students burned the Wisconsin State flag in Stevens Point on Friday in an effort to replace it with the council’s flag.

Elliot Madison, 1990 graduate of UWSP and shared Governor’s Director of United Council, was the leader of the protest which occurred in front of Old Main where the flag was burned.

"We burned the Wisconsin state flag because we want to replace it on top of Old Main with the United Council flag, which represents the Student Bill of Rights," said Madison.

After the members of the council burned the flag they went to Chancellor Keith Sanders’ office to demand he change the flag on top of Old Main.

Members of the council say the Wisconsin flag represents the Board of Regents, the ruling body who currently make up the guidelines for the students in the UW-System.

The council feels that since the board isn’t located in Stevens Point, but is head-quartered in Madison, the regents should not be allowed to make up the rules for students they have no contact with.

Approximately 40 students showed up for the protest, which is the first of many which Madison hopes to have on UW campuses across Wisconsin.

"We’ve received national press for our bill which is the most comprehensive bill of rights in the country," Madison said. "There are over 100 rights in the bill that are very important to all students on Wisconsin Campuses."

Sanders was not in his office at the time of the protest, but after leaving a meeting in the University Center he asked three members of the council to meet him at the UC and talk about the situation.

Judy Goldsmith, special consultant to the chancellor for Affirmative Action, was the only member of the chancellor’s cabinet who was around to address the protesting students.

Goldsmith was unavailable for comment afterward.

Among the many rights Madison believes need to be granted to students is access to student evaluations of faculty. Madison says students should be able to see what ratings have been given to professors by their classmates in order to make better informed choices when choosing a teacher.

"Another right students deserve is to live on or off campus. Currently students are required to live on campus for two years before they can move off," said Madison.

The Student Government Association, represented in the protest by many members, including President Tamara Butts and Vice-President Mark Olskowski, should be the ones who decide how long residents stay on campus, if at all, Madison said.

Appeal of grades is another issue that the council’s bill of rights addresses. Currently no students are allowed to appeal a grade they receive. Professors have the only say in the grading system.

Madison thinks that some parts of the bill will be passed but not all of it. "They’ll try to water it down and say they really don’t have anything against the students."

Osgood, Madison was very happy with the turnout at the protest. "It was a good showing of students. We’re paying for university buildings, professors’ salaries, and the like, and we either want our rights guaranteed or our independence."
Allen Center mystery particles identified

Material found from the ceiling of the Allen Center at UWSP about two weeks ago was identified as 'dist' to the UWSP administration. The investigation was conducted in cooperation with the Bulletin of Science and Medicine.

In an interview with Secretary of State James Baker, Yeltsin asked for additional support from the U.S. in the form of $500 million in credit guarantees to buy American grain to feed his people. Although Baker was not ready to commit to providing Yeltsin's credit request, Baker did express a willingness to pledge $25 million for cooperative research in Russia to put unemployed nuclear scientists to work on projects of peace.

Yeltsin said that he appreciates Baker's position and said, "I have no doubt in the positive response by the U.S."

The U.S. and Russia also agreed on a cooperative move to assist Belarus in meeting various four letter obscenities and lumping at Defter and was promptly held back by police and led away.

During their arrest, issued his own statements to society and to the families of those killed, "I feel so bad for what I did those poor families and I understand their rightful hate."

In Kinshasa, Zaire, government soldiers shot and killed 30 pro-democracy marchers and injured over 100 others on Sunday's march.

The marchers called for an illegal overthrow of President Mobutu Sese Soko and were met by helmeted government officials and military installations. They tore up the street and actively supported the actions.

"The situation is getting worse. People can't even respect priests. They are beating them and shooting at Christians," Buana Kabue, leader of the rights group, said of the attack on the march.

President Boris Yeltsin, Monday, accepted a U.S. offer of technological and financial support in the Unified States' attempt to disarm and destroy nuclear weapons."

Many political analysts believe the presidential election in 1992 will be driven by issues more than any election in recent history. I doubt it.

I would like to examine what is really important to the electorate: charisma and appearance.

The winner of this years election, like all elections, will be the most attractive and charismatic candidate.

Ronald Reagan, the great communicator and former actor, defeated the unpalatable Walter Mondale.

The stiff and unappealing George Bush won the battle of the bosses in 1988. Arguably the lesser of two uglies.

George Bush is running this year, and his party is worried. It is not the economy that worries them; it is Bush's total lack of charisma.

Fortunately for the Republicans, none of the Democrats areelectable.

Bill Clinton causes the Republicans the most grief. He is both attractive and charming; in fact, too much for his own good. His inability to keep his gun in his holster has tainted his campaign and made him unelectable.

If Clinton is nominated, the flood of family oriented ads from the Bush camp will drown us all.

Paul Tsongas has a good chance at the Democratic nomination but no chance of getting elected. This bug-eyed little toad looks as awkward as his last name is spelled. There is not a woman in America who will vote for him.

Bob Kerrey is an attractive single man. He was decorated for his conduct in Vietnam. Unfortunately, he looks like apricesy little wimp and will probably be labeled a homosexual because of his race and spiritual status.

Men will not vote for him.

Tom Harkin and Jerry Brown are both as idiotic as they look. They will blame their poor performances on their extremist views, but in reality they are just extremely weird looking.

Mario Cuomo is not officially in the race, but that smug little moron Dan Quayle keeps predicting that Cuomo will run.

Bill Clinton said it best when he described Cuomo as a "narcissist." It is a good thing Cuomo is not running because he wouldn't get elected anyway.

In the end, the 1992 presidential election will be a race between George Bush and Bill Clinton.

The election will be Clinton's to win because he is looking better and more charismatic than George Bush.

Jennifer Flowers, Bill Clinton's alleged lover, is the most important person in American politics today. This beautiful and expensive slut thrives on politeness. 'The Star' in excess of $100,000 is the only object in the way of Clinton's victory.

The electorate appraises her credibility and moral fiber will determine the outcome of the election.

I know there are some who will cling to the belief that issues will dominate this campaign. Don't kid yourself.

Dear Editor:

A troubling editorial appeared in the February 9th edition of the Pointer and requires a response from the Affirmative Action office.

The editorial, "Hypocrisy alive and well at UWSP," tells of a former student employee whose letter of resignation referred to specific problems in Student Life in December of 1996, calling it "...not a healthy environment to work in."

The editorial says that the student "then submitted her resignation/complaint letter to UWSP personnel, and was referred to the Affirmative Action office."

The Affirmative Action office did not, unfortunately, receive the resignation/complaint letter to UWSP personnel, and was referred to the Affirmative Action office.

The editorial continues, "It wasn't until much later, the day of her last final exam in May of 1991, that this student first heard a response to her letter."

Again, there is nothing in the sentence to identify what individual or what office contacted the student (it appears to refer to Affirmative Action, but that is not clear).

The concerns expressed in the editorial (both those of the former student employee and the editorial writer) are extremely serious, and we share their feeling that a serious response is warranted.

Unfortunately, there is no information in the editorial that would allow us to track down what may have been a breakdown in communication or a failure on the part of some unknown individual to report sexual harassment.

In addition, we in the Affirmative Action office are concerned that readers are left with the impression that their complaints of sexual harassment will not be dealt with (the final sentence reads, "When will we find people who are serious about a 'harassment free environment'?"."

The Affirmative Action office is extremely serious about it. We take every change and every complaint very seriously.

However, to our knowledge, this student did not speak to anyone in our office.

Perhaps we have problems of communication, and we need to work together on those to ensure that our messages are getting through. But we also want to assure everyone who might be concerned, that what we don't have is a lack of commitment to making this campus a harassment-free environment for all.

Points NCHA Champs after sweeping Mankato

The biggest play the Pointers had come with five minutes remaining in the second period when on the powerplay, Paul Caufield, who lost his stick to a defender, kicked the puck loose on the far boards to Dave Dimitri.

Dimitri then zipped a pass right to Jeff Marshall who beat Chin, leaving the fans gasping for breath.

"What can you say about the save by Chin. It was the biggest save of our season. He has done that, we were able to rally around his effort, but I don't think we ever want to put one of our goalies in that situation again," Baldarotta added.

The sudden death came to an end at the 1:08 mark when Gord Abric flipped a shot over Langot after the goalie made two initial saves, leaving the Pointers to the thrilling 4-3 victory, and a sweep of first place in the NCHA.

"Cherry (Abric) is the kind of player you can go to in the OT, he's gotten many a game winner in overtime in juniors and is that kind of explosive player that you like to go to in the sudden death," said Baldarotta.

Eau Claire Friday night, using key performances from several players to knock the win.

"For a period of time Lothian was hot and for a period of time Julius was hot. For the whole game I thought Boario and Boomer Harrison played excellent floor games," said Parker.

"in addition, Justin Freier and Scott Frye played excellent defense. It was a super game. Everybody who played contributed."

To complement Julius’ 15 and Lothian’s 14 was Harrison’s game high 18 points and 5 assists and Boario’s 11 points.

Point committed only seven turnovers compared to the Blugolds 14.

From the field the Pointers shot a blazing 61.9%, while Eau Claire shot 48.9%. Point made 78% (8/23) of its free throw, Eau Claire 62.5%. (9/14). Eau Claire was led by Williams Green with 12 points and Mark season that Hatch was held to hardly nothing against his former teammates.

Junior forward Mike Dalquist, who just came back from a knee injury last weekend, hurt his knee again when he went down in the first half. Parker would be very surprised if he came back at all this season.

"I'd be amazed if he came back this year. It's disheartening to think that he may be back,"

UWSP escalated to 22 over all, 13-1 in conference, when freshman guard Gabe Miller sank a shot with 3.2 seconds left to clinch the victory over the Falcons.

The UWSP Men’s Wrestling team hosted Augustana College on Saturday and the night saw it's first big opportunities for capturing the conference championship as they won both of their dual meets this past weekend at the Quandt Gym.

Assistant coach Eric Burke added that he expects at least eight of UWSP’s wrestlers to have what it takes to reach the final.

On Friday, February 14th, the Pointers took down UW-Whitewater in the St. Valentine’s Day Massacre with a score of 43-4.

Registering pins for Stevens Point were Bob Kohler (118 lbs.), Colin Green (177 lbs.), Jeff Green (197 lbs.), Brian Loepp (215 lbs.), and Brian Bucholz (225 lbs. - by forfeit) also won for UWSP.

Mankato State 3 OT.

The host Pointers came out and took the early 1-0 lead when Al Beouchs picked up a rebound in front of the Maverick goalie Brett Lehman giving the host crowd at K.B. Willett arena plenty to yell about early.

A bit of frustration then set in for the Pointers as they had three key opportunities in the early and mid-phases of the first period. "That was a tough time for us because it got our guys a little frustrated and gave them, especially Lange, some much needed confidence," Baldarotta said.

The Pointers had to rally in on a breakaway at the 11:46 mark when Scott Krueger wobbled the puck loose on the far boards and found Tim Hale streaking toward the net and the host Pointers had the 2-0 lead.

"That was a really great play that started with Krueger’s hard work on the far side and he just found Hale without anyone between him and the net. You really get a chance to see what Tim Hale adds to our team because he was really frustrated for a couple weeks and then he comes in and picks up a goal thanks to his biggest asset, his speed," said Baldarotta.

The Pointers took the 2-0 lead into the lockerroom, but in the second period the Mavericks got goals from Steve Andersen, and two from Paul Gerten within a five minute span to take the 3-2 lead.

"We knew coming into this weekend that our fate was in our own hands, all we had to do was win and no one could catch us." - Coach Joe Baldarotta

The UWSP men's track team finished on top out of 13 teams and the women's team finished sixth out of 12 teams on Saturday at the "Eastbay Track and Field Invitational" held at the Health Enhancement Center.

The Pointers men's team has the third indoor meet of the season for the Pointers. The men's team has finished third, second, and now first.

The women placed seventh, an impressive first, and sixth this week. UWSP will host the NCAA Division III National Indoor Championship on March 14.

Dean Bryan continued to do well in grabbing first in the 400M (48.50). Other first place finishers were Bill Green in the 55M (6.57), and the UWSP 1600M relay team (3:23.57).

The UWSP men dominated the hurdles events. Chris Larsen, Parker Hanson, and Chad Robran captured first, second, and third in the 55M hurdles (7.97, 8.03, 8.12) respectively, and the same in the 200M hurdles (25.52, 25.85, 25.92) respectively.

The UWSP women only had two bright spots. Marnie Sullivan placed second in the 1500M (4:52.66) and Amy Voigt took third in the 400M (1:02.49).

Other strong finishers for the UWSP men were: Scott Halvorsen second in the 35 lb. weight throw (13.14), the UWSP men's 4x200 relay team placed second (1:33), Marty Kershner edged out Andrew Valla for second in the 600M (1:24.26), (1:24.28), Damion Parks took third in the triple jump (12.43), Jason Zuzlek tied for second in the 1500M (4:50.92), and Bill Green finished third in the 200M (23.20).

For the UWSP women, Suzy Jandris, who qualified for nationals, finished fourth (17:56.1), and Aimee Knitter placed fifth in the 5000M (18:18.7). Mandy Rasmussen placed fourth in the 600M (1:44.07).

The invitational men's final results showed UWSP on top with 145 points. UW-Oshkosh with 100 and Lewis third with 91.12 points.

The UW-Oshkosh women's team controlled the invitational by scoring a total of 200 points. UW-Parkside placed fourth with 68 points while UWSP took sixth with only 47 points.

On Saturday, UW-River Falls met the same fates as Eau Claire the night before, losing convincingly to the Pointers by a final of 81-62.

UWSP shot an impressive 52.2 percent while River Falls sank 37.1 percent of its shots.

With three lead changes and six ties in the first half, the Pointers decided to stay up for good when they wrestled the lead away from River Falls with 1:05 to play in the first half on a Stephen lay in off of a steal.

The Pointers reached their biggest lead when Ann Lautenslager dropped a 20 foot shot to put UWSP up 25.

came from hot shooting Marcus Lane. This tied the game at 75. The rest was up to Miller, who drove the lane and drew the foul.

making one of two free-throws after River Falls called a timeout to try to "tie" him.

His free throw was his only point of the game, but one of the most important in his short career for the Pointers.

"Gabe Miller is an excellent player. He's certainly one of the top freshman in the WSUC. He's so composed. I don't think I've ever had a freshman player who's been so composed. We're not only excited about how he's playing now, but his future," Parker said.

River Falls called a timeout with 2.4 seconds left after Miller's missed the second free throw to figure out a way to score. The Falcons got the ball as far as midcourt after the timeout when Brian Menzel's desperation shot bounces off the rim and secured the Pointer victory.

UWSP, led by Julius' 21 points, was up by as many as 10 points 58-48 with 10:06 remaining in the game. The Falcons went on a 17-7 run to close the lead to tie the game at 65. Boario scored the next seven points to put the Pointers up 72-65.

Parker was just happy to get out of his aiming zone with his first 15 points a piece.

Julius had a game high 10 boards to help Point overwhelm the Falcons 37-32.

Assuming that Stevens Point won on Wednesday night against LaCrosse, they will go to Whitewater on Saturday with a chance to clinch or tie for the conference title with Platteville.

Platteville won both their games over the weekend to stay a game behind Point.

"We're not going to change anything we've been doing when we play Whitewater. We need to play the same we've been playing all season," Parker said.

"I hope everybody can make it to Whitewater on Saturday night. Hopefully we can clinch the championship."
Wayne and Garth in movie "World"

Most critics really shouldn’t be allowed to say or write anything about “Wayne’s World.” After all, the appeal of the film has nothing to do with the usual attributes that critics are always scrutinizing new releases for. “Wayne’s World” is a success or failure based purely on whether or not you laugh at the misadventures of Wayne and Garth. Things such as plot and character development are secondary, or even completely irrelevant.

Mike Myers has been cultivating “Wayne’s World” since his high school days in Canada. Cruzan confronts controversy with love

by Eric Meyer

For Nancy Cruzan, school grades were never a top priority. There was too much of life to enjoy. Co-captain of the biking team in high school, she was everybody’s friend. By 1983 she was married and established in her career. By 1988 her family had begun the battle to terminate her life.

Cruzan noted that his daughter was not brain dead. They paramedics found her face down in the dirt just off the road. She wasn’t breathing and had been without oxygen for about 12-14 minutes. This oxygen deprivation destroyed the part of the brain that controls conscious thought processes, explained Cruzan, but it also left her reflex responses intact (breathing, temperature control, etc.).

In March of 1988, the Cruzan family had no hope of ever seeing Nancy to recovery. They appealed to the Circuit Court of Missouri to gain permission to discontinue feeding and hydration.

The Pointer Poll: Who is the best candidate in this year’s presidential election?

(Compiled by Julie Aper and Al Crouch)

"Paul Tsongas is the best candidate. He’s down to earth and he has a platform that can win back the White House for the Democrats."

"Definitely not Bush! I need to find out more information on where each candidate stands. Whether he is Republican or Democrat, I will vote for the one I feel holds the strongest platform and will do the best for our economy and environment."

"George Bush because of what he has done for our country so far. I believe his attitude reflects what the American people want. Besides, I’m a Republican and look at the clowns he is running against."

"I think Clinton is the best for president. He can probably do more for the economy than Bush and still pay attention to international issues."

"I’m not satisfied with any of the candidates. We desperately need an influential leader bold enough to take a real stand on environmental issues. Until then, I vote neither!"

Professor Bob Kase in action

Sonny and Cher, Wayne Newton and David J. Kase also served as a studio musician in Minneapolis for movie soundtracks and radio commercials. In addition, he taught music to students at various grade levels and toured nationally as a music clinician. "As a whole, conflicts arose between teaching and performing and I eventually chose to go professional," said Kase. "However, I didn’t seem to grow as much musically and I missed teaching. Although things were going well, performing is a young man’s game and I didn’t want to be playing ice shows at age 50," he admitted. "Rather, do it because you have to. The does you’ll hire to pay are consider- able and the passion for music serves as the inspiration.”

Kase himself performed professionally for several years before returning to teaching. "As a college professor my passions for music and teaching are one in the same.”

UWSP students stage Wilde comedy

"The Importance of Being Earnest," Oscar Wilde’s satiric comedy of manners, directed by Professor Robert Baruch, will open at 8 p.m., Friday, Feb. 21. The production will continue in the Jenkins Theatre, Fine Arts Center, on Feb. 22-23 and 27-29. Curtain time is 8 p.m., except for Sunday, Feb. 23, when the play starts at 7 p.m.

In the play, the renowned actor and humorist, Wilde died in 1900 at age 46, broken and destitute after being imprisoned for two years on a morals charge. "Earnest" was his last play, described by the playwright as a "trivial comedy for serious people," and called "his wittiest and cleverest work" by Baruch.

Wilde used a clever and sophisticated style to satirize the Victorian manners and customs of his day, Baruch says. His humor was not physical, but intellectual, using parody, word play, and vitriolic to mock the social absurdities of the Victorian period.

The plot involved John Worthing, an ultraconservative young man who invents an at- tachment for his childhood sweetheart named "Ernest" to assist him in the pursuit of his ladylove, Gwendolyn Fairfax, and the daughter of Lady Bracknell, Melwin, also his fiancée and the proper and dominating mother who is the aunt of Algernon Moncrieff.

"Earnest" was courted by his friend, Algernon, who also masquerades as Ernest to impress Cecily. Both young women are enamored of the name "Ernest," hoping to marry a man by that name. All turns out well in the end, but only after the staid, prim and proper British aristocrats are parodied as superficial, insincere and silly.

The sets depict three different locales, Algernon’s house in London, the garden, and the morning room of Lady Bracknell’s country manor. The period costumes include morning coats, top hats and smoking jackets for the men, and hats, parasols, and nipped-waist dresses for the women.

Baruch says his actors have worked in the last few weeks on developing their characters, including the mastering of British accents. Tickets are on sale at the College of Fine Arts and Communication box office, (715) 346-4100.

Chancellor buys more than just breakfast

by Jeff Klemens

"Breakfast with the Chancellor" is Keith Sanders’ way to stay in touch with UWSP students. Meeting twice a month on a weekday morning at 9:00 a.m., in a banquet room of the University Center, Chancellor Sanders personally invites 20-30 students to join him for breakfast. SGA helps in coordinating the event and in contacting students.

"Any student is welcome to join us," said Sanders. "We never want to limit those invited."

Usually 12 to 20 students are able to adjust their schedules so that they may attend the breakfast.

Sanders says the breakfast meeting allows him the opportunity to get student feedback on issues that concern him, while also giving the students an opportunity to respond with issues that concern them. "Tami and I get a chance to hear from the students that we might not ordinarily hear from," Sanders said: President Tom Batts eats at each breakfast and shares from the running meetings. SGA feels it is important to remain in contact with a variety of students and listen to their views on campus topics.

"The topics range from getting more lettuce in sandwiches at Food Services, to what should be created in the space surrounding the new Health Enhancement Center," said Sanders. "Each idea that requires an ‘action’ step, I take back to my Cabinet for consideration."

To combat recent waning breakfast attendance, Sanders suggested moving the breakfast to Deb to attract more students. He also felt that having topical predetermined discussions might bolster attendance.

"I feel is absolutely necessary to remain in contact with the students since we are here to serve them. We are able to find out what students are willing to talk for and what they are not, from topics including parking, health and other priorities," said Sanders.

"There has not been a single one of these breakfasts that I didn’t learn something that I didn’t know," said Sanders.

Other projects that keep Sanders in contact with the students include spending one hour per semester in a residence hall, attending SGA meetings and campus events, and helping students move in to the halls.

"Tami and I had the chance to give the students presents and get feedback from them as we helped," commented Sanders.

"The atmosphere of the 'Breakfast with the Chancellor' program is the only one of its kind in the UW-system. The funding of the program is split between SGA and the UWSP Foundation, with fund of private donations to the Chancellor’s budget."

Two smart ways to pay for college.

1. The Army Reserve has two smart ways to pay for college expenses.
   - First, you may be eligible for the Montgomery GI Bill which could provide you with up to $50,400 for college or approved VocTech training.
   - Second, if you have—or obtain—a qualified student loan, and it’s not in default, you could get it paid off at the rate of 120% per year or $500, whichever is greater—up to a maximum of $10,000.
   - This money could be yours for serving in a nearby Army Reserve unit.

   annual training, and you’ll usually serve one weekend a month plus two weeks.

New display at UWSP museum

A 750-pound Alaskan brown bear welcome visitors with a glare from his newly renovated home at the Museum of Natural History at UWSP. The specimen is featured in a recently installed exhibit depicting Alaska's tundra environment. The display includes various animals and vegetation which are native to this setting. According to Marks, the museum's curator of education, "We strive for authenticity and the diversity which characterizes a particular ecosystem," said Marks. "Visitors not only see the featured animal, but the other animals and habitat which relate to it in the actual environment." In addition to the bear, which an information label refers to as a "Brownie," the exhibit includes a number of other specimens within its nineteen foot boundaries. The ecosystem is inhabited by an eagle, a salmon, a least weasel and a masked shrew. The animals make their home in an environment that consists of tall tundra grasses, decaying logs, an antler rack and a small pond left from the melting snow of the mountains. The scene's backdrop, also created by Marks, is as detailed as the actual display. The mural depicts mountains and the overflowing flood plains prevalent in the Alaskan summer. In the distance, a small herd of bison grazes under the watchful eye of a snowy owl flying overhead. Marks' goal for the exhibit is to have it tell a story about how diverse animals relate to one another in their environment. He is especially concerned about showing the predator/prey relationship in the ecosystem. Marks hopes it will be a "valuable teaching device" for the many school groups which visit the museum daily.

Wisconsin's endangered "herps"

Wisconsin's Endangered Resources Program works with a variety of animals, but some of the least understood by the public are reptiles and amphibians, Bob Hay, Department of Natural Resources herpetologist said. Wisconsin's endangered ecosystem is in jeopardy, and the least understood by the public are reptiles and amphibians, Hay said.

"Three of the nine listings are turtles, the ornate box turtle is endangered, and the wood and Blanding's turtles are threatened," Hay said.

"The wood turtle is aptly named because its six-to-eight inch shell is made up of round segments that look like wood-grained cross sections of tree branches. This turtle most frequently inhabits forested rivers and streams and their surrounding landscapes. In the heat of the summer, this species spends most of its time on land."

"The sad part of selling turtles as pets is that they usually wind up suffering a substandard life and dying," Hay added. The wood turtle, found in the northern two-thirds of the state, is highly sought after because of its intelligence. There is evidence of illegal collecting and transporting across state lines with this turtle.

Hay also has learned to complete some simple mazes similar to those done by rats. Another documented behavior performed by wood turtles is their ability to mimic heavy raindrops on the soil with their front feet. This fools nightcrawlers into coming to the surface where they are promptly eaten. This is called "worm stamping."

Studies done with the ornate box turtle and Blandings turtle show that their habitat has been fragmented by human intervention. The ornate box turtle is found in southwestern Wisconsin. The Blandings turtle is found throughout the state except for northern central counties; its population is concentrated in the marshes along the Lower Wisconsin River in Iowa, Dane and Grant counties.

"Roads built near their habitat cause high mortality during breeding and nesting periods, according to Hay, because the turtles have to cross roads to get to and from their nesting sites.

"This spring, turtles should be avoided on the roadways and only under the safest conditions should an individual stop and help them cross the road, making sure to put them across in the direction they were heading. There is a landowner contact program which is designed to protect the ornate box turtle."

"We are trying to find out where ornate box turtles live and nest," Hay said. "People who have information about these turtles can contact us in Madison at (608)267-0849, or Bill Moore at Spring Green at (608)546-2009."

"All of the turtle work done by the Bureau of Endangered Resources is funded by the Endangered Resources Checkoff fund which individuals can donate to on their Wisconsin state income tax form."

"There's a lot of work to be done," Hay added. "We need to gather life histories on the Blandings and wood turtles. There is little known about the behavior and life activities of hatchlings and juveniles of these species."

Plants

With enough sunlight, these plants grow quite nicely indoors, but need to be transplanted outside to bear fruit.

By August those plants were over three feet tall and bore a pointed side of the seed up. Add water to the glass until the suspended seed is half submerged. Leave the glass on a windowsill.

After 6 to 7 weeks the seed should have taken, if not it is probably a "dud." Transplant your new plant to a pot filled with potting soil mixed with sand.

When the main stem has grown to 8 inches, pinch off about 2 inches of its growth. This will force the future avocado tree to become bushy and leafy.

Now you can impress your friends with your new-found wealth of exotic plants, save money on groceries and kick the winter blues. Ain't life sweet?
Black history month raises awareness of diversity
by Eric Meyer

For Greg Anderson, president of the UWSP United Brothers and Sisters organization, celebrating Black History Month is but another step in a long journey toward full societal acceptance of blacks.

"Anytime that you put the blend that we have on a campus like this, there is going to be some racism. Sometimes it's not even racially motivated, it's just ignorance and not knowing," said Anderson.

"Our major goal is to improve black awareness and to increase sensitivity," he said. "A majority of students who attend this university come from small towns. They come from areas where there are no blacks and the only blacks they see are on the 'Cosby Show','' said Anderson.

Anderson pointed to the civil rights movement of the 1960s and the Brown vs. the Board of Education court decision as major milestones in black history.

"It's a societal thing that has caused blacks to be in the position they're in. We as Americans have to place more of an emphasis on the younger generation," said Anderson noting the dearth of presidential candidate discussions on the underclass. "You have to ask yourself, does the government of America really care about the poor, the impoverished, and the disenfranchised?" said Anderson.

Anderson remained optimistic about the achievements of his organization in light of the low number of black students on campus.

"This is our third year but we are going strong. We're becoming more of an integral part of the university. The main problem we have is that we are so low in numbers that sometimes it's disheartening.

This is such a fine institution. We would hope we could get more of a commitment to recruiting blacks," said Anderson.

Anderson said discussions of black history and an invited speaker would complement the group's third annual "Soul Food" dinner celebration this year. The March 1 dinner is open to the public. "We have had a lot of people come to it because it's really a good time," he said. United Brothers and Sisters members will present the dinner program.

Calvin and Hobbes
by Bill Watterson

Calvin, your dad and I are going out tomorrow. Go into your room and sleep. You'll be having a baby sister.

We're going to stay home. Help yourselves to anything in the fridge.

I called the people and said the only one who would do it.

Calvin, I mean in wake up at 9. Need to know if I called right.

The only one who would do it.

I'll get you to the party, and then we'll be off.

What's on the phone? Is it my mom? I want to talk to her! Mom? Can you hear me?

Yeah, I'm on the phone. Mom? I'm not asleep! Did you get this on the phone? Thanks, glad you called.

When have you been doing this, Calvin? I mean, that's a huge step for a kid.

Mommy! Is that you? I'm not asleep! Did you get this on the phone?

Sorry, I'm late. Roslyn. Did you get Calvin to bed?

No way, Dad. I can smell fear in little kids. We'll be3 doomed.

Yeah, you're now a stop or two.

Oh no! A knock at the door! The new sister must be here.

Should we wake him up?

Now watch out! Calvin, I just wanted to show you that sleeping in a bed is a privilege. The responsibility is going to be a lot less comfy.

Sighh!...

When will this be over?

Hey Mom!

Wiiiiiiiiiii!

Well, my voice can be heard 10 miles away. It's working well.

Come home now, treacle. It's too late! Help! Help!

No, go. Just the two of us. I'll call you when I'm there.

But I don't want to stay!

Come on, it's not that bad.

EETs been this way all night.

I can't believe our baby sister. You have to read the label.

It's not even dark out.

I can't believe our baby sister. It's not even dark out.

Well, she can put us to bed, but she can't make us sleep. You play the record, and I'll accompany on tom-tom.

That's fine, Calvin. Next time you go to bed, I'm just going to hop up the floor.

We're going to be a little later than I expected. Do I think I'd better call you.

So we're going to be a little later than we thought. I think we'd better call you right now.

They weren't the most evil people in the world — nor the best. They were the Village of the Darned.

The Village of the Darned.

ation. This lower court granted permission, but the decision was overturned by the Missouri Supreme Court on the basis of sanctity of life.

After appearing to the U.S. Supreme Court in 1989, the decision was again reversed. In the summer of 1990, in Cruzan v. State Health Services, the court recognized the right of a surrogate family member to refuse medical treatment on behalf of an incompetent family member.

"We were saying, you've come this close, all you have to do is stop breathing."

-Joe Cruzan

With the court ruling behind them, the Cruzans discontinued life support on Dec. 14, 1990.

At midnight on Dec. 26, doctors could not find Nancy's pulse. The Cruzan family was at the hospital to see Nancy through her final hours.

"We were kind of sitting on the bed the night she died and kind of like cheering her on. We were saying you've come this close, now all you have to do now is stop breathing. She died a peaceful death," said Cruzan.

The family has created the Nancy Cruzan Foundation which was set up to help to help educate people on the value of living directives. A living directive is a legal document that states the conditions under which life support should be discontinued for a person in the event that they are unable to act on their own behalf.

"I think it's vitally important that you talk to someone and put something in writing, particularly for young people. My daughter was 25 years-old and that was the last thing she talked about. Think about this because it can happen to you," cautioned Cruzan.

hilarious one in which product placement in movies is mocked expertly.

There’s also a load of pop-culture references for all of us ‘children of the 70’s’ who have Scooby Doo and “Laverne & Shirley” as major reference points.

It also doesn’t hurt that the performers featuring are so engaging. All Myerson has to do is flash his goofy, energetic grin to get a laugh out of me, but it’s a joyous demeanor that makes eternal partier Wayne likable enough to carry the movie. Carvey makes Garth awkward and shy, eternally trying to be as funny as he can make even the simplest line hysterically funny.

I’m not claiming “Wayne’s World” is a perfect movie. Far from it. Several stretches aren’t funny at all, many of the supporting characters are so bland that they only slow the movie down and the plot is so inane that it’s best to ignore it.

Yet the movie often connects when it’s eagerly provoking laughter and it’s extremely hard to resist getting swept up in all of its frenzied energy. The movie may not have much substance, but it makes for a great big-screen party.

Partly on, Wayne! Party on, Garth!

RHA focuses on Black history

National Black History Month celebrates a culture that has triumphed over many obstacles to reach its black position in society today.

The Resident Housing Association helped students get involved by providing “A Night at the Movies,” which made movies related to black culture available for students to watch at no cost.

Alicia Ferriter, the organizer of “A Night at the Movies,” said, “The goal is just to get people to think of a different culture or society—even if it’s just for a fleeting second.” Ferriter thought students would prefer watching movies over listening to a lecture.

“A Night at the Movies” showed “Lean on Me,” “Mississippi Burning,” and “Cry Freedom” at Watson, Smith, and Steiner resident halls on February 3, 10, and 17.

Lisa Hirsch saw “Lean on Me” and said, “I thought it dealt more with school issues such as drugs and homework.”

Bud Joanne Kostuk, who also saw Lean on Me, said, “It opened my eyes to a different culture that I had never come in contact with.” Ferriter explained that she thought the event was a success as long as at least one person gained something from it.

The movie Do the Right Thing will also be shown as part of “A Night at the Movies.” The movie will be played in the basement of Dobet on February 24. Vicki Hawley will lead a discussion following the movies about the best way to deal with racial problems.
