Students lose out on cheap Spring Break packages

by Kevin Thays
Advertising Manager

College students who bought spring break travel packages through a local travel agency called Rebate Travel now risk having to stay home for break without receiving what they paid for.

Brett Penager, UWSP assistant wrestling coach and operator of Rebate Travel, notified authorities on February 25th with a report that his partner, Rudy Isom, withdrew approximately $60,000 of student money from the bank accounts of Rebate Travel.

Authorities located and arrested Isom on Friday in Las Vegas, Nevada where he has apparently gambled away a majority of the money.

According to Penager, the stolen money consisted mainly of students' deposits for spring break vacation packages to Cancun, Mexico, Daytona Beach and the Bahamas.

"Eight of the students that brought packages are from UWSP, but the majority are from Madison," said Penager.

Rebate Travel advertised mainly in student newspapers, including The Pointer. The company also distributed an unauthorized flier to the residence halls at UWSP.

According to Penager, Isom had sole control of the bank accounts and was also a licensed agent, therefore, he handled most of the monetary transactions that occurred with the bank and larger travel agencies.

At this time, authorities and Rebate Travel are not certain how or if students will be refunded.

Penager described the agency's intentions as "a good meaning gone bad. I knew that Rudy had a problem with gambling, but I never thought he'd use other people's money," he said.

In light of this situation, Penager advises students to check out a company thoroughly before they purchase spring break travel packages and to make checks payable directly to the main corporate agency.

Viterbo college newspaper staff fired Violations of Catholic doctrines prove costly

by Chris Stebnitz
News Editor

Last Friday, the entire staff of the Viterbo college student newspaper "The Lumen" was fired for what the Administrative Team considered "blatant disregard for the institution's policies."

In the February 24 edition of The Lumen, an "anonymous" article was published entitled "Top Ten Reasons Why You Should Use A Condom." According to the former Editor, Stephanie Klitzkie, the article was intended to be a "humorous parody." She said, "The article was to show that adults had different options to safe sex."

President of Viterbo College William J. Medland explained that the article was "tasteless and definitely not humorous." He said that the article not only failed to be humorous, but it "holds up to ridicule the Catholic, Franciscan, liberal arts nature of this institution."

According to Viterbo's conservative policy manual, the article violated three of the principles listed.

One of the principles violated reads: Moral and theological doctrines of the Catholic Church have preferential status in Catholic institutions. The policy that is generated by that reads, "Student publications will show respect for the Catholic character of the college."

"The continued blatant disregard for the principles must cease now."
-President Medland-

Another of the principles violated reads: Student publications are to be quality journalistic products. The policy established reads, "Contents which are pornographic, obscene, salacious, libelous, or otherwise inappropriate or in bad taste will not be published."

The last of the principles violated, according to the college, reads: Members of the Viterbo community are encouraged to express their ideas freely and maturely in student publications. The policy brought about reads, "All contents will be attributed to their authors."

President Medland added that the February 24 issue of The Lumen was not the only issue that violated these policies. Medland said, "Nearly every issue of the Lumen which has been published this academic year has violated at least one, if not more, of these principles."

Medland added, "The continued blatant disregard for these principles must cease now."

According to Klitzkie, the college had "been looking over the paper's shoulder" after the Lumen had run an ad for a clinic called "Options and Reproductive Care." The clinic advertised the sale of condoms and other contraceptives, a direct conflict with a longstanding Catholic doctrine.

Since the staff has all been fired and relieved of their duties, Medland explains that the Lumen shall continue with the help of an outside professional journalist which will be named at a later date by the Academic Vice President of the college.

Medland concluded by saying that as a Catholic, Franciscan, and liberal arts institution, "we must be concerned with the ethical development of our students."

Measles outbreak; A cause for concern for spring break

by Pamela Kersten
Contributor

Everyone thinks about alcohol. Everyone thinks about drugs. But how many people will be lucky enough to think about the measles?

A measles outbreak has hit the southern United States and those heading to Florida and Texas for Spring Break need to be protected or run the risk of contracting the disease.

According to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta Ga., cases have been documented in southern Florida and along the Texas Gulf Coast. The Corpus Christi and South Padre Island areas have shown the highest amount of cases.

Measles cases have risen from 1,714 in 1982 to more than 27,500 in 1990. 22.5 percent of these cases occurred in adults age 20 or older. Traveling to areas with a mixture of people, having sexual contact with several people, and traveling to other countries increases the risk of contracting the disease.

Klu Klux Klan cries foul play First Amendment rights allegedly stripped

by Chris Stebnitz
News Editor

The Klu Klux Klan has tried once again to find its way into the UW system testing the strength of the First Amendment.

The chapter of the KKK located in Janesville Wisconsin has made it clear to the University of Wisconsin Eau Claire that they will sue the university's newspaper, if the ad they placed is not run.

Matt Miller, the editor for the UW Eau Claire Spectator, said that the editorial board met last week and decided that the ad would not be run. He said that the board "did not agree with the ad and decided not to run it."

Kenneth Peterson, the spokesperson for the Janesville chapter of the KKK, believes that the organizations First Amendment rights were being violated. He said that there is no reason why their ad should not be run, saying, "Our ad does not promote violence either private or public. The Knights of the Klu Klux Klan are a political group and have just as much right as any other."

"Our ad does not promote violence either private or public."
-Kenneth Peterson

The Spectator believes that it's not an issue of the First Amendment. Lori Ringhand, managing editor, said that former cases that were brought in front of the Supreme Court recently, back their position.

Ringhand cited a 1971 U.S. District Court case that involved a similar case in Whitewater. "Although the verdict was against Whitewater, the cases cited in the dissensions were positive to our situation."

The cases mentioned were that of Sinn v. Daily Nebraskan, Healy v. James and Tomillow v. Miami Herald.

The questioned involved in this dilemma, according to Ringhand, is that of whether the newspaper is a state function because it is partially funded by the university. Ringhand says that if the newspaper was a function of the university, it would be required to run the ad.

Ringhand and the other editors of the Spectator say that the university has little to do with the operation of their paper, and therefore they can run whatever ad they feel appropriate.

Peterson said that he is not sure when they will file their suit but he said that they would wait a little while and "see if they don't change their minds about running the ad."

IN THE REAL WORLD

by Chris Stebnitz
News Editor

The State Supreme Court, Monday, ordered the addition of former Klu Klux Klan leader David Duke and five other previously denied candidates to the Wisconsin presidential primary ballot.

Wisconsin had initially denied so-called Republican candidates Duke, Harold E. Stassen and Emmanuel L. Branch. Democrats that were voted off the ballot were Eugene McCarthy, Larry Agran and Lyndon H. La Rouché, who is currently serving a year in prison for mail fraud.

The State Supreme Court voted 4 - 3 in favor of allowing the candidates a spot on the primary ballot. They cited the Wisconsin law that says that the ballot shall contain the names of all the candidates nationally recognized by the media.

The state ballot selection committee when voting, disagreed saying that these candidates are not in the national eye and therefore do not fall under the law.

The movie rental business is trying its best to be more popular and widely used than the box office. It's also getting to be about the same price.

A proposed tax on all video tape rentals would increase the price of video rentals by 25 cents.

The tax was introduced by Rep. Marlin D. Schneider (D-Wisconsin Rapids) and will try and make its way through the legislature before March 27, when they adjourn.

Schneider said the bill will bring about $14 million a year which will then go to the Head Start program and to other educational programs.

Schneider was quoted in a Madison paper as saying, "If people can afford to rent a movie, they can afford a quarter for education."

In sports news, as reported in the Milwaukee Sentinel, two UW - Green Bay basketball players were arrested last week.

Last Saturday, Christopher Yates, a senior reserve, turned himself in to Green Bay police confessing he had been a party to armed robbery.

Also last week, Tory Smith, a redshirt sophomore, was arrested on the charges of delivering cocaine, conspiracy to deliver cocaine and also charged with three counts of being party to armed robbery.

Yates has been dropped from the squad and the status of Smith is not known at this time.

These arrests come at the brink of a possible career change for longtime Fighting Phoenix coach Dick Bennet. Bennet is thought to be one of the leading contenders for the newly vacated UW - Madison basketball coaching position.

Resumes require "illusions"

by Eric Meyer
Copy Editor

"You are all magicians trying to create illusions. Most of you will create illusions that you are not as good as you really are," said John Zach of UWSP Career Services in a Monday evening resume writing workshop.

"If you hold back information, you are being dishonest to the potential employer," said Zach, emphasizing that very few people are dishonest in a way that they claim too much.

"Your job in one or two pages is to convince someone that you are a person worthy of an interview," said Zach. "This requires that you create an illusion of yourself by developing several points that show an employer who you are and why you are special. Put in specifics and give them something to chew on," he said.

This original approach to resume writing requires that students brainstorm about special skills that they have and about experiences that could be helpful in the job for which they are applying, he said.

"When people haven't thought about what they can do well, that's a pretty sad statement. Your resume is a production piece. Put down the information that separates you from others," said Zach. "Employers are putting the picture of you that you create for them into the framework of the position they have available," he said.

Providing a bridge between what you have done and how it can be applied to the job you are applying for is important, according to Zach.

REFLECTION ON ELECTION '92

Harkin v. Bush

This week we continue with President and candidate George Bush and his Democratic counterpart, presidential hopeful Iowa Senator Tom Harkin.

This week's primaries and caucuses will go a long way in determining the political viability of both men.

by Jack Hewitt
Contributor

RESUME OF TOM HARKIN: Born in Cummings, Iowa, November 19, 1939. BS in Economics, Iowa State University, 1962; law degree, Catholic University Law School, 1972; attorney, Polk County Legal Aid Society, Iowa, 1973-74; US Representative, Fifth District, Iowa, 1974-84; US Senator, (D) Iowa, 1984-present.

POLITICAL BACK-GROUND:

"In assuming the role of spokesperson for the working people of America, Harkin is remaining true to his roots. Born into unrelenting poverty, the youngest of six children, his mother died of a cerebral hemorrhage when he was ten.

His father was unable to work due to chronic black lung disease from years as a coal miner and had to send young Tom to live with one of his father's married sisters in Wyoming. "He was poorer than a church mouse," said his cousin Jim Harkin. "Tom ain't never had anyone give him anything. I think he's a working man's boy."

"Harkin 'discovered' politics in high school and during college he was inspired to public service by the example of then President John Kennedy. He became active as a student at Iowa State University in the Democratic Party and in a student committee exploring the issue of racial equality.

"Even when he was 22 years old he looked at things differently than most guys," Tom Dawson, a friend in college related. "Always wanting to make a difference, effect change. It's been part of his living and breathing for as long as I've known him." (ISU Alumni Magazine, Spring 1990)

CAMPAIGN ISSUES:

*A controversial capital gains tax cut which would spur investment and jumpstart the economy; end the luxury tax on yachts and private aircraft to create more jobs.

*Reduce the military budget by $50 billion over the next 5 years by cutting weapons programs and reducing the size of the standing army. The SDI or "Star Wars" program remains in full effect.

*Promote free trade, not protectionism. Freeze domestic spending and curtail federal hiring. Limit the terms of elected Federal officials.

*Reform the private health-care system to provide coverage for all without nationalized medicine.

*Many threats to the national security of the US exist in spite of the fall of communism, according to Bush, who will continue to act in foreign affairs "in support of freedom everywhere."

*Outlaw abortion, protect the flag, balance the budget, encourage welfare reform based on the concept of workfare.

*Redefine "wetlands" in a way that would allow greater development in many of the areas that are now protected.

*His "America 200" plan would give parents more choice in where their children go to school and teachers more flexibility in what they teach.

CURRENT QUOTE: On dealing with the federal budget: "I'm all for Lawrence Welk. Lawrence Welk is a wonderful man - he used to be or was or wherever he is now, bless him. But we don't need $700,000 for a Lawrence Welk museum when we've got tough times..."

Viterbo administrators stuck in the closet

by Sarah L. Newton
Editor-in-Chief

Outlined in black and white, Sister Carol Jean rigorously molded our tender fourth grade minds with her attitudes of pious righteousness. Deep within her pristine heart she knew sex was for mammals.

And every day, as our teacher, she felt it was her duty to grind her pious habits into our vulnerable, barely existent, 11-year old lifestyles.

It wasn't until I left the parochial school to attend a public junior high, and I was old enough for the laws of the Catholic church to affect me did I realize how few of them actually still functioned. Sorry Grandma.

Laws and rules like those pertaining to premarital sex and artificial forms of birth control. Laws like those that shut down the Viterbo College newspaper last week.

For those who haven't read yet—the Viterbo College student newspaper, in a supplement to a "family planning" type ad, published a "top ten reasons to use a condom" list.

The fact that this list promoted safe sex, much less any sex, among unmarried college students was enough for the school's administration to axe the newspaper. Everyone on staff has been fired.

I must say to those decision makers, "Open your eyes!" Anyone who follows any news source has got to be aware of those falling victim to AIDS everyday, and the rampant trail of other STD's.

Plan of action proposed for pro-choice advocates

by Larry Roberts
Contributor

Does the end justify the means? Randall Terry of Operation Rescue and other anti-abortion extremists have said it does. I might be inclined to agree, but the "end" I support is a woman's right to choose.

Harrasing the children of abortionists, shouting obscenities at patients, threatening doctors, and intimidating abortion rights supporters are all tactics in the fight against abortion. When asked if he thought this was just, Randall Terry said it was—if it stops abortion.

What should pro-choice advocates be doing? Currently they are working within the system to further the cause. However, this policy has begun to fail.

I think abortion clinics should hire large security men well trained in the martial arts. When anti-abortion protesters show up, the security men should beat the righteousness out of them. The headquarters of anti-abortion groups should be bombed along with the houses of its members. Randall Terry should be shot, and anyone who follows him should be jailed.

If this were done, it would further a woman's right to choose. I would not agree with the method, but after all, the end justifies the means.

Study finds connection between head, butt and harassment Student files grievance citing library and meter maids

Scientists recently reported a significant correlation between a person's capacity for harassment, the size of their head, and the dimensions of their posterior.

The study found the larger a person's head, the more likely they would perceive themselves to be in control, and the greater the chance for them to behave as butts.

Though data is inconclusive, evidence supporting this hypothesis is alive and well on this campus. It's called "just doing my job," and translates to legal harassment.

This perverted sense of duty, mingled with control issues and a lousy personal life may explain part of the situation, but that's a greater psychological issue best left for the Student Health Center. My gripe is clearly one of harassment.

Harassment by limited library hours, and expensive inconvenient parking facilities, made nastier by vindictive notices and strong arm tactics.

Following are case studies that define the universe of my "big head, big butt, harassment" premise.

STUDY #1--The Library
Certainly next to the professors themselves, there can be little more important, than accessibility to library materials. And copy machines.

Yet our Learning Resource Center (alias, the library), closes at 4:30 on Friday, and 5:00 on Saturday--the greater of the weekend.

And the IMC and Government Document hours are even more restricted, with everything closed over vacations.

Just for the record, not everyone goes out of town, or to the taverns on Thursday afternoon. Perhaps the university is in collusion with the local bar-keeps to maintain patron quotas--God knows we wouldn't want students in the library when they could be doing research on the local bar culture.

And unfortunately, many people don't have the flexible schedule necessary to go to the library during the day.

vacations are times I can devote the long hours necessary to my thesis research.

But there's a conflict with the service provider and unfortunately, the library either closes early or isn't open at all.

Conclusion: "Just doing my job, especially with reduced budgets." Control of information resources equals lots of perceived personal power and seems plausible that students should be able to park in the essentially "open" lots.

Staff goes home, the lots (at least around the administration buildings) are empty, and what can it hurt...wrong, around the corner lurks a big head.

I know, I know...rules are rules and goldam I should pay the $50-60 for a permit like everyone else and then I can park off in the distance too.

And there's nothing more invigorating than a brisk seven block walk in the dark to get the blood flowing. Afterall, there were only reported rapes last year in Stevens Point.

Well, Parking Services has come to their senses and just offered me a deal I can't refuse. I have a choice between paying $10 for the ticket, or $10.76 for a "night permit." Pro-rated, mind you. You see they left me a little note with my ticket (pre-printed so don't get in a huff that you've been left out) that reads:

"We apologize for the inconvenience but unfortunately have found it necessary to issue you a citation for parking in an unauthorized lot. However, if you find that you have a continuing need for this lot after 3:00 pm, Continued on page 17

"Next to professors . . . there can be little more important than accessibility to library materials."

Even freshmen students (the epitome of persecuted) need time to prepare and research for their classes. Just last Saturday morning two students stood outside the IMC grumbling about its hours.

It was closed. Restricted hours become even more critical for commuting non-trads, and graduate students who are juggling full adult lives.

I know. As a full-time graduate student and Instructional Assistant, weekends and results in butt city. STUDY #2--Parking

There isn't a student on this campus, or faculty or staff member either I'll bet, who hasn't growled about parking.

It's not like we're afraid of a little exercise, and I like playing "gotcha" with the meter maids as well as the next person, but it seems there's something vindictive about the attitude of the parking crew on this campus.

Because evening classes start at either 4:30 or 6:30 and university offices close at 4:30, it

R.I.G.H.T. founder claims display has artistic value

Dear Editor:

In last week's Pointer, the editor felt obliged to attack the display in the LaFollette lounge as something without value. As president of the R.I.G.H.T. group, I am compelled to set her straight.

First, if this display had nothing of value, then why did the editor write about it? One could easily assume Sarah Newton, the editor-in-chief, either had no real editorial or she has become used to her editorials being written on items she feels have absolutely no value.

Second, Sarah states that, "...nowhere...does this display state its purpose." I may have been mistaken, but I believed some of my peers when they said that this was an institution of higher learning where people are taught to think for themselves. It horrifies me to think that the editor, who is a senior, has made it this far without the ability to understand something unless being told its meaning.

Thirdly, most of the pictures in the display came from the periodicals in the UWSP library. For example, the self portrait of Robert Maplethorpe with "a bullwhip lodged in his anus," the "nude 5 or 6 year old boy," the "little girl with her vagina exposed," and the picture of the five nude women on the beach came from THE ART JOURNAL. The PLAYBOY picture also came from the UWSP library.

Lastly, I would like to know what those of you who were fortunate enough to see the display felt it meant. In other words, if you are an educated individual with the ability to understand what something means to you, please write down your thought and send them through campus mail to the R.I.G.H.T. group, Box 13, Campus Activities. We will print any and all letters in the next issue of CHAOS; a news letter sponsored by the R.I.G.H.T. group.

County trees a clear-cut disaster

Dear Editor:

A few weeks ago, Bill Weronke, the new Portage County Highway Commissioner, started a policy of clear-cutting trees along county right-of-ways.

Along a four mile stretch of County Highway Z, road crews have cut down and bulldozed dozens of trees. Many of them were huge old oaks that were standing there when our great grandparents were children. According to Mr. Weronke, this "will be a common practice from here on in."

Mr. Weronke and the five members of the county highway committee believe that removing the trees, as well as boulders, will provide safer roads for motorists.

Another reason that they are removing the trees is to improve drainage along the roads, hopefully allowing the roads to last longer. This will allow the county to resurface roads less frequently, saving taxpayer dollars.

Many people feel that eliminating all trees from a 33 foot area on either side of the center line of county roads will not necessarily provide for a safer road.

Others of us question the policy of a group of people who believe that sacrificing ancient trees is worth saving taxpayer dollars.

What is the value of a hundred year old tree?

The highway commissioner has not yet been able to answer that question. He has given no estimate of the savings he expects from his clear-cutting policy.

The U.S., in a desperate effort to fight deforestation, is forgiving foreign debt to prevent clear-cutting; I find it ironic that at the same time, Portage County is implementing a policy of clear-cutting to save taxpayer dollars.

County highways are public property, owned by YOU, but the decision to clear-cut them was made by one man with the support of five others.

Let the county highway committee know what you think of their policy; stop by the concourse today and sign a petition to halt the clear-cutting.

Better yet, write or call the highway committee members, Mr. Weronke, or your representative on the county board to voice your opinion. Addresses and additional information will be available at the booth.

If you enjoy the feeling of driving down a winding county road shaded by big oak trees on a sunny day, let your representatives know, or soon the trees may be gone!

Flag burning rally ignites retort Victims far from powerless

Dear Editor:

I sure am glad there are people like Mr. Frank Stallons to protect me from Student Government. Here I thought the purpose of the flag burning was to catch the attention of my fellow students, to make them aware that there is such a thing as a Board of Regents, and to possibly stir them to action.

I'm certainly not glad I now know that Dan Krause, Legislative Affairs director, went through the trouble of getting a burning permit, inviting Elliot Madison to speak, and publicizing an entire week of informative programs just to help President Butts and Vice-President Olkowski vent their personal anger!

It truly takes a person of incredible perceptive skills like Mr. Stallons, to see through the complex scheme developed by Mr. Krause.

How about that idea about giving the money back to the State?

The man is brilliant. Maybe Wisconsin taxpayers will demand tax increases so we can have the pleasure of giving even more back! Can you imagine the look on our state officials' faces when we pay them, again!

Of course not being of the same mentality as Mr. Stallons, I have not yet been able to see how this will affect the Regents, but I am positive he'll let us know about his grand scheme.

I trust his judgement.

In fact, I'll go so far as to say I will send in my check just as soon as his clears.

I am sure the program Student government sponsored was designed to stir action just like that taken by Mr. Stallons. I am only sorry he didn't take time to put his facts together before he put pen to paper.

In fact, individual rights are compromised every day. What needs to be stressed is that if your personal rights, as a student or otherwise, have been violated, you are far from powerless!

You would be amazed at the affect a high profile event can have in catching the attention of the Board of Regents, the Chancellor or anyone else for that matter.

Once you have their attention, let them know exactly how you feel.

If you don't get satisfaction, then see to it they are voted out of office.

We really do have the power, but we also have a responsibility to be informed and to be active members of the government which our elected officials operate.

Pointers win fourth straight NCHA post season title Earn automatic bid to NCAA tourney, host quarterfinals March 13-14

by Tom Weaver

Contributor

The three step approach of the UW Stevens Point hockey team is now two-thirds complete.

Step number one: Win the NCHA regular season championship. Step number two: Win the NCHA post season tournament. Step three: The NCAA Division III ice hockey playoffs.

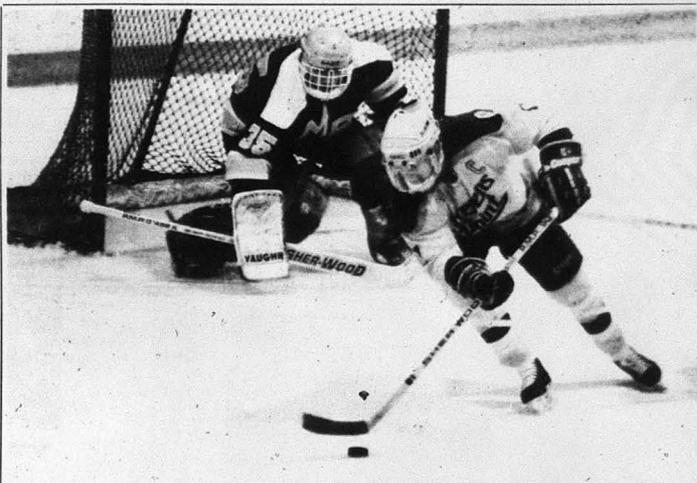

The Pointers 6-2 and 4-4 tie with Mankato State in the NCHA post season tournament finals this past weekend has given the three time defending national champions an automatic bid to the NCAA quarterfinals on March 13-14, where they will host an opponent to be named on Sunday March 8.

The winner of that game will advance to the Division III final four the following weekend.

Stevens Point 6 Mankato State 2

The Mavericks of Mankato State came to the Willett Arena looking to snap the Pointers three year domination of the NCHA post season tournament. Just one year ago the Pointers went to Mankato and stole the title from the Mavericks on their home ice. This time the Mavericks were trying to do the same to the Pointers.

"We knew that coming into the series that they would be eager to get another shot at us for a number of reasons. We have really been their spoiler the past few years," said Pointer Head Coach Joe Baldarotta.

The Pointers came out and took the early lead in game one of the series, with some physical play. Frank Cirone delivered a thundering check to a Maverick defender near the Mankato blue line which worked the puck loose to Paul Caufield.

Caufield fired the puck back to Cirone who beat Maverick goaltender Brian Langlot. "It was important for us to come out and get on the board first, it set the tempo for the game and made them have to catch us," Baldarotta said.

Cirone's goal was the only goal of the first period and it wasn't until the 11:56 mark of the second period that the Pointers would strike again on Scott Krueger's powerplay goal.

The Mavericks, however, got on the board 50 seconds later on Mike Cioli's powerplay effort and the teams headed to the final period seperated only by a goal.

The sold out crowd at the Willett Arena prepared for a battle down to the wire in the series opener - but things would change quickly.

Paul Caufield put the Pointers up 3-1 at the 3:17 mark. Not many people were ready for what was about to happen.

In the next 3:52, Al Bouschor picked up two goals, and Caufield added another, giving the Pointers a 6-1 lead in the sub-four minute span.

"Those opening minutes in the third period tells you what an explosive team we do have," added Baldarotta. "They were never able to regroup and we blew a close game wide open."

The Mavericks picked up a powerplay goal midway through the final period as Dan Brettschneider beat Todd Chin to the short side, producing the games final score of 6-2.

Todd Chin finished the game with 32 saves while Brian Langlot ended with 33 stops in the Maverick net.

The Pointers added another page to the history books in the 6-2 win when they spent 46 minutes in the penalty box to give them 935 minutes on the season. Those 935 minutes breaks the all-time Pointer record for penalty minutes in a single season, clipping the 924 minutes of the 1988-89 national championship squad.

Game two of the series had a pretty clear message. If the Pointers won or tied, they would win the series. If Mankato continued on page 8

Six wrestlers going to nationals

by Mike McGill

Sports Writer

Coach Marty Loy's Pointer Men's Wrestling team marched into the NCAA Division III Regional meet at Wabash College in Crawfordsville, Indiana last weekend and managed to qualify six wrestlers to competition in the nationals, hosted by Trenton State college in Trenton, New Jersey on March 6 and 7.

"I'm pleased with the way we wrestled and proud of advancing six to nationals, the most of any team there," Loy said.

Cameron native Travis Ebner (190 lbs.), a sophomore with a 25-6-2 overall record, both took second place honors in their respective classes.

Germantown's Jeff Bartkowiak, with a 28-11 overall record, registered third in the 134 lbs. division to also earn a national berth.

"I feel we've got a good shot of doing well (at nationals) ... The people we're sending are all very capable of getting All-American status," said Loy.

Also wrestling at the regionals for UWSP were Joe Ramsey (118 lbs.), who beat La Crosse's

Of the qualifiers, taking first place honors for UWSP were Mark Poirer (142 lbs.), a junior from Bloomer, Wisconsin with a 26-6-2 overall record; Tom Weix (167 lbs.), a senior from Merrill sporting a 20-2 overall record; and Stevens Point native Brian Suchocki (heavyweight), a junior carrying a 24-5 overall record.

Westby's Colin Green (177 lbs.), a junior at 23-9 and Dan Dohse for a third place trophy and Bob Koehler (126 lbs.) who bowed out following a defeat from Whitewater's Kent Weiler.

Also from Whitewater, Luke Francois foiled UWSP's Carl Shefchik (150 lbs.), who still managed a fourth place finish.

Finally, Chris Kittmann couldn't place in the top four following a loss to Stout's Corey McCauley.

Pointers prepare for first playoff game Will host River Falls on Sunday

by Mark Gillette

Sports Editor

The Pointer Men's basketball team will return to action Sunday, March 8 when they host UW-River Falls in an NAIA District 14 semifinal playoff game.

UWSP will bring a 24-1 overall record into the contest along with their no. 3 NAIA Division I ranking.

River Falls comes into the game which starts at 7:30 p.m. at Quandt Fieldhouse with a 15-11 overall mark as well as confidence that they can play with the Pointers.

The last time Stevens Point and River Falls played against each other the Falcons came very close to upsetting UWSP on their home court, 76-75.

"Last time they played us they took us down to the wire and had an opportunity to beat us on a last second shot... They know in their minds that they can play with us," said Pointer Head Coach Bob Parker. Parker was named coach of the year in WSUC earlier this week by his coaching peers in the conference.

UWSP had a bit easier time against the Falcons the first time they met this season at Quandt, defeating River Falls 82-67.

River Falls has a balanced attack that includes an all-conference player in Marcus Lane who will be complemented by Kevin Larson, Brian Menzel at point guard, and John Quinn and Chris Schmitt in the middle.

Falcons coach Rick Bowen nominated all five of his starters

"We need to use our size and strength against them to our advantage and not get in a quickness game." - Coach Bob Parker to the all-conference team, which shows just how balanced Parker believes River Falls is.

The Pointers, who will go into the game with a school record 19 straight victories, have quite an attack of their own starting with all-conference senior forward Jon Julius.

Julius led the league in scoring this season with a 20 points per game average and needs only 26 points to become the all time leader in Pointer scoring ahead of Tim Naegeli ('83-'87) who has 1,649 career points. Julius also averages 6.6 rebounds per game.

All-conference sophomore guard Andy Boario (14.1 ppg, 4.1 assists/game), all-conference senior guard Mike "Boomer" Harrison (14.2 ppg, 3.4 assists/game), junior forward Justin Freier and junior Scott Frye round out the starting five for Point.

Off the bench for UWSP is junior center Jack Lothian (12.3 ppg, 6 rpg), who gained conference honorable mention, junior forward Buck Gehm, and freshman guard Gabe Miller.

Mike Dahlquist, who is out for the season after undergoing knee surgery, is the only injured Pointer.

Both teams have been off for about two weeks. The Pointers last game was when they won the conference championship at Whitewater on Feb. 22. The time off was well-needed rest according to Parker.

Women's track team places third at conference

by Mark Gillette
Sports Editor

The Pointer Women's track and field team placed third out of eight teams at the WWIAC indoor championships held at UW-Platteville last weekend.

Amy Voigt captured the only first place finish for the Pointers with a time of 1:38.16 in the 600 meter run. Voigt's time was a WWIAC record.

Stevens Point's placement in the meet was topped only by conference winners Oshkosh with 217.5 points and LaCrosse with 170 points. UWSP came in a distant third with 62 points.

Pointer Coach Len Hill was very happy with the meet, stating: "I was very pleased with the way the team pulled together and just got into this meet."

"We fed off of each other.

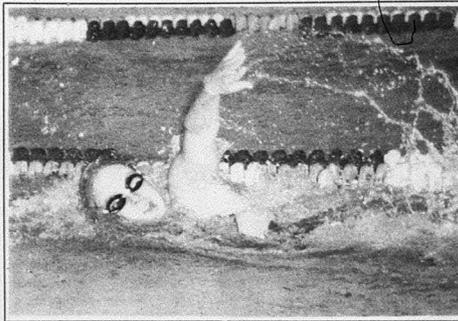

One person would have a good race and the person in the next race would light it up and do a superb job," added Hill.

Third place finishers for Point included Marnie Sullivan with a time of 4:50.31 in the 1500 meter and 10:30.44 in the 3000 meter; Aimee Knitter 18:15.34 in the 5000 meter; Julie Greco 26.90 in the 200 meter; and the 4x200 meter relay of Greco, Voigt, Sara Salaj and Amy Pruckrey (1:50.64).

Suzu Jandrin placed fourth in the 5000 meter (18:16.03), and the 3000 meter (10:35.39). Other fourth place marks came from Greco in the 400 meter (61.89), Tina Jarr in the 1500 meter (5:01.80), and Salaj, Pruckrey, Greco and Voigt representing the 4x400 meter Pointer relay team (4:14.93).

Swimmers take second at conference

For the 15th straight year the men's swimming and diving team took second place, and for the 13th straight year the women's team also took second place, at the WSUC-WWIAAC Conference Championships last weekend in the Health Enhancement Center pool.

"This is the first Conference Championship held in Stevens Point since 1966. Now that we have such a nice facility and great support from the students, retirees, faculty, and administration, we are once again able to host such an important meet," said Head Coach Red Blair.

This three-day preliminary meet began as finals on Thursday night were sparked with national qualifying swims by the men's and women's 200 freestyle relays. The 400 medley relays also competed well as the women took first place, and the men took second place with a national qualifying time.

"In order to swim fast, you need to have a spark that turns into fire. This adrenalin is what creates good swims. It was hard for us to find this spark of adrenalin on Thursday, however, as it was our first competition in a while," said Blair.

The divers finished Thursday with Cari Nilles placing fifth with 334.15 points, and Sharon Drescher placing sixth with 329.55 points on the three meter board. Jay Stevens placed third with 432.40 points, and Brandon Koll placed sixth with 419.15 points on the one meter board.

At the end of competition Thursday, the women's team was in third place with 185 points behind LaCrosse (second) and Eau Claire (first), and the men were in second place behind Eau Claire.

Finals on Friday began as the women's 200 medley took first place and the men's 200 medley took second with a national qualifying time.

"This is a long meet to stay up for mentally, as well as physically. Even though it's a very demanding meet, I feel our team was very supportive of each other which helped us to swim strongly and successfully," said Assistant Coach Laura Anderson.

Nan Werdin won the women's 400 IM (4:55.25), Juan Cabrera took second in the men's 400IM (94:17.90), Tiffany Hubbard took second in the women's 100 breaststroke (1:11.22), Matt Boyce placed second in the men's 100 breaststroke (59.78), followed by his brother Christian Boyce in third (59.88).

Another strong swim was seen by Julie Pausch with a second place finish in the women's 100 backstroke (1:03.05).

Jay Stevens took second place on the three meter with 479.70 points and Brandon Koll finished fifth with 435.30 points. Sharon Drescher took fourth place on one meter with 321.25 and Cari Nilles placed fifth with 304.45.

"I felt we dove very well in this meet. Our year of work definitely paid off as we held ourselves together mentally, as well as physically, to perform our dives to our fullest potential," said Head Diving Coach Scott Thoma.

Saturday also presented its share of great swims as Nan Werdin won the women's 200 butterfly (2:14.11) as did Juan Cabrera in the men's 200 butterfly (1:54.74). Tiffany Hubbard won the women's 200 breaststroke (2:32.74), and

Three Pointers named to all-WSUC team

Three players from the conference champion UWSP men's basketball team were named to the all-WSUC team this week while another Pointer gained honorable mention. Additionally Bob Parker was chosen Coach of the year by his peers in the conference.

Jon Julius, a senior from Lena, Ill., Mike Harrison, a senior from Sheboygan, and Andy Boario a sophomore from Waupaca headed the 10 man team. The Pointers placed more players on the team than any other, with Platteville, Whitewater, and Eau Claire having two men each on the team and River Falls one player.

Jack Lothian, a junior center from Williams Bay, was given an honorable mention in the conference.

The all-WSUC team is picked by the nine league coaches. The only repeater from last year's team is senior James Hodges of Whitewater.

T.J. Van Wie and Carlton Jeter (Platteville); Vince Nichols and Hodges of Whitewater; Willie Green and Marcus Buckley (Eau Claire); and Marcus Lane of River Falls were the other players named to the team.

the season when every game we had to play at a high emotional pitch. I thought we needed some time to get ourselves mentally back into it.

"Hopefully we can get ourselves cranked up this week to go at it in the playoffs."

If the Pointers don't get themselves going early on in the game they may run into some trouble against a smaller, quicker Falcon team.

"Their strength is offensive execution. They really run their motion offense extremely well," Parker said. "We don't particularly match up well with them."

Parker believes the mismatches can work to the Pointers advantage: "I think it's really important to make that mismatch work against them... They're quicker and smaller than us, and in those positions we need to post them up and take advantage of the mismatches that are occurring."

"We need to use our size and strength against them to our advantage and not get in a quickness game."

The winner of the UWSP-UWRF game will go up against the winner of the Eau Claire-Viterbo game. If Point defeats River Falls they will play the winner of that game on Tuesday, March 10 at 7:30 p.m. in Quandt Gym.

Men's track team finishes sixth at conference

by Brady Kjel

Contributor

The UWSP men's track and field team placed sixth at the eight-team WSUC Championships last Saturday in River Falls. The La Crosse Eagles buried all competition by more than doubling the point total of second place Oshkosh.

The Eagles collected 216 points to Oshkosh's 83. The Pointers turned in a 49 point effort with several high individual finishes.

Dean Bryan took first in the 400 meters with a time of 49.27. Chris Larson scored a first in the 200 hurdles with a 25.17 time. Park Hanson finished fourth in the same event at a 25.78 clip.

Bryan, Larson and Hanson teamed with Marty Kirschner to run the 4x400 relay at a time of 3:25.31, just enough to edge La Crosse by ten hundredths of a second and Platteville by 1.54 for first place.

Pointer Jeff Constable took fifth in the 1000 meters at 2:34.36. Bill Green took fifth in the 55 meters with 6.69. Dave Scheuer placed fifth in the pentathlon with a score of 3,388.

The UWSP 4x200 relay team of Green, Bryan, Tony Biolo and Chad Kobran finished fourth with a 1:32.85 time.

This Saturday, March 7, the Pointers take part in Pointer Co-ed Invite no. 3 at the Health Enhancement Center. The meet begins at 11 a.m.

The final results for the men were: Eau Claire..976, Stevens Point..782, LaCrosse..557, Whitewater..337, Stout..273, Oshkosh..232, and River Falls..0.

The conference meet will be held in Whitewater next year and will return to Stevens Point in four or five years.

The women's team will go to the State University of New York- Buffalo on March 12-14 to compete in the NCAA Division III Swimming and Diving Championships. The men travel to the same site on March 19-21.

Mary Meyer took second place in the women's 1650 (18:21.39).

"The women had a great conference meet this year. LaCrosse thought they had a chance at second place after Thursday, but we kept our heads together and swam strong to keep them in third. The men needed to swim strong from beginning to end, especially against Eau Claire. We swam stronger in the last two sessions than we did in the first one, and you can't do that when you're swimming against Eau Claire," said Blair.

"I feel that the captains did an outstanding job leading the team all season, but especially at the conference meet. Everyone who was involved in this meet did a great job," said Anderson.

The final results of the meet for the women were: Eau Claire..933, Stevens Point..631, LaCrosse..594, Whitewater..297, Osh-Jarr and Laurie Melling turned in sixth place finishes in the 1000 meter (3:12.62) and the shot put (39' 9 3/4") respectively.

Hill commented that over half of the team members had their best performances of the season, while a fourth of the members put together the best performance of their careers.

"Amy Voigt, Julie Greco, Tina Jarr, Marnie Sullivan, Aimee Knitter, Amy Pruckrey, Suzy Jandrin, Sara Salaj and Laurie Melling gave us efforts that were just awesome. They represented Pointer track and field at its very best."

What makes the Pointer showing even more impressive is that they are a very young team with little experience in meets of this stature.

"We are a very young team in that over half of the team is freshman while several other people are on the team for their first season," Hill said.

The Pointer's next meet is the Pointer Co-ed Invite no. 3 which will begin at 11 a.m., Friday, March 6 in the Health Enhancement Center.

could pull off a victory, a mini-game would decide the post season tournament championship.

The Mavericks were determined to force the decisive mini-game as Paul Gerten picked up two powerplay goals and Trevor Rosslein added a third goal on the powerplay to give the visitors an impressive 3-0 lead after two periods.

The Pointer comeback started at the 3:12 mark of the final period when Todd Tretter pounced on a rebound during the powerplay to move the frustrated Pointers to within two goals of the Mavericks at 3-1.

"The first goal by Tretter was probably the most important because it told our guys we were on the board and got the ball rolling," said Baldarotta. "After that goal, we really picked things up a notch and got our crowd behind us, they really helped us out."

Jeff Marshall brought the Pointers a little closer with a goal at the 7:26 mark. Scott Krueger then gave the Pointers their first tie of the night with another powerplay goal at 11:56.

The Mavericks, however, were not about to give up and let the Pointers take the third period without a fight.

Paul Gerten continued to frustrate the Pointers, as he picked up his third goal of the night giving the Mavericks hope for a mini-game with 6:39 remaining.

Several Pointers have been on a scoring tear as of late as Paul Caulfield and Todd Tretter have had over 20 points in their last 11 games.

Jeff Marshall has been on tear of his own and he pulled things to even once again as he took a perfect pass from Monte Conrad and the junior ripped a shot past Langlot in the far corner of the net, giving the Pointers the 4-4 tie and their fourth straight NCHA post season tournament championship.

"Jeff (Marshall) has been playing really well for us lately, as have a lot of other guys. We are coming together as a team and it couldn't come at better time," Baldarotta said.

The Pointers now will host the NCAA quarterfinals at the Willett Arena on March 13-14.

Their opponent will be announced on Sunday, March 8 as the NCAA selection committee will announce the pairings for both the East and West. Tickets for the quarterfinal series will go on sale on Monday morning March 9 in the athletic department ticket office.

*Upon graduation in 1962, Harkin entered the US Navy as a jet pilot. Sent overseas to Southeast Asia as part of LBJ's military buildup in 1965, he saw no combat in Vietnam, but came to the conclusion that the war was unjustified by listening to the stories of the returning fighter pilots.

"There was not a coward among them, they'd go to the death if they felt it was right, but they felt the senselessness, the frustration."

*Harkin's first foray into electoral politics was an unsuccessful bid for Congress in Iowa's Fifth District in 1969, when he was beaten by the incumbent, Republican Bill Scherle. Frustrated by Scherle's unwillingness to debate, Harkin "crashed" one of Scherle's rallies, strode onto the stage, shook his startled opponent's hand and said, "Excuse me, Bill. I'd like to introduce myself. You've been spreading a pack of lies about me."

*Opening line in his speech announcing his candidacy: "I'm here to tell you George Herbert Walker Bush has got feet of clay, and I intend to hammer them."

CAMPAIGN ISSUES:

*Heavy investment to rebuild the infrastructure of America and put people to work. "We would rebuild America with American steel, American workers, with American products, doing it right here in this country."

*"As President I would do everything in my power to pass an anti-strike bill; no more scabs to bust the unions. No one has to beg me to be on that anti-striker replacement bill." (Spoken at a debate in front of the AFL-CIO leadership.)

*Increase in the capital-gains tax system to generate federal revenue. He describes the idea of "trickle-down economics" as a failed "economic experiment that should be thrown onto the trash heap of history alongside Communism."

*Would fight for a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution.

*As president he would "invest in early childhood education and the Head Start program."

*"What my candidacy means is a national health insurance plan for all. It also means getting tough on trade and to quit exporting jobs."

CURRENT QUOTE: "We need a president, once again, like FDR and Harry Truman and JFK, who can go to the American people, who understands how they feel, who knows what it's like in their guts to be an ordinary, hard-working American, who knows what it's like to fight for their family."

consisted of posters and mail stuffers. The mail stuffers read, "If you're not afraid to learn, you're invited to attend."

Perrodin said in an interview, "I authorized all the publicity and found nothing offensive about it."

There were alleged threats of violence against the panelists but the event was peaceful. The three protesters were in attendance.

Perrodin and the 10% Society were undaunted by the threats. Perrodin said, "If it benefited two people in the building I'm glad I authorized it. If some people were offended by the subject matter, they didn't have to go."

Both Perrodin and Barrett felt the reaction from the majority of the audience was positive.

On other items, Zach recommended that students avoid complete sentences in resumes. "People that use 'I' in a resume show that they haven't taken responsibility to learn the language that is acceptable is resume writing," he said.

Regarding descriptions of career objectives and jobs, Zach cautioned, "Keep it short and clear and keep the fluff out of it. Use present and future tense verbs."

"The Majority of people will not do what is necessary to make a good resume. It's not that hard to compete," said Zach. "What is hard is to make the employer understand the illusion of yourself that you want."

Pointer Profile volunteers ACT Grabko insight

by Julie Apker
Features Editor

For a person who was voted "Most Shy" at Hatley High School, Denise Grabko now volunteers plenty of information about the success of the Association for Community Tasks (ACT).

As president of ACT, Grabko heads a student organization of more than 800 members who are dedicated to helping others. According to Grabko, ACT has come a long way since it started 15 years ago, and the future looks bright as well.

"Volunteering doesn't have to mean raking leaves. ACT has something to offer everyone," said Grabko. "Whatever their major, our volunteer opportunities offer practical experience and the chance to make a difference in the community and on campus."

She says that although participant membership has increased, there is more of need for volunteers at ACT's 33 agencies.

"Some of newest projects include working with the Salvation Army homeless shelter and assisting with community recycling," said Grabko. "In addition, ACT is sponsoring an Alternative Spring Break in which 10 students will travel to San Antonio, Texas to help with Habitat for Humanity and at a soup kitchen there. By working together as a team, the members of ACT will help so many people."

Students discover personal tour de France

by Stephanie Bass

Staff Writer

Bonjour Pointers!

Greetings from the UWSP group studying in France. Home for us is the small town of Boulouis. We're right on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea in between St. Tropez and Cannes.

The weather is fantastic, with the sun shining nearly every day. Although it isn't quite warm enough for sun bathing, we're hoping for tans soon.

During the week we attend classes. Our courses mostly concern France, such as the language, the culture, the cooking, and its history.

The weekends are filled with excursions. We either go as a group or individually, or in small groups with French families who volunteer to take us. The French families have been very hospitable to all of us.

Our french is improving every day, but then again, it has to! We use our french all the time when we're outside of the group.

Most of us talk with other french students and the people in restaurants and around the city. It's pretty rewarding and a major morale booster, but then we go to the post office. The woman who works there is always grumpy, always impatient, and very hard to understand! One trip to the post office can burst your confidence bubble for a week.

Along with learning the language, we are adapting to some of the cultural differences.

For example, a simple greeting can be confusing. Many people shake hands, but most people exchange kisses on each cheek. It's always a big question, "Do I extend my hand or my lips?" It is nice however. Friends exchange kisses every time they meet and every time they say good-bye. We all agree that it's one thing we're going to miss.

Another cultural difference is the importance of dogs. Everyone seems to have a dog and they take their dog everywhere! Dogs are taken to the grocery store, the mall, the Country music star Travis Tritt to headline Quandt show

Country music artists Travis Tritt and Marty Stuart, plus special guest Mark O'Connor, will perform at 7:30 pm, Thursday, April 2 at the UWSP Quandt Fieldhouse.

Tickets are $18.50 each for the "No Hats Tour." They are available at the University Center Information Desk and the Eastside and Northside IGAs in Stevens Point, Wausau Quality Foods in Wausau, West Grand Foods in Wisconsin Rapids, and Kramer's IGA in Abbotsford.

A Georgia native, Tritt proved his status as one of country's fastest-rising talents with a platinum success of his debut album, "Country Club," which yielded three number one singles.

His second album, "It's All about to Change," was certified blunt that he had the talent to make it in country music, he quit his job and began playing solo at any club that would have him.

He first came to the attention of Danny Davenport, a representative of Warner Bros., then was signed by Ken Kragen, manager of Kenny Rogers and organizer of "We Are The World." His first single, "Country Club," was released in November 1989 and reached number nine on the Billboard charts, followed by several number one hits.

On the road, Tritt has confirmed his reputation as a dynamic live performer over and over again. Playing about 280 shows a year, he has been described by a Milwaukee Journal reviewer as being "blunt as a 2-by-4 and twice as solid, mandolinist, Mark O'Connor is featured with other leading young musicians on "The New Nashville Cats." A landmark collection of 15 songs, written and arranged by O'Connor, the album marks the culmination of his career as a studio musician.

O'Connor has played with every top Nashville performer since arriving in Music City in 1983 and has performed on recordings by nearly every major country music star. He's also been nominated for instrumentalist of the year for five consecutive years by the Country Music Association.

O'Connor has been featured on Andreas Vollenweider's "Dancing with the Lion" album in a violin/harp duet, on Michael Brecker's Grammy-winning jazz album, "Don't Try This At

Protective Services ensure campus safety

UWSP Protective Services staff is dedicated to putting the word service into campus safety

by T.C. Talbot
Contributor

What would you say is campus security's main objective?

"We are a service organization here to provide a safe environment for our students to live and study in. We do that by helping to sensitize the campus community to safety and security issues," said Velma Jain, supervisor of Protective Services.

Their latest project, as part of an ongoing crime prevention campaign was "Campus Escort Awareness Week" last month. Students just call x3456 and one of the protective services staff will escort you anywhere on campus - anytime. Most escorts are provided and selected by the student security patrol. They go through police and background, as well as academic checks prior to being hired.

When asked how students fit in Jain said, "They can help themselves and their community by learning to be more aware of their surroundings. Simply by remembering to lock doors of residence hall rooms and automobiles they will be helping to eliminate one thing that is necessary for a crime to be committed - that is opportunity! Also, be familiar with who belongs in your residence hall or work area, and if you do notice something suspicious call us."

"We would rather come and find out everything was ok all along than not to come at all and have some harm come to someone or their property. Never be afraid to call," said Jain.

Protective Services also provides programs on sexual assault awareness, personal safety, fire safety, and dorm safety. Lastly, they also have a program called "Operation ID" where a student can come to the office and check out an engraver to mark their valuables, or they will go to a residence hall and demonstrate how to use it.

gold within two months of its release. In 1990 Billboard magazine named Tritt top new male artist (country). He has garnered several other nominations and prizes, including a Horizon Award and nine nominations for the Music City News Country Awards, which will be given in June.

Tritt describes his career as an "overnight success that took eight and a half years to happen." He began his career as a soloist in the children's choir at church, taught himself how to play guitar at age eight and wrote his first song at 14.

Upon graduation from high school in 1981, he went to work loading trucks and within four years had worked his way up to a management position. Gam-commanding the crowd by force of presence."

A crusader for hillbilly music, Marty Stuart's first MCA album, "Hillbilly Rock," yielded three hit singles, followed by his new release, "Tempted." Born in Mississippi, he got his education on the road with Lester Flatt and Johnny Cash. "Marty Stuart" was his major label debut on CBS.

In addition to composing much of his own music, Stuart's photographs have been featured in Country Music magazine and on an album cover, and he has written several articles published in music magazines. He also is a studio musician and backup player much in demand.

A master fiddler, guitarist and Home," and on James Taylor's "Never Die Young" disc.

His exceptional musical talents started gaining recognition early - by the time he was a senior in high school, he had won every major fiddle contest in the country. He released his first album at age 12. In 1981 he joined the innovative instrumental group, the Dixie Dregs, appearing on the album "Industry Standard."

After moving to Nashville in 1983, O'Connor continued to receive awards, including placement in Frets magazine's Gallery of the Greats. He recently recorded a composition he wrote for a classical string quartet and has begun performing solo concerts that feature his talents on fiddle, guitar and mandolin.

There's always room for Jello Biafra

by Jason Fare

Contributor

He calls himself the "High Priest of Harmful Matter." His career has included six records as the leader of the Dead Kennedys, three spoken-word releases, and two solo compilations of music.

Jello Biafra is the most confrontational and crucial artist in the floundering music industry today. His material demands to be listened to. It is intellectual ammo for the ears and mind.

From the first Dead Kennedys release, "Fresh Fruit for Rotting Vegetables", to his latest spoken-word assault, "I Blow Minds For A Living", Biafra has kept a continuous blowtorch of thought pressed against the bloated butt of commercial culture.

In and out of court, defending his and your rights, Biafra has been black-listed and burnt while trying to disperse the information. American newspapers are afraid to print.

"Don't hate the media, become the media," encourages Biafra. He wishes to monkey-wrench the New World Order. The corporate-minded individuals who inhibit our freedoms and privacy have no right to trample and force-feed the populace their paranoia and ideals.

"Die for oil-sucker. Be all you can be. A dead Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine soldier so the fat cats in Washington and petrol companies can cash in," exhorts Biafra on "I Blow Minds".

He then continues with, "Just say no to the military. Get off your butt before your butt gets blown off. Protest the war and oil dependency. Get the government to put part of the military budget into research and development of energy alternatives."

His brilliant observations are countless. All three spoken-word albums are at least one and a half to two hours long each. They are filled with thought-provoking attacks on censorship and corruption.

He is an intense radical that deserves to be heard by the American public. Someone should sponsor the production of a Jello Biafra television special and get some substantial entertainment into the homes across the nation.

Some of Biafra's ideas seem extreme and anarchic on the surface, but with close examination, they reveal many disturbing realities that most people ignore or never think about.

Anyone who dismisses his work as harmful or pointless is close-minded and ignorant. One may not like how the Dead Kennedys sound, or agree with Biafra's view of the world completely, but this man cannot and should not be ignored.

Delta Phi Epsilon sorority puts UWSP on the map

by Dawn Schlipp

Contributor

UWSP is on the map for national sororities for the first time since the early 80's. Alpha Omega Rho, a local sorority has recently grown to a national sorority, Delta Phi Epsilon. The 24 women of Alpha Omega Rho became the first colony of Delta Phi Epsilon in Wisconsin, and the first national sorority at UWSP since Delta Zetas in 1981.

The goals of the colony revolve around the five "S's" of DPE: social service, sorority, sisterhood, and scholarship. These goals promote friendship among sisters and other Greeks, campus involvement, community service, philanthropic work, and academic success.

DPE participates in campus and community events such as Hunger Clean-Up, Benefest, and the International Dinner. DPE also participates in educational programs such as leadership conferences, time-management seminars, and alcohol awareness programs.

Advantages of being affiliated with a national sorority include scholarship opportunities, a nationwide network of friends, and opportunities for personal growth through participation in national seminars and conferences.

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

WHY YOU SHOULD START PLANNING FOR RETIREMENT WITH YOUR EYES CLOSED.

For retirement to be the time of your life, you have to dream a little—about the things you've always wanted to do: travel, explore, start a business. Just imagine...

With a dream and a plan, you can make it happen. Your pension and Social Security should provide a good basic retirement income, but what about all those extras that make your dreams possible? You'll probably need some additional savings.

THE DREAM IS YOUR OWN. WE CAN HELP YOU WITH THE PLAN.

TIAA-CREF Supplemental Retirement Annuities (SRAs), tax-deferred annuities for people like you in education and research, are a good way to save for retirement and save on taxes now. SRAs are easy—you make contributions through your institution before your taxes are calculated, so you pay less tax now.

You pay no tax on your SRA contributions and earnings until you receive them as income. And saving regularly means your contributions and their earnings can add up quickly.

What else makes SRAs so special? A broad range of allocation choices, from the safety of TIAA to the investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity; no sales charges; a variety of ways to receive income, including annuities, payments over a fixed period, or cash. You may also be able to borrow against your SRA accumulation before you retire.*

All this, plus the top investment management that has helped make TIAA-CREF the largest retirement system in the country.

So start dreaming and planning for the time of your life. Because the sooner you start your SRA, the greater your savings and your retirement will be.

Polar explorer visits UWSP

by Wendy Wagner Kraft
Staff Writer

As we dart in and out of buildings, taking advantage of every warm short cut on these shivering winter days, it's hard to imagine anyone actually relishing this kind of weather.

Polar Explorer, Will Steger, is kin to what winter brings. He has led a number of dogsled expeditions across the frozen landscapes of Alaska, Greenland, and the Northwest Territories.

Regarding one of his Antarctic journeys Steger states, "The weather was so untrustworthy. It defies the survival of warm-blooded animals. It is brutal and it forces you to see beauty in a different perspective. In Yosemite or the Tetons or the Arctic, you can relate to the beauty, feel part of it. But here, it's almost like you're on the planet Pluto."

In 1986 he led the first confirmed dogsled journey to the North Pole without resupply, and in 1989 he was leader of the historic Trans-Antarctic Expedition—some 4,000 miles.

Steger doesn't limit his adventures to only frozen landscapes; he also has been part of mountain climbing expeditions in the Peruvian Andes, and has kayaked an unbelievable 10,000 miles in northern rivers such as the Yukon and Macenzie.

Beyond his search for outdoor adventure Steger also is an active writer; publications of his have appeared in magazines such as National Geographic. One of his books, coauthored by Jon Bowermaster, "Saving the Earth: a Citizens Guide to Environmental Action" has gained recent popularity.

Another occupation for this man of many interests is that of lecturer. If you would like to hear Steger's tales of dogsleds and bitter winds you're in luck. Steger will be at UWSP speaking of his journeys this coming Tuesday, March 10th, at 7:30 p.m. in the Program Banquet Room of the University Center. Steger will not only be speaking on his expeditions but also on some of the issues facing the continent of Antarctica.

His presentation is being sponsored by the Environmental Educators and Naturalist Association, Student Government Association, the Wildlife Society, the Residents Hall Association, and the UWSP Chancellor.

Bio-monitors for water pollution

A graduate student at UWSP is using the presence of insect populations and suspended sediments to monitor pollution in area streams.

Jim Cahow of Eau Claire will discuss his use of biological monitoring at 4 p.m. Thursday, March 5. The presentation in Room 312 of the College of Natural Resources is open to the public without charge.

Cahow says biological monitoring or biomonitoring of water pollution is more reliable and cost effective than chemical analysis methods.

Biomonitoring uses the organisms present in the stream as constant monitors for pollution. A stream sample which yields only a few kinds of insects indicates the water is polluted; if there are several kinds of insects present, such as mayflies,

Wisconsin home to ice age snails rare species helped by tax check-off

Two terrestrial snail species, living biological relics of the Pleistocene epoch, are being preserved through programs funded by the state's Endangered Resources Checkoff Fund, reports Thomas Meyer of the Department of Natural Resources' Bureau of Endangered Resources.

Wisconsin residents can help these and many other lesser-known creatures, such as the northern blue butterfly, ornate box turtle, and hooded warbler, by making a donation on their state income tax forms. Donations made to the Endangered Resources Checkoff Fund provide the bulk of monetary support to run programs that preserve Wisconsin's unique natural heritage.

Four snails are currently listed on Wisconsin's Endangered and Threatened Species list, according to Meyer. Two are endangered, the Hubricht's vertigo and the occult vertigo. Two other species are threatened, the wing snaggletooth and cherrystone drop.

The Hubricht's and occult vertigo snails have survived the warm, post-Ice Age climate on unique geological features called algalic talus slopes. These cold, damp, rocky slopes maintain a cool, moist climate year-round, duplicating conditions found in Wisconsin 10,000 years ago.

Cracks and fissures in certain limestone formations collect moisture and provide cool air to the algalic slopes through a system of sinks and vents. Meyer said the snails congregate near these vents, where they live with mosses, ferns, and some rare plant species. One such plant is northern monkshood, which Meyer noted is also on the state's threatened species list.

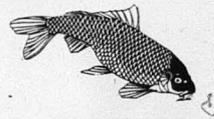

The occult vertigo, though tiny, is easily identified. Its spiral, cone-shaped shell is four to five millimeters in size and is cranberry red to brown in color. The Hubricht's vertigo is smaller, with its shell color a rich, dark brown or walnut brown.

"Even though these snails are not very exciting in themselves, they are exciting in that they provide a living history, an unbroken genetic chain, to the Ice Age," said Dr. James Theler of the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse. "The areas they live in are unbelievable." Theler, an expert in sociology and anthropology, has been hired by the Bureau of Endangered Resources to complete a survey of these snail species in Wisconsin.

These terrestrial snails spend most of their time feeding on organic material, especially decaying plants. They are most

Wisconsin predators earn credit at Treehaven

"Predators of Wisconsin," a weekend study experience will be held at Treehaven Field Station near Tomahawk from Friday evening through Sunday noon, March 27 - 29.

Participants will study wolf, bear, bobcat, fox, coyote, fisher, marten, mountain lion and badger species and become acquainted with the use of radio telemetry equipment, predator calling, tracking, and other field experiences.

The indoor and outdoor activities will include lectures, films, and slide presentations.

The current status and natural history of mammalian predators in Wisconsin will be explored, as will roles predators play in the ecosystem.

A registration, food and lodging package is offered. Commuters and families are welcome. A one-credit option is available through UWSP, which operates the field station. Treehaven is located off Lincoln County Highway A, halfway between Rhinelander and Tomahawk.

For information and registration contact Treehaven Field Station, 2540 Pickerel Creek Rd., Tomahawk, WI 54487, (715)453-4106.

Invasion of the willows?

Are willows invading Wisconsin's pristine wetlands and reducing the habitat values for wildlife?

With very little research having been done on the effects of willow invasion in wetlands, Sherrie Zenk of Cecil, a graduate student at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point, has decided to study how willow growth affects wildlife.

Her study focuses specifically on waterfowl and songbirds in three habitats in various stages of invasion. She will present information about her project at 4 p.m. Thursday, March 12 in Room 312 of the College of Natural Resources. It is open to the public without charge.

"People are becoming increasingly interested in bird watching, and wetlands offer songbirds species diversity that can be easily observed if one is willing to get their feet slightly wet," Zenk says.

When she noticed that hardly any research had been done on waterfowl use of willows, she decided that she would look into what relation there might be.

"My research project will look extensively at the waterfowl nesting and willow growth association." She also will research song birds use and diversity in the areas.

"With the increasing emphasis on management of all wildlife, instead of solely game species, the information I gather will help in the future development of wetland management techniques," Zenk predicts.

The student believes that the value of wetlands will be recognized with more knowledge and better understanding of their ecology, thus reducing chances for destruction of this type of area.

A 1990 graduate of UW-River Falls, Zenk is working with Professor Lyle Nauman at UW-SP. She is the daughter of Gloria and Russell Zenk Jr., Route 2, Cecil.

Snails

active during the warmer times of the year, but avoid direct sunlight, which would dry their tissue. Because of this they are most active at night to avoid the sun.

"Some of these snails have very small home ranges and may live their entire lives in an area no larger than a tabletop," Meyer said.

One rare species, the Briarton Pleistocene snail, has not yet been located in the state, but could possibly exist here. Theler's survey, slated to be completed this year, will help determine if these Wisconsin snail species should be included on the Federal Endangered and Threatened species list. Funding for the survey was provided by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"Finding and protecting these areas where the snails exist is necessary because there is no place where new seed (to our historic past) can be gotten," Dr. Theler said.

The endangered snails have been found at only two algal talus slope sites in Wisconsin.

The sites, both located in Grant County, each contain seven colonies of the Hubricht's and occult vertigo snails.

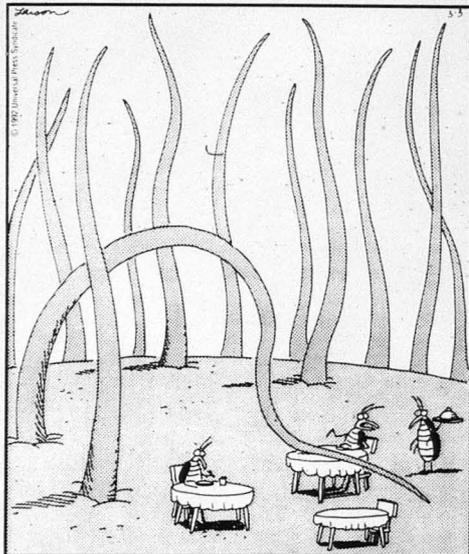

"The two threatened species are found in quite different habitats. The wing snaggletooth is found in a dozen pristine, ungrazed dry prairies on bluffs along the Mississippi River," Meyer said. "The cherrystone drop is found in several cool woods in eastern and southwestern Wisconsin. A few colonies of the cherrystone drop have been preserved at Wildcat Mountain and Wyalusing state parks."

Preserving these rare species requires maintaining their present sites by guarding against habitat changes caused by such things as logging, road building, and animal intrusion. Some sites are now protected and maintained by the DNR as State Natural Areas.

Donations to the state income tax Endangered Resources Checkoff Fund help in locating, surveying, and protecting these snails and more than 200 other of Wisconsin's endangered and threatened animal and plant species.

stoneflies and caddisflies, the quality is good, Cahow says. He also has been involved in developing a new type of sediment trap.

The student believes that sedimentation, a top concern of water quality specialists, is more than an issue for environmentalists and anglers.

"The damage is really twofold, as the stream gains high levels of sediments rich in organic matter, landowners, as well as future generations, are losing valuable organics which are the basis of soil fertility," the researcher explains.

Cahow holds a bachelor's degree in wildlife from UWSP where he works with Professor Stanley W. Szczytko. He is the son of Adam and Judy Cahow of Eau Claire.

Goldsmith and Bullis face off on free speech

by Paul Matsuda

Contributor

Lunch time in the Encore was spiced up when Judy Goldsmith, special consultant to the chancellor for equity and affirmative action, and Roger Bullis, a professor of communication, debated on the issue of Political Correctness during the Open Mike Forum on Tuesday, Feb. 25.

"I think there are points of view that faculty administration has that are not being expressed in public forums," Bullis said, raising a question about the negative influence of PC on this campus which may be related to the affirmative action policies or the Cultural Diversity programs.

Goldsmith responded to him that her focus on this campus was not PC. "I think that's a stupid term," she said.

She explained that the idea of PC has been "created by the people who are actively opposed to efforts to achieve cultural diversity and gender equity."

"It certainly isn't mine," she said.

"What's really happening," said Goldsmith, "is simply that the disadvantage is being spread around a little more evenly than it used to be."

"There was a time when there was an absolute, and unquestioned race and gender preference that operated in this country," she said. "It was for males, and it was for whites."

Bullis also brought up the issue of a UW-System speech code. "When we decide there are bigots who say bigoted things," he said, "we will punish them by kicking them out of school."

Measles

"We don't want to export it (the measles) to college campus's around the country," stated Scott Jones, Texas State Department of Health. "That's what is going to happen if people don't protect themselves."

Adults should have had two doses of the measles, mumps, and rubella (MMR) vaccine during childhood. Out of every 100 people, 95 will be protected by the first dose they are given. The second dose is to protect the others that may still be prone to the disease. There is no test available to determine who is still prone, after receiving the MMR vaccine. Health officials say that if you are uncertain as to whether you have received both doses, it doesn't hurt to get another, just to make sure.

MMR shots are available free of charge at the University Health Center located in Delzell. Their hours are from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. Mondays and 7:45 to 9am Wednesdays and Fridays on a walk-in basis. If you can't make it during these times, you can contact the Health Center at 346-4647 to make other arrangements.

"This can be a serious illness in college-age students," stated Cheryl Peters, Licensed Practical Nurse of the University Health Center. "Prevention with the measles vaccine is the best medicine. Anyone traveling to any area with a mixture of people should be protected."

"I think there is an atmosphere of intimidation," he continued. "I would prefer that bigots stay here and learn to not be bigoted."

"The goal was never to kick people out of school," Goldsmith responded.

The speech code has been rewritten by UW-Madison Law Professor Ted Finman after the court decision in October which stated that it violates First Amendment. But under the new draft, students may still be punished for using racial, sexual or age-related epithets that would "make the educational environment hostile or threatening."

Bullis, who called himself a "First Amendment absolutist," insisted that the First Amendment rights should not be chipped away even though hateful speech may offend other people. "First Amendment applies to everybody," he said, "even to unintelligent bigots."

Bullis said the alternative to PC was to allow "free expression so that the hateful speeches can be debated out."

Goldsmith agreed with him that the most important thing is free speech "so long as we actually legitimately have that."

declare a dietetics major. She hopes to continue working in the field in her professional career.

"I'd like to work in a community nutrition program, such as Meals on Wheels," said Grabko. "I really like my studies but sometimes it can be hard to be a dietetics major, especially when I get caught eating chips or drinking Mountain Dew."

According to Grabko, ACT is currently preparing for Hunger Cleanup, one its most popular volunteer events. The one-day work-a-thon offers students the opportunity to cleanup the community and generate pledges to help needy people in Portage County and worldwide.

"ACT and Hunger Cleanup are almost synonymous now," explained Grabko. "I think its popularity stems from the fact that students can volunteer for just one day and that it can also serve as a great team builder for student organizations. Last year, we won a national award for our efforts, and I hope this year's cleanup is even bigger and better."

A successful Hunger Cleanup and Alternative Spring Break are two goals Grabko has for ACT. In addition, she plans on giving ACT volunteers even more recognition for their efforts and building a strong organization which will continue the current level of enthusiasm into the next year.

there is an option.

Parking Services offers a Night Student decal valid in all PERMIT lots, (except H & U), after 3:00 pm. The prorated cost of this decal is $10.20 + $0.56 sales tax.

If you purchase this decal within 10 days after the issue date of your citation, the cost of the citation may be credited toward the decal. More information can be obtained by visiting the Parking Services office or calling X3900.

What can I say? My arm hurts and I couldn't open the library door with a broken arm even if the library were open.

Conclusion: Big head, harassment and big butt.

Hardships builds character they say ("they" too are big butts), and at this rate, we'll all be some characters when we're out of here.

Then we can do our jobs and harass other people...maybe write parking tickets in a game of cops and robbers, or better yet, be the person who gets to decide the moment when the lock is turned on the library doors.

Now there's some power, and don't say I didn't warn you.

Would a compassionate God, who belongs to everyone, condone the explosion of overpopulation, which leads only to starvation, poverty, and lingering death?

As knowledgeable adults, shouldn't these administrators be keen on the ultimate destruction linked to the denial of reality--a reality where condoms protect lives?

It would really be great if we lived in a society that imitated the sexual values of the early 40's and 50's--if they ever existed.

So that we could all go home and clean house in our skirts and pumps, awaiting the return of Ward, Wally, and the Beaver.

FOR PEOPLE WHO THINK THERE'S MORE TO LIFE THAN A PAYCHECK.

If you're a young man or woman looking at a humdrum future, there's a challenging alternative--the Army.

Not just the more than 200 skills to choose from, but the lifestyle. The chance to travel, to become fit and trim and exercise your mental muscles, too. To do things you didn't think you could do. To be proud of yourself and your country.

And you get a pretty good paycheck, too.
