

Reps solicit views on drinking age debate

Students, officials, bar owners testify about pros and cons of issue at public hearing

by Collin Lueck
of the Pointer

Serious debate over lowering the legal drinking age in Wisconsin to 19 heated up at a public hearing on campus Wednesday.

Assembly Bill 259, which would lower the drinking age to 19, is currently under consideration in the state Assembly Committee on Excise and Fees. The public hearing was held by members of the committee to probe public opinion on the issue.

Two members of the seven-member committee were in attendance -- Chairperson Tom Springer of Marathon County and Representative Don Hasenohrl of Wood and Portage Counties.

Students and tavern owners, two groups strongly supporting the bill, were well-represented at the hearing. Of the 22 people who testified, only three gave reasons to keep the legal drinking age at 21.

The main arguments against lowering the drinking age were the loss of federal highway funds and a possible increase in alcohol-related traffic deaths among 19 and 20 year olds.

Arguments in favor of lowering the drinking age were more numerous.

want it," said David Kunze, Student Government president.

Kunze and others also contended that a tavern provides young people with a safer environment to consume alcohol than does a house party.

Chief Robert Kreisa of the bridge project, said Jason Muelver, SGA communication director.

Representative Stan Gruszinski of Stevens Point said that he opposed the present drinking age when it was passed in 1986. He said the federal government age is effective. Supporters maintain that the decrease is due more to stricter drunk driving laws than to the higher drinking age.

Three members of UWSP's Student Government Association testified in favor of the bill at the hearing.

"We are supporting it because this is an issue in which students have an interest," said Christine Runte, SGA legislative issues director.

SGA is circulating petitions and has received approximately 320 signatures in support of lowering the bill and only 15 opposed. When the petitions are finished they will be sent to the Assembly Committee on Excise and Fees as evidence of student opinion.

Runte said they are hoping for the bill to be passed out of committee by the first week in December.

If the bill does make it to the floor of the Assembly, it will be the first vote on the 19-year-old drinking age since it was increased to 21 in 1986.

"Binge drinking is a lot less prevalent among people over 21 because they know they can get more alcohol whenever they want it."

Kristin Petersson, a 19-year-old UWSP student, argued that if 19 and 20-year-olds are allowed to vote and serve in the armed forces, there is no reason they should not be allowed to drink.

"We have all the privileges of an adult, except one," said Petersson.

Unsupervised drinking parties and binge drinking by young people are two problems proponents of the bill hope to alleviate by lowering the drinking age.

"Binge drinking is a lot less prevalent among people over 21 because they know they can get more alcohol whenever they

Stevens Point Police Department said he opposes any change in the drinking age.

"I don't think that putting this group of people back into the bars is going to cut down on the binge drinking and the house parties," said Kreisa.

The concern over the loss of federal highway funding was refuted by several speakers at the hearing.

The state would lose $18 million in federal funding if the drinking age were lowered to 19, according to the Tavern League of Wisconsin.

The federal money that would be lost is a negligible amount, equivalent to the cost of a single had blackmailed the state with the highway funding issue.

An Eau Claire tavern owner claimed the state never really gave the 19-year-old drinking age a chance the first time around.

"We sold out that group of people," he said in reference to the highway funding issue.

If the law were changed, the state would make more money in taxes and licensing fees than what the federal government would take away, said a La-Crosse bar owner.

Opponents of the bill cited a decrease in alcohol-related traffic deaths in recent years as proof that the present drinking

Bill defines student rights, duties

In response to a request by the UW system regents, UW Stevens Point has drafted a document of principles, known as the Communal Bill of Rights.

"The Communal Bill of Rights is designed to build community and develop a sense of ownership for students and faculty," said Alicia Ferriter, SGA Shared Governance Director.

The drafting committee, comprised of students, faculty members and administrators, spent six months preparing the document.

The bill of rights outlines the responsibilities of students, faculty and administrators regarding access to information, the development of a safe and inviting campus environment, general academics and the advising process.

"This is a way to open up communication and get everyone believing in what they belong to, which is the university and the campus," said Ferriter.

A rough draft of the bill has been sent to student organizations and administrators to get input and suggestions for revision.

SGA hopes to have responses on the rough draft by December 3. The drafting committee will be meeting again next week to review the document and consider any suggestions.

The Communal Bill of Rights incorporates elements from the original Student Bill of Rights which was drafted a few years ago but never implemented.

"The Student Bill of Rights failed because students demanded too much. The faculty wouldn't go for it and it needed to be reevaluated," said Ferriter.

The Communal Bill of Rights will have to be passed by both the student and faculty senates before it can be sent to the Chancellor's Cabinet for the final stamp of approval.

According to Ferriter, the bill will be on the dockets of both senates next semester.

The Communal Bill of Rights needs to be submitted in its final form to the UW system in Madison by June 1, 1994.

Ferriter encourages anyone who has a suggestion or a question regarding the Communal Bill of Rights to contact SGA.

BRIEFLY Policy board comtemplates bylaws

Members discuss smoking ban, other issues facing University Center

by Bill Downs
of the Pointer

STEVENS POINT -- The Board of Public Works awarded a contract to a Plover company Monday to install an underground sprinkler system for Goerke Park.

The board agreed to pay $18,700 to Shulfer Enterprises, Inc. for the system. The Stevens Point Common Council also approved the contract Monday night.

FON DU LAC -- Police are working to identify a decomposed body found Friday by two hikers off the Wild Goose Hiking Trail southwest of Fond du Lac.

The Sheriff's Department said Monday that the woman may have been an exotic dancer but would not comment further.

An autopsy revealed that the woman, whose body was found wrapped in cloth in some thick brush, was strangled.

CHICAGO, Ill. -- A Roman Catholic Cardinal was accused Friday of sexually abusing a teenager in the 1970's.

Cardinal Joseph Bernadin denied the allegations made by Stephen Cook, 34, of Ventor, N.J. Cook is asking for $10 million in damages.

Cook said he waited more than 15 years to report the allegations because he is just now beginning to remember the incident.

Bernadin is one of the leaders in the second largest archdiocese in the country.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico -- In the first vote in more than a quarter-century, Puerto Ricans chose Sunday to remain a commonwealth instead of seeking statehood.

The vote offset a strong movement toward becoming a part of the United States. Gov. Pedro Rossello, leader of the campaign, urged supporters to continue to fight for the effort.

The margin of victory for commonwealth supporters was less than three percentage points.

The University Center Policy Board Tuesday discussed its own bylaws and constitution.

Alex Schultz, of SGA, chairing the meeting for Heather Enneper, called for an informal discussion of the UCPB's Constitution and Bylaws. He asked for recommendations of the members to update the current constitution.

Alicia Ferriter of SGA recommended the size of the board be reduced. Ferriter cited "gridlock" within the membership as the reason many issues have taken too long to be acted on.

"The size of the board needs to be reduced or consolidated to make it more efficient," she said.

Several members voiced concerns that down-sizing would dilute the effectiveness of the board and might leave some people who utilize the center unrepresented.

No action was taken on the issue, and other discussion about the Constitution was deferred until the next meeting.

TJ Koenke of Student Services addressed the board about the establishment of the Student Services Policy Board. "The goals of this committee would be to monitor budgets and policies made in the various student service areas," Koenke told the board.

When asked if this was a watchdog group, Koenke told the board that the intention of the new board was, "to make the policies and issues (concerning student services) more consistent."

Koenke asked if anyone from UCPB was interested in serving on the Student Services Policy Board. The new board will consist of members from SGA, UCPB, Student Health Center, Health Enhancement, Text Rental, and Debot Center, they decided.

At the last UCPB meeting held on Nov. 9, the board passed a motion to set new guidelines for sub sales in the UC.

Effective next semester, groups wanting to hold a sub sale will be limited to two dates at a time, and no more than two sales in a week.

The new policy was needed due to the large demand from student organizations for sub sales as a fund raiser, according to Susan Crotteau of Conference and Reservation.

The board also gave Heather Enneper jurisdiction to tally the results of the smoking surveys taken at checkpoint. Enneper appointed Junko Hensley of SGA, Brian Swearingen of Food Service, Alicia Ferriter of SGA, and Brant Bergeron of the Alumni Association to assist in the tally.

The board decided that the tally should be used as information only and not as an indication that any change in the current smoking policy is needed.

Steve Glinski addressed the board about the smoking policy and cited health concerns as the main reason the UC should follow the smoking policy of the other buildings on campus.

Professor, author addresses UWSP

An American Indian law professor from the University of Oklahoma will give a public talk Dec. 1 at UWSP.

Rennard James Strickland, professor of law and director of the Center for the Study of American Indian Law and Policy, will discuss, "Tonto's Revenge" at 7 p.m. in room 125 of the University Center. Earlier in the day, Strickland will meet with pre-law students.

A legal historian of Osage and Cherokee heritage, Strickland recently was named president-elect of the Association of American Law Schools and serves as chair and arbitrator of the Osage Commission. He joined the faculty at the University of Oklahoma in 1990.

Strickland formerly has been a visiting professor at Arizona State, Harvard, University of Kansas, University of Florida and the University of Mexico. Earlier, he was a professor of law at UW-Madison and John W. Shepley Research Professor of Law and History at the University of Tulsa.

In addition to being a published author, he has been an art curator, filmmaker, bibliographer and dean of the law school at Southern Illinois University.

Strickland has edited the revision of Felix Cohen's Handbook of Federal Indian Law and organized "Shared Visions," a touring international exhibition of twentieth century Native American painting and sculpture.

The author of "Fire and the Spirits: Cherokee Law from Clan to Court," Strickland edited "Savage Sinners and Redskinned Redeemers: Images of the Native American," which is awaiting publication by the University of New Mexico Press.

The film/slide show is open to the public without charge.

Strickland will also be a keynote speaker at the third Forum on Sovereignty, Nov. 30 through Dec. 2, at the Stevens Point Holiday Inn.

The forum, sponsored in part by UWSP, is coordinated by Benjamin Ramirez-shwegnaabi, acting assistant vice chancellor for advancement of cultural diversity, and Sharon Cloud of the Native American Center. Presenters include specialists in American Indian law from throughout the country.

Garcia earns dollars for sense

Juan Garcia is a double winner in the latest round of competition in "Dollars for Your Sense" at UWSP.

Two of his ideas were judged best among money-saving or safety-increasing ideas submitted by university staff members during a three-month period.

The others winners were Darlene Wechsler and Dale Landowski.

An academic custodian, Garcia will receive $50 for his suggestion of boxing in an outdoor concrete area to store recyclables on the northwest side of the College of Professional Studies Building.

All of the college's recyclables used to accumulate under a stairwell inside the building.

By the end of each week, the area was covered with boxes and paper, a potential fire hazard.

Garcia also received $25 for calling attention to a potential safety hazard caused by service vehicles with no flashing lights or beepers.

The trucks, which drive on campus sidewalks and pathways, become especially dangerous at night.

Garcia suggested the additions of portable flashing lights and backup beepers for all maintenance vehicles.

A program assistant in the School of Education, Wechsler had observed heavy traffic exiting Lot E behind the Collins Classroom Center and was concerned about preventing injuries to pedestrians or bicyclists who might be going past.

She suggested installing a stop sign for vehicles leaving the lot.

Landowski's money-saving plan was to use electronic mail to exchange information, put it

Student tells of mission, danger in Somalia

Ex-marine talks of change from humanitarian to defense mission.

by Tom Flannery
Contributor

A vital tool of the "humanitarian effort" were "show of force" or "show of support" patrols through the streets of Mogadishu. It was personally rewarding to wave at Somalis and ease their worries.

It was almost believable at times that there wasn't a dark side to these people and their nation.

This city was, as is any city, a sniper's haven. Two marines had been killed by snipers and nobody wanted to be next. We started experiencing different looks and feelings from the Somalis and something was clearly in discourse.

During one of these patrols, a young Somali boy ran up to me and blurted out in broken English, "Me Muslim...you Christian...you must go!" The issue of religion had not crossed my mind until this point and I soon realized the reasoning behind the shifting views of our presence there.

Somali children who once tried to sell us Kenyan laundry detergent and cigarettes were now chanting, "America Go Home" and "Muslim Good...Christian Bad."

In late February 1992, after two months of success, the imminent problems of religion began to unfold. The Muslim world celebrates Ramadan - a significant religious and festive event.

The Somalis would fast during the day and then come out in droves at night to eat, chant and converse. This year would obviously be different with a Christian presence.

General Morgan, a Somali faction leader, used this time to his advantage. He had thwarted internal support and rioting by telling the public that the U.S. supported other factions in the Southern region of the country and initiated chaos by telling them all to demonstrate against the U.S. during Ramadan.

They are an easy people to coerce and their support fluctuated so independently that within hours our aid mission was no longer needed.

Our mission, the first night of Ramadan, was a four-way checkpoint to confiscate weapons coming and going from Mogadishu. My squad was responsible for a main thoroughfare and traffic was extremely heavy.

There was an odd feeling in the air but we dismissed it and the beginning of Ramadan, which the translators had said would be a "peaceful time for fasting and discussions," turned into a ironic fiasco.

As night fell, an increased number of public address systems filtered throughout the warm, Somalia evening.

Somalis used PA systems for religious purposes and would drive through the streets blurted out Muslim prayers. They were not praying this evening, however.

The look in my translator's eyes was not good. A hostile environment was just starting. These PA systems were more alarming than actual weapons. With weapons, you know their intent. Loud fanatical ravings that are incomprehensible are somewhat unnerving.

What were they saying, "OK, surround the marines, butcher them and let's get back to this Ramadan thing"?

One such PA system, mounted on a Toyota truck, approached our position. His ramblings didn't stop, and he sped up to the checkpoint refusing to turn off his headlights.

I jumped out in front of his vehicle and pointed my weapons at his head. He soon stopped and began the denial of any wrongdoing.

At this point I knew that my feelings were changing about the mission and these people.

The crowds were increasing and hundreds of people could be seen on the horizon. Dozens of burning tires silhouetted their presence.

Hundreds more began pouring into the streets with an unusual sense of hostility and aggravation. This politically driven mob began throwing rocks and under these circumstances we were not allowed to fire back.

A marine, looking through his thermal sight, lost his vision from this initial assault. The rocks came down like hail and we retreated into the safety of our support vehicle.

Complete frustration surfaced throughout the squad. We were, in essence, being held at bay because of the lack of riotgear and any type of tear gas to repel their assault.

We went through a sequence of pulling back and re-establishing a defensive position. The Somalis continued to advance and automatic weapons fire came in all direction. The weapons were not aimed at us but victoriously in the air.

This night had gone poorly and it wasn't until later that night, when a grenade went off five meters from me (on the other side of the wall), that I decided that I could never look at the Somalis the same way again.

The following months proved to be problematic but our departure from the country was announced and our mission would not last much longer.

The convoys of grain continued to pass our checkpoints and they certainly served as a good indication that our presence was still serving a useful purpose.

The U.S. presence in Somalia was clearly a success up to a certain point. The vast majority of Somalis were content and nourished, and the international relief agencies were receiving their supplies to continue the internal support needed to get Somalia functioning again.

There is no hatred felt toward Somalia. We just stayed too long.

The internal conflicts, ethnic rivalries and religious differences completely plague not only Africa but the Middle East and, to an extent, every continent. They are politically driven through the fear of having no say or representation.

Somalia is not the only country that suffers from the inability to understand and manage power. It was just America's first test in the post-Cold War era.

in the weekly faculty newsletter or mail only one copy could be posted on a bulletin board for all to read.

"These changes will save time, money, and paper--not to mention the environment, which the government ignores. Too many trees are being chopped down," Landowski, a Central Stores stock clerk, exclaims. He received a commendation for his ideas.

A year-end ceremony is held to recognize all of the campus winners, and the top ideas are forwarded to the state board for statewide competition.

Hungry Somalis wait in line for food distribution, for which U.S. soldiers provided security in order to ensure that it would reach the people.

Alcohol risks your mind, body and life

By John Alden
Student, Univ. of California-Berkeley

There is a toxin in this country so accessible and so common that most people consider it benign. In the bloodstream, it causes harm to a variety of organs and is often fatal. What is it? Alcohol.

Many of us are environmentally conscious, recycle our cans and bottles, and take steps to help reduce pollutants in our oceans, land, streams, and air.

We make an effort not to poison our environment, but we don't even realize that we are poisoning our bodies with alcohol.

Surprising? Some facts are even more disturbing. College students pay more for alcohol ($5.5 billion annually) than for school books every year. On the average campus, students spend more to consume this toxin than the school spends on all the libraries and scholarships combined.

Of our friends currently enrolled in college, as many as 360,000 will eventually die from alcohol, a number equivalent to the total number of currently enrolled college students who will go on to receive advanced degrees—masters and doctorates combined.

On the average, we each drink 34 gallons of alcoholic beverages per year.

The most dangerous form of alcohol consumption is binge drinking, defined as consuming five or more drinks in a row. Binge drinking occurs more at college than in other environments. Beer chugging, drinking games and drinking to the point of nausea are all good examples of binge drinking.

"Drunk people do things they would never do sober....alcohol destroys their judgment, their impaired judgment destroys their lives."

Obviously, forcing your body to metabolize large amounts of alcohol all at once does long-term damage to your liver and other organs. The more immediate risk is that such heavy drinking often leads to dangerous consequences, such as accidental injury, traffic fatalities and rape.

Alcohol-related deaths have become frequent on college campuses nation wide. In Arkansas, a young college student decided to urinate in the street after drinking. He was fatally hit by a car. A sophomore at Clemson with a blood alcohol content of .17, fell twenty-seven feet from a two-inch-wide ledge and was pronounced dead from a ruptured aorta.

Such "accidents" seem merely anecdotal; as many as 53 percent of all fatal falls, however, are related to alcohol consumption. Many other forms of accidental death have similar relationships with alcohol, and binge drinking exacerbates these trends.

Drunk people do things they would never do sober. Just as the alcohol destroys their judgment, their impaired judgment destroys their lives.

Car crashes, which claimed twice as many American lives in the Vietnam era as the Viet Cong did, also claim an inordinate number of college students.

Many students are killed not because they drove while intoxicated, but because they chose to ride with an intoxicated driver.

Life is greater than Dr. Death

By Adam Goodnature
Contributor

Today, America is under a spiritual crisis where the sanctity of life and the encouragement of self-preservation have fallen by the wayside in favor of killing.

How else could you explain the merciless crusade of Dr. Death himself, Jack Kevorkian, just waiting to snatch the jaws of life from his next victim.

How can you explain the ambush of encouragement thrust his way since his first killing of an Oregon housewife three years ago?

They call him a hero. They call him a savior, whose primary objective is to save those people where an illness has apparently taken away any chance of living peacefully.

What Jack Kevorkian is doing is corrupting the medical profession to promote his own agenda, accomplishing larger goals other than helping the individuals.

He has made it no secret that he enjoys the publicity and the attention, not to mention that he is succeeding in breaking the law.

Despite total opposition from the American Medical Association and the Michigan legislature, Kevorkian is continuing his path of destruction, claiming people have "a right to die."

With the abortion and murder rates already sky high in this country, the last thing we need is legal suicide to drive this country's utter disregard for life even deeper.

Pharmaceutical skills are much more refined today than in years past, making it easier for them to deal with whatever amount of pain they may have.

Our ancestors didn't have the benefit of any of those drugs and often times they took their pain in stride rather than taking their own lives.

People want to live. If we encouraged them to be strong rather than give up, we can put an end to this before it really gets out of hand.

MILLER'S POINT OF VIEW

Sick with Hick is "down grad'n!"

Dear Editor,

I ain't no reporter and I sure ain't one to contradict ones' ideas or beliefs, but I was very ticked to read an article in the Nov. 4th Pointer.

"Sick with Hick" seems to be down grad'n certain people who believe in the true American way of life.

See, even though I never had any school'n or report'n, I do know in order to write an article you need to know all the information on your subject.

So Mr. Waldvogel, I really hate to tell you this, but you didn't do your research very well.

When I hear to be a hick is a disease or somethin bad in society, it really ticks me off as a person.

See, I'm from the south where all these things, which were listed as symptoms in "Sick with Hick", are really a way of life.

Other so-called symptoms, which as a southerner, I have noticed that Mr. Waldvogel has failed to mention are:

1. Believe in ones rights and stand up for those rights.
 2. Believe in God and Country
 3. Be nice to others (Do onto others as you'd have them do onto you).
 4. Ask no more and give no more than honesty, courage, loyalty, generosity and fairness.
 5. Believe in the traditional ways of life and to support the American belief that you are free to be who you want to be.
- If the above symptoms are bad in society and inflict pain on society than this must mean being a hick is bad.

But if there are people out there who believe these are good symptoms, there is still a strong feeling that to be a hick is to be a part of America.

If hick is a disease, I've got news for ya, it must be like AIDS. Highly contagious, in the blood of the body it flows, and incurable.

And if anyone knows it or not, there are a lot more of us hicks than there are of any other society in America.

To be a hick you don't have to be country, redneck, or southern. You just got to be proud of who you are and stand up for your rights.

This whole story by Waldvogel about "Sick with Hick" reminds me of a short story I read once:

After eating an entire bull, a mountain lion felt so good he started roaring. He kept up until a hunter came along and shot him. The moral: When you're full of bull, keep your mouth shut.

Soda refills sky-rocket

Dear Editor:

Why should students purchase soda refills with their re-usable mugs in the University Center anymore?

All the locations which sell fountain soft drinks have increased their prices by a quarter per refill.

I purchased one of the re-usable mugs offered by one of the food service locations due to the deal involved.

The deal included the purchase of the mug, which was a little more than a dollar, followed by an unlimited number of refills for $.50 plus tax.

This offer seemed to be sensible, seeing it would save the waste of styrofoam or waxed cardboard cups ending up in landfills.

Even though it requires you to constantly carry the mug around, it appears to be a popular idea by the number of mugs tied to student's backpacks.

Buying $.50 refills in a 16 ounce mug from a soda fountain makes more sense economically and environmentally than a $.60 soda in an aluminum can.

But now due to the recent hike in the cost of refills from $.50 to $.75, it no longer seems worth while for students to continue getting refills.

This means students will have to adjust to a 25% increase overnight.

Soda from a fountain costs far less than soda in a can or bottle mostly because the container has to be paid for also.

We are supplying the container so it makes me wonder why the sudden boost in cost?

I understand prices for any product will always continue to rise. I am mainly concerned with the percent of the hike.

Why not increase the price by ten cents? Are the food services losing money, or are they just looking to make more of a profit?

Maybe there is something I am not seeing in this matter. Nevertheless, I would ask that more information be provided concerning this situation.

I realize this isn't an issue which is going to stir up the campus to hold protests, but knowledge of it is important to the understanding of the change.

NAFTA article neglects points

Dear Editor:

I want to respond to the "NAFTA neglects prominent points" column in last week's Pointer.

The column was itself neglecting in substance. The editor's column followed a simplistic anti-NAFTA argument.

It claims that big business is salivating at the opportunity to head south taking advantage of cheap labor and committing environmental genocide.

This argument is rooted in fear and generalities to hopefully convince people to say "no" without resorting to substance.

The fact is that American companies can go to Mexico right now. If a business wishes to sell products in Mexico, it would benefit by moving there.

Why pay a 13% tax at the border when you can make and sell in Mexico without that tax? NAFTA would eliminate such taxes and the need to move the factory.

Anti-NAFTA forces insult American worker productivity when they claim that millions of 58 cent-an-hour Mexican workers will take US jobs.

Do they really think that Mexico, with its present education system can produce workers that compare with American workers?

Mexicans in general are also insulted by the likes of Citizen Perot and others when they are constantly stereotyped as so impoverished that they cannot buy anything.

Somebody must be buying because we've got a $7 billion trade surplus with Mexico.

The environmental nightmares invoked by anti-NAFTA zealots like Perot are all happening without NAFTA.

How could the US possibly help Mexicans to better protect

Hunters: Track down safety for season opener

An accidental shooting every two hours. A fatal hunting accident every five hours.

That was the deer season accident toll of our wild, woolly--and dangerous--great-grandparents in 1908.

Accident data from early Wisconsin deer hunts are sketchy, but according to a 1908 issue of the Iron River Pioneer, 44 hunters were killed and 57 more were injured during the season.

In 1908, according to Department of Natural Resources records, deer were found in only 35 of the state's 72 counties.

About 100,000 hunters bought licenses for a 20-day season, and harvested about 11,000 deer.

Since that time, the accident rate has fallen dramatically: During the 1992 deer season, only 33 of 650,701 hunters were involved in accidents, three of which were fatal.

There were five accidents per 100,000 in 1992, compared to 101 per 100,000 deer hunters in 1908.

According to John Lacenski, a law enforcement safety specialist for the DNR in Green Bay, there are three major hunters know and understand basic safety principles."

"Finally," Lacenski said, "there is a greater overall regard for safety among hunters. Even those who have not been through the hunter education program receive many safety flicted or involve nearby members of the same hunting party.

3. Be sure of your target--and what is beyond it--before you shoot. If you are not sure, do not shoot.

According to DNR Hunter Education Coordinator Larry

Prior to the hunt, take time for other safety precautions. "Get out and become familiar with, or reacquaint yourself with, the firearm you will use," he says.

"Sight in your firearm so you know you can make a good, clean shot. Then establish a mind-set to stay within your shooting skills."

"Select your hunting partners as if your life depended on them, because it could."

reasons that deer hunting is safer today.

"First is the requirement that deer hunters wear blaze orange clothing during the gun season," Lacenski said. "Blaze orange makes hunters much easier to see."

"Second, the DNR's hunter education program has trained more than 400,000 hunters in the last 20 years, and over that time the total accident rate has been cut in half. Today, most messages from the news media, outdoor magazines and other hunters."

Lacenski emphasized three basic safety rules that all hunters should follow:

1. Handle every firearm as if it were loaded. Never assume a gun is unloaded--open the action and check the breech and magazine to make sure.

2. Keep the gun pointed in a safe direction at all times. Most hunting accidents are self-in-

Johnson, planning can help a hunting group become familiar with new territory and increase chances for success.

Even if people are hunting in the same small woodlot they have hunted for years, Johnson says, it is important to do some advance planning.

It may mean simply bringing a change of clothes to prepare for changing weather. Without some type of organization, he warns, it is easy to forget important details.

Hunters who intend to use a tree stand should be familiar with how the stand is set up. Accidents involving tree stands have increased in recent years, he notes, due to increased usage.

Finally, Johnson says, it is important to only hunt with partners that are safe, responsible and abide by the law.

"Select your hunting partners as if your life depended on them, because it could," he says.

Wardens hold surprise for weekend violators

Look for it to leap-- stationary deer are not always good

by Jennifer Paust

Outdoor Editor

When driving down a country road, it is fairly common to see whitetail deer grazing in ditches and standing in roadside forests.

Our eyes search to predict possible movements from these beautiful creatures.

Two reactions are common upon finding a deer near the road: people either brake and linger on the scene, or they drive by and merely acknowledge the animal, breathing a sigh of relief that the deer wasn't on the road itself.

There is one other possible reaction. It occurs most often during the second half of the gun-deer season: the vehicle slows, then stops.

A person emerges, weapon in hand. Ammo is quickly housed in the chamber.

After a few furtive steps towards the unsuspecting whitetail, the gunstock meets a supporting shoulder. A second later, the loud report fills the air...

This scene is illegal, but often the "hunter" goes unpunished. A tale is created for hunting buddies that accounts for the successful hunt.

In an attempt to eliminate this behavior, conservation wardens have drafted help.

Eight years ago, the DNR created life-sized stuffed deer. The decoy is covered with real deer hide. Removable antlers allow it to be a buck or doe.

Throughout the state, wardens utilize over 100 stuffed deer. The decoys come in various different poses, sizes and hide shades.

Some even have moveable heads and tails, adding to the realism.

Decoys are set up in complaint areas having a history of poaching or shooting from the road. DNR supervisors check the area prior to set-up.

Often, landowners call the DNR to file complaints about roadhunters. It is often these sites that are utilized.

Once in position, wardens rarely have to wait longer than twenty minutes before a citation is issued.

In many cases, wardens just get settled in their hideouts, the last violin just disappearing around the bend, when they must jump up to confront another unethical hunter.

Citations range from discharging a weapon within fifty feet of

Beyond environmental destruction

by Jennifer Paust

People talk about environmental degradation. I listen, and even participate. Until recently, I never heard what they were saying.

"Environmental degradation" is such an impersonal term. Why can't we simply say "utter destruction of the natural world"?

Sometimes no amount of words can vividly express what our senses give them to label.

When I was small and wanted to skip out on chores, get away from other kids, or just have a quiet place to think, I'd run to a nearby swamp.

I called it The Emerald Forest. It wasn't too far from my house. Whenever I was there, I was whisked away to another world.

I had to push and fight my way into the swamp. Determined brush would claw my clothing and snatch my hair. Eventually, I'd burst through the thicket into a wondrous palace.

Every known shade of green was represented, including some that Crayola has yet to name.

Tamarack, spruce, cedar and hemlock trees created a dense ceiling, blocking my view of the sky. Sphagnum moss covered the castle floor.

It was soft and enveloped my shoes as I walked. Differently shaped lichens dressed the tree trunks. Many kinds of shrubs and ferns further defined The Emerald Forest.

I had a special log that I always sat on. Even it was covered with a living green cloth. I felt like a queen in my secret place.

Sometimes I would laugh. Sometimes I'd cry. I was always alone, but never lonely. I was able to leave, reassured, to face my hectic childhood world.

As I got older, time began to fill itself with other more pressing, less important things. I was seldom able to visit my Emerald Forest. Time there became extremely precious.

I was still always calmed and I felt stronger, more self-assured, when I emerged.

One day I was very distressed, frustrated and restless. I began to walk aimlessly around our woods. Without realizing it, I found myself sitting on a log.

I was plucked from my troubled thoughts with shock. Something was wrong. I knew that this place had been important to me, but I could not recognize it.

My special log had somehow been moved. It was now located on the edge of a clear-cut strip created by the power company. Thick cables and sterile poles replaced my clutching brush entry and majestic trees.

The little moss that remained was brittle and sickly yellow. Sunlight had invaded and damaged my precious hideaway.

From my position on my throne, I could now see only open space and endless wires.

I got up and left that place. I didn't look back. I couldn't bear to see how human insensitivity and selfishness had destroyed something so special.

The Emerald Forest was in ruins. Humans had made a statement. Their insensitive, permanent judgment had sentenced my sacred spot to the death penalty.

I felt shattering sadness. I suffered a lasting despair that day.

Whenever someone says "environmental degradation," I still feel an indescribable ache, and an emptiness permeates my mind and heart.

Season closure protects timber wolves

In an ongoing effort to protect Wisconsin's fragile population of timber wolves, the coyote season will be closed in the northern third of Wisconsin during the gun and muzzleloader seasons, reminds DNR Law Enforcement Supervisor Jim Blankenheim.

The state closes the coyote season, which is otherwise open year round, in areas where coyote and wolf habitat overlap.

This effort is made to help prevent hunters from accidentally shooting endangered timber wolves.

Anyone who kills the endangered species could face both state and federal charges, fines of $5000 or more, loss of hunting privileges and possibly even a prison sentence.

The illegal shooting of a timber wolf can be a significant setback to state and federal efforts to assist in the recovery of this species in this state, explains Adrian Wydeven, a DNR non-game biologist.

"Wisconsin has a population of about 40 wolves living in about a dozen packs," Wydeven says.

"That is down slightly from last year, due primarily to an outbreak of mange in coyotes, foxes and wolves, but we've also lost some wolves to illegal shooting."

Individual wolves occasionally disperse from a pack for various reasons. This includes searching for a mate.

An adult male wolf was killed in Dunn County during last year's gun deer season, and an adult female was shot and killed in May of 1991 near Solon Springs.

Timber wolf observations were reported recently in Wood and Jackson counties. Track observations were also made by a DNR employee at the Sandhill Wildlife Area in Wood County.

In particular, hunters in Wood and Jackson counties should be on the lookout for wolves. The department has been receiving reports of wolf sightings in those counties, says Wydeven.

"As always, we're interested in hearing from any hunter who spots wolves while out in the field deer hunting," he adds.

Hunters should never shoot at any animal that they cannot positively identify. This is especially true in the case of wolves and coyotes.

Alcohol

Most of us would not intentionally drive drunk, nor would we ride in the care of a drunk driver, but the facts show that many people, after binge drinking, lose their resolve and become vulnerable to death on the roads.

Rape, especially date or acquaintance rape, is receiving intense scrutiny on college campuses these days. Although rape and drinking are seldom discussed as related issues, over half of all rapes involve alcohol.

That means that in over 52,000 of the 104,000 rapes reported by the National Crime Survey, one or more of the people involved had been drinking.

Considering that most rapes go unreported, the actual numbers are much higher. Every campus has at least one recent story of rape, usually at a party and often involving drunk assailants and/or victims.

Did you know that alcohol has been repeatedly linked in medical studies with violence and aggression in levels far beyond those caused by any other drug, even more than crack, PCP, or cocaine?

By binging ourselves out of our minds on the weekends, we not only impair our ability to resist unwanted advances and to understand the desires of others, ourselves, and our relationships.

Drinking makes us more vulnerable to many problems, but in a less dramatic way it can diminish our sexual abilities, embarrass us in front of our friends, and give us beer bellies. Chronic alcoholism can cause breast enlargement in men and menstrual disturbances and infertility in women.

When you drink you take a chance with your body and mind. Is it worth the risk?

their environment by refusing to work with them?

The main point that last week's column missed (as has most everyone) is that NAFTA is not about jobs. It is about consumers.

The number of expected jobs to be lost or gained (200,000) is lower than the monthly shift in our unemployment rate.

We stand (or stood, pending yesterday's vote) to have a bigger advantage in Mexico as Japan and Europe move in. That's good for us.

Although wolves are larger bodied than coyotes, when a single animal is seen, there is no way of positively identifying it by size at several hundred feet, Blandkenheim pointed out.

It is even less reliable to attempt to distinguish a coyote from a wolf by color. Some wolves have the exact colors common to coyotes.

Coyote season closure will run from November 20 through December 5. Hunters are encouraged to check the 1993 Wisconsin Hunting Regulations for details on exact boundaries of closure.

They are also reminded that wolves have been located well below the supposed southern range mark.

the center line, uncased and/or loaded weapons in a motor vehicle, and also discharging a weapon from a vehicle.

Fines range from $100 to $200 plus possible confiscation of the weapon and vehicle.

If violations occur at night, fines may be as high as $500 (confiscations are still possible). Issues of entrapment have been considered.

Wisconsin State Law has allowed that decoy deer are legal.

The DNR simply arranges the situation so the hunter finds the hunted where officials are able to observe.

The choice to shoot is still made entirely by the hunter.

Decoy deer are effective. Numbers of violators in the areas used are greatly reduced.

Conservation wardens receive the highest number of complaints concerning roadhunting. It is difficult to estimate the numbers that break these laws.

Some sites yield more violators than others. Several variables are involved.

Traffic flow, area deer populations, and violators owning CB radios can influence the number of citations issued at each location.

This activity is aimed at catching criminals and poachers, not law-abiding citizens.

The Department of Natural Resources has proven that this technique works.

It not only helps to catch poachers, it deters others from possibly becoming participants in roadhunting.

Break the Walls

There is a natural lack of comfort not knowing about people who look different from us.

This lack of comfort is one of the reasons why people of different races are still very much divided in our world today.

I have seen in my life that an open mind and the willingness to be curious can allow us to know people who are racially different from ourselves and enrich our lives in the process.

When I first began my college life at St. John's University back in Minnesota, I met someone from the Island of Malta.

I had never met someone from Malta before. All I knew about Malta was that it was somewhere in the Mediterranean.

However, I was very curious about Malta. The person I met was Etienne, and he was also curious about my country, the Bahamas.

We realized that a lot of the things he customarily did with his family were not so different from some of my customs. We became very good friends.

A year later we were roommates. It was truly an interesting year.

Coming from Malta which is mostly Catholic, Etienne was a very devout Catholic.

from Japan, India, Panama, Malta, Malaysia, Bolivia, Ethiopia, America and the Bahamas.

It took Mike a while to adjust to the new group of guys.

He had been used to hanging out with many of the guys from his high school class who had also come to St. John's. He soon got the hang of it.

I always told him that people aren't that different no matter where they're from, so he began to enjoy hanging out with the international guys.

Mike, who is now lives in Rochester, Minn., called me a few weeks ago to say that one of our friends from Hong Kong flew into town on business and visited him.

He sounded really excited.

In one of the conversations we had just before I graduated from St. John's, he told me that somehow by challenging him to be a little more open to others who were from different ethnic backgrounds, I had helped to enrich his life.

Indeed, I feel I have enriched my life. Here at Point I have had a Japanese, Korean and now an American roommate.

It is amazing how much you learn from observing those who are different from you. In the end, you realize that the difference really isn't that great.

I am spontaneous and a little loud at times and he is usually quiet.

However, he was curious about the Bahamas and in time the very obvious differences between us didn't seem so significant.

I used to go home with him and hang out with him and his relatives in Minneapolis.

I got to see a lot of the differences between us through being at his home.

Through the different experiences that I have encountered in my life, I have become aware of how much our ignorance of each other keeps us apart.

We are clearly more comfortable with people who look the same and come from the same area and speak the same language.

However, it seems to me some of the greatest learning goes on in our lives when we can learn about a different culture.

From a distance things appear strange, but up close they can be so beautiful.

Let us be curious about one another and break down the walls which often seem impenetrable.

"From a distance things appear strange, but up close they can be so beautiful."

His sister is a nun in Mother Teresa's order and was at the time stationed in Africa.

His uncle, who he was very close to, was a Monsignor who ran a home for the mentally handicapped.

One of the things I have also noticed is that people are usually very eager to share what is unique about them with us.

Etienne always had wine in the refrigerator which he wanted to share because the Maltese are great wine drinkers.

Munawar Moin from Bangladesh, another friend of mine, loved to cook and he would invite Etienne and I to sample his spicy cooking all the time.

The more we showed our appreciation of Munawar's cooking the more he invited us. In time, we were all cooking for each other.

I have also had American roommates. My first American roommate who I lived with at St. John's is still a very close friend today.

It was funny because we were so different.

Mike Nemanich was Slovenian American and I think hanging out with me made him a bit curious about the world.

After all, the people who used to hang out in our room were Guns in the trash?

Debate on gun control fires on

"Damn, people can't make up their minds!"

"What's the matter Bob?" I asked the night custodian who was busily emptying the trash, interrupting my late night studying at the library.

"Ah Sean, all you ever hear about these days is guns. Guns, guns, guns. The problem ain't the guns, it's that them folks pierced lips are blowing each other away."

"But don't you think having a waiting period for buying a gun is a good idea then?"

"Look here kid, them people who are filling each other full of lead ain't buying their guns at stores. They're getting them illegally."

"But what do we need handguns for? Do you realize that between 1979 and 1987 criminals assaulted 693,000 people and nearly half of the murder victims were killed with handguns?"

ferent way. Do you consider yourself a responsible person?"

"Course I do."

"And you're also a responsible hunter?"

"Sure. Better than a lot of them city slickers that never saw a cow, much less a deer."

"So what's the harm of waiting seven days for a background check when you buy a gun? What are you afraid of?"

"Not much, except I don't want nobody poking around in my past records--them FBI stuffed-shirts do enough of that already."

with the guns are shooting the wrong people."

"What do you mean Bob? I always thought gun control was a good idea."

"Look, guns don't kill people. I do."

"What?!"

"Just kidding. You know what the biggest problem in this country is kid? Do you?"

"Ah, no."

"Stuffed shirts, that's what. Some congressman's gonna tell me that I can't hunt or protect myself because a few fascist little punks on the street with "All guns shoot. I don't think the problem is handguns at all, it's them people who make up statistics--they're always shoving a bar graph in your face."

"Well Bob, I guess I agree with you about that much, but I've read that an average of 9,200 people are being killed and another 15,000 are being wounded annually. I've also read a survey that showed 90% of gun owners support a seven day waiting period."

"I'm not impressed with surveys Sean."

"Okay, let's look at it a dif-

"Okay Bob, so you hate politicians, you hate city slickers, and you hate the FBI..."

"And another thing kid--if they raise the price of ammunition, people'll just start shooting each other with bows and arrows--then they'll outlaw that."

"But Bob, any weapon is a threat, don't you think?"

"Yeah, pretty soon everything in the constitution will be outlawed. It'll be against the law to blow your nose near a person with heart tremors."

"Gee Bob, that never would have occurred to me."

Fight the risk, be informed

World-wide AIDS awareness will be marked with a week of educational and fund-raising activities, Nov. 29 through Dec. 3, at UWSP.

Sponsored by SALAD, 10% Society, Microbiology club, and other organizations under the leadership of Knutzen Hall, the events will be informative and raise money for pediatric AIDS research.

Co-coordinators Dean Billo, a senior biology major from Cudahy, and Crystal Voigt, a junior philosophy major from Tomahawk, invite people from campus and community to participate in the activities.

Billo says the purpose of the programs is to educate everyone, both on and off campus, who may have become complacent because "we live in a small town."

"However, we are all at risk," Billo says. "In Portage County, there are more than 100 people who have tested positive for HIV, and 16 people with AIDS, and the disease is spreading among adolescent and young adult heterosexuals."

"We all need to be more concerned and better informed," he warns.

Beginning the week's activities on Monday, Nov. 29, a submarine sandwich sale will be held in the University Center (UC) from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

That evening, Richard Crowther of the biology faculty will discuss the biological implications and status of AIDS research at 6 p.m. in Room D102 of the Science Building.

On Tuesday, Nov. 30, a program about alcohol and sexual choices will be presented by the Hotshots, campus peer educators, at 7 p.m. in the basement of Knutzen Hall.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, the groups will sponsor a booth in the UC Concourse, dispensing AIDS ribbons and "Hearts for Hope," which allow people to put a heart on display, commemorating loved ones who are

Do you support the Brady Bill which requires a seven day waiting period before a person can buy a gun?

(Compiled by Lisa Herman and Chris Kelley)

"Yes, I agree with it. I can see how it can deter some sort of spur of the moment killings. By waiting 7 days, hopefully those who are buying guns to kill people or possibly hurt someone may have cooled down and thought it through. For those needing guns for recreation reasons, waiting a week is no big deal."

Katie Aron
Communication

"Yes, I think the Brady Bill is a really good idea. It would make people think twice about purchasing guns. It would also give time to check backgrounds of people. I was held up with a gun once while babysitting. It was the scariest thing that ever happened to me."

Laural Wilson
Psychology

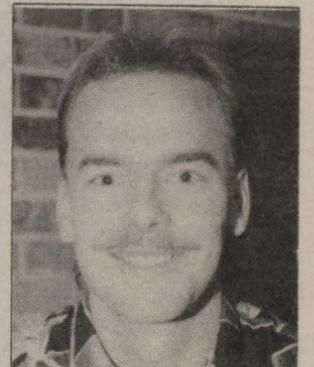

"Hell NO! The problem of gun control lies not with registered sales. The problem is the ease in which unregistered weapons can be purchased. Sure, you have to start somewhere, but a waiting period is not the answer...perhaps stricter fines/penalties for owning or carrying an unregistered weapon."

Dan Lundstrom
Communication

"Yes--or wait a minute--no, because deer hunting opens this weekend. That means I wouldn't have a license OR a gun!"

Kevin Thays
Communication

"Well of course, I would like to know that the system is checking these people's records. I don't feel like having some psycho buying a gun then going out and shooting my roommate! (But a 4.0 GPA sure wouldn't hurt)."

Volunteers of Habitat for Humanity build a house on Walker Street for a family in need.

by Amy Kluetz

Contributor

With all of the current destruction of homes in California, it is nice to hear a little construction news.

Fifteen students from UWSP's Communication department, ACT and UAB--as well as five community volunteers--worked together on Saturday, November 6, to build Habitat for Humanity's fourth house in Stevens Point.

Coordinator of the "You Can Make a Difference" project, Rev. Ed Hunt commented, "This house has gone up faster than any of the others because of all the help from students."

The single-story three bedroom house on Walker Street, near Pacelli, is being constructed solely by volunteer efforts and donated materials.

The goal of the project is to get a lower-income family moved into the house by Thanksgiving.

Sue Beckett, a volunteer as well as a student at UWSP commented, "No knowledge of any certain area is needed. There are many different jobs to work on. If you're not familiar with something, you'll learn it."

Habitat for humanity is a volunteer organization which helps those who may not be able to help themselves.

It's main center is in Georgia, but it has an international outreach program.

If you would like to get involved with this project, or one of the many others which help the community, contact Dan in the ACT office of UWSP.

Laura Ketchum, assistant director of Campus Activities at UWSP, received an award of $250 to begin the formation of the Wisconsin Campus Volunteer Network (WCVN).

WCVN will serve as a statewide communication link between campus volunteer programs, such as the Association for Community Tasks (ACT), which Ketchum advises at UWSP.

ACT, celebrating its 16th anniversary this year, often stands out in people's minds for its annual Hunger Cleanup Day.

The program satisfies "ACT's goal of involving the entire university in a project that creates goodwill in the community and makes students aware of important issues," said Ketchum.

"With volunteer programs like ACT, students learn life skills with values and citizenship. Helping neighbors and the disadvantaged and developing work skills is rewarding to the students involved," Ketchum stated.

Many volunteer programs are currently fragmented and will become more structured through affiliation with WCVN.

Thus, WCVN will provide stronger recognition of volunteer program existence and a centralized source for operation.

"There's a broad difference in campus volunteer programs in the state of Wisconsin. We'd like to connect these programs to share information and resources. One goal is to have a place to hold WCVN conferences for these programs," said Ketchum.

The $250 grant, awarded at the 1993 Fall Wisconsin College Personnel Association Conference in Madison, will be used to launch the program.

According to Ketchum, the startup costs incurred will be related to administering and mailing surveys to other campuses around the state.

The results will identify and provide information about many unknown volunteer programs--the potential members of WCVN.

"My plan is to have surveys put together and results back by May," said Ketchum.

Booklets reflecting information on different volunteer programs will be available for fall.

ill or who have died from the virus. All of the accompanying donations will be used to support research.

Wednesday, Dec. 1 is worldwide AIDS Awareness Day, "A Day of Hope: Fighting the Good Fight." In Stevens Point, it will be marked with a candlelight vigil, beginning at the UC at 7:30 p.m. and winding through the streets around campus. It will conclude at the UC with a speaker to be announced.

On Thursday, Dec. 2, at 7 p.m. in the UC Wisconsin Room, Felisha Harper and Kent Perrodin, Red Cross-certified HIV educators, will present a program entitled "Don't Put Your Life in Jeopardy: Honest Talk About HIV and AIDS."

They will discuss general issues such as how the disease is spread, how to protect yourself and others, myths, stigmas, and other global concerns about the illness.

On Friday, Dec. 3, a film about AIDS will be shown at 6 p.m. in Room 112 of the College of Natural Resources Building.

Also, "The Baltimore Waltz," a comedy/drama about AIDS, will be staged at 8 p.m. in the Studio Theatre, 005 LRC. The student production will repeat at the same time on Saturday evening.

We may not be able to do much for the loved ones already lost to AIDS, but together we can help stop AIDS from taking the lives of others and possibly ourselves.

And so it goes...

Who's got the priorities right?

A few weeks ago, the local paper sent me to cover one of the last truly enjoyable remnants of down-home Americana--a high school homecoming football game.

It wasn't NBC, and it wasn't Gatorade or instant replays, either. It was, well...rural.

No, there were not (to my surprise) any livestock grazing freely on the sidelines or any Depression-era farm implements aging in the end zones.

The weather was charming, though, complete with a steady rain that quickly turned the field to goop under the grind of long cleats and calloused knees.

And then there was the game--a 12-6 snoozer with more turnovers than a discount bakery on two-for-one day.

It was cold. It was dark. And I loved every minute of it.

Not because it's fun writing under a plastic bag to keep the paper dry, or because I like seeing young men turn each other into mud-caked papier-mache.

It was the players themselves. These kids, most of them walking definitions of "bumpkin," were not playing in hopes of winning their salary arbitration case or for cash piles the approximate size of a Buick.

And none of them had a silk-suited agent sitting in a luxury box talking on a portable phone to a Porsche dealer, sipping warm imported beer.

No, just parents huddled under umbrellas fighting the urge to hop in the car and speed to the nearest state with a desert climate.

It was inspiring.

I wonder what it would do for some of the NFL's super-egos to see those guys slopping in the mud just for winning's sake?

Not for the money or the television coverage or even the adoration of those same high schoolers.

In fact, it was probably that same rabble out there in the goop that had the right perspective on life.

They played hard, they bled and they threw themselves into the action like any player--prep or pro--should.

The preps were different though--they knew they were out to win a game, not a shoe contract.

No end zone dances and no TV cameras to wiggle body parts in front of. Just the game.

And afterward, the kids lined up and shook hands like men, even though the home team had their homecoming game spoiled by a loss.

Like I said--inspiring.

Cross country teams cruise to nationals

Zak takes 4th, Johnson 10th

by Brett Christopherson
of the Pointer

The 1993 UWSP cross country season just got a little longer for both the men and women as each squad qualified for Saturday's NCAA Division III Championships in Grinnell, Iowa.

The men and women, who were competing in the NCAA Division III Regionals last Saturday in Oshkosh, had outstanding performances as both teams finished in the top five of their respective divisions with the men placing fifth and the women fourth overall.

"I am very happy we got the job done," said men's head coach Rick Witt. "It was not what I and didn't have his best race of the season, but still gave us the man up front that we needed," said Witt. "I know he will run better this coming week."

Jason Zuelke was next in for UWSP, placing 14th overall with a time of 26:27 while David Niefeldt followed, finishing 21st overall with a time of 26:37.

"The man who really ran well for us was Zuelke," Witt said. "He is now running like the senior leader that he is and the way I know he is capable of running."

John Carpenter, Mark Unertl and Chad Witt also had strong performances as each placed 39th, 48th and 50th with respective times of 27:05, 27:28 and with a time of 19:00. Zak's running pleased coach Hill.

"Wendi ran with the leaders and challenged the second and third place finishers right down to the wire," he said. "I was real pleased with her aggressiveness during the last mile."

The next bunch in for Point were Tina Jarr, Jessie Bushman and Michelle Hady who placed 28th, 33rd and 34th respectively with times of 19:47, 19:51 and 19:52.

Taeryn Szepe, Sariina Maslowski and Mia Sondreal also had solid performances for the Pointers, finishing 41st, 45th and 61st respectively.

"Jessie Bushman did an excellent job for us the hard way," Hill said. "Her plan was to go

"We made it to the big race and the team is very excited about that. All in all, it was a great day for Pointer cross country."

would call one of our best races, but it was good enough to get to the national meet."

Women's head coach Len Hill echoed those sentiments.

"I am very pleased with the way we ran," he said. "We accomplished what we needed to do, which was make it to the NCAA (Division) III National Championships as a team."

Leading the championship drive on the men's side was WSUC champ Jeremie Johnson, who finished the meet 10th overall with a stellar time of 26:16.

"Jeremie didn't feel real well

27:32.

"Witt and Unertl are both getting better each race and we need them to continue to close the gap if we are going to be one of the top ten teams at the NCAA's," Witt said.

With the upcoming national meet, Witt remains enthusiastic and confident about his team's chances.

"We are going to the meet next week with the goal of being in the top ten," he said. "We'll just have to see what happens."

On the women's side, UWSP was led by star runner Wendi Zak, who came in fourth overall out with the front of the pack and hold on as long as she could. She did exactly that."

"Michelle Hady and Taeryn Szepe also ran the best races of their college careers," Hill pointed out. "They got the job done and handled the pressure like veterans."

Despite struggling at times during the season, Hill was proud of the way his team responded.

"We made it to the big race and the team is very excited about that," he said. "All in all, it was a great day for Pointer cross country."

Hockey chops Foresters, escapes St. Mary's

Cirone penalty shot beats Cardinals 4-3 Tuesday

by Lincoln Brunner
Sports Editor

Whatever the dilemma, the Pointer hockey team came up with the solution this week at Willett Arena as they stretched their winning streak to four games.

The Pointers bettered their record to 3-1-0 in National Collegiate Hockey Association play and 4-1-0 overall with 6-4 and 2-0 victories Friday and Saturday against Lake Forest (Ill.) College and a comeback 4-3 win against St. Mary's College on Tuesday.

UWSP 4 St. Mary's 3

A quick Cardinal offense kept the Pointers on their heels early on Tuesday and converted two sluggish Pointer passes into gold, hopping to a 2-0 lead midway through the first period.

"You can't make those mistakes against any team," said head coach Frank Baldarotta. "We weren't making good decisions."

"The other teams are shooting for us," said senior captain Frank Cirone. "They neutralized us in the beginning."

The defending national champs came back late in the period, scoring two goals in 13 seconds.

Chad Zowin put the Pointers on the board on the power play with a scoop at the right goal post.

Rich Teece tied the game almost immediately with a breakaway liner, blocking his man out on the fly until the shot hit the net.

The real story of the game had to wait until the bitter end, though.

After matching second period goals from St. Mary's Paul Chiapelli and Point's Paul Voth, the teams stalemated until late in the third period, when the Cardinals made their last mistake.

With the score locked 3-3, St.

Mary's Mike Lewis knocked the goal off its moorings at the 18:31 mark, giving the Pointers a penalty shot on one of hockey's more obscure rules.

Cirone skated from the half line and sneaked the puck under goalie Marc Rogers' right foot to seal the win.

"It was kind of surprising. You don't get that call very often, to be honest," said Cirone.

"It's pretty exciting to get that chance with the game on the line. I'm just happy it went in."

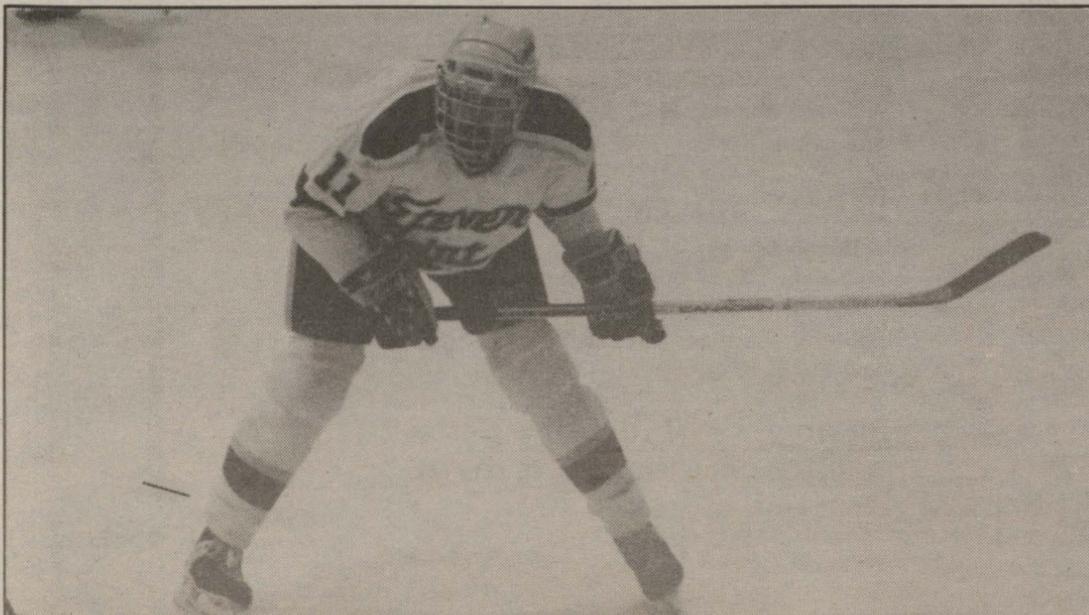

UWSP 2 Lake Forest 0

The Pointers cruised to the first shutout of the season on Saturday and their first regular season blanking since last Nov. 28.

Lake Forest had all the luck of a safety orange buck in late November.

The Pointers dominated the Foresters, outshooting them 35-10--holding them scoreless despite seven Lake Forest power plays.

After going scoreless in the first period, the Dogs got all the see Sweep page 18

Women's b-ball looks small, but thinks tall

Though the UWSP women's basketball team may feel like so many Lilliputians in a land of Gullivers once this season gets underway, head coach Shirley Egner is gritting her teeth with confidence.

"This is the year for us to do something," said Egner. "We have four seniors and one junior starting. We should do better than last year."

Although Egner's 1992-93 squad finished a more-than-respectable 16-8 overall, their weakness came against conference foes like Stout, Whitewater, Oshkosh and Eau Claire.

The UWSP women finished 9-7 in conference action, compared with champion Eau Claire's mark of 14-2 and second place Stout's 13-3 record.

The team looks to better their record, provided they can take advantage of their quickness to make up for their lack of height.

The team sports only two players--centers Stacey Yonke and Sheila Kuffel--over 6'0" and only three more 5'10" or above.

"Our size will be a problem against Eau Claire and Oshkosh," said Egner. "Our experience and quickness will carry us through, hopefully."

Egner's strategy against her team's bigger foes depends on aggressive execution, a good bench rotation and a healthy lack of mistakes.

"We'll have to keep our turnovers down," said Egner. "This was a good recruiting year."

"We have a lot of depth. We'll be able to play eight or nine deep without losing much. Last year, that was a weakness for us.

Despite losing big scorer Kristin Stephen, the Pointers are hoping to use seniors like All-American '92-'93 scoring leader Lisa Grudzinski to pull through in the clutch.

"Grud' will be our go-to player down the stretch," said Egner.

Though her team faces big competition from nationally-ranked St. Thomas and Luther College early, Egner is looking for wins.

"I expect big things from them, and they know it," said Egner. "We've got to put up or shut up. We can't have any excuses.

"We have a tough schedule, besides our conference. But we're definitely ready for the challenge."

The squad opens up their regular season against the University of St. Thomas on Friday and Beloit College on Saturday. Both games are in Berg Gymnasium.

again, even though they dove against themselves," said Blair.

Divers Brian Engholdt and Laura Dauffenbach got one of the two qualifying scores that are required in order to compete in the national meet.

Engholdt won both the one-meter (260.3) and the three-meter boards with his national qualifying score in three-meter diving (296.85).

Dauffenbach swept the women's one-meter (249.8) and the three-meter (252.8) boards and had national qualifying scores for both of these events.

Mike Runge and Amy Hahn also received recognition for their performance at Saturday's meet.

Blair nominated them to be considered for the "swimmers of the week", which are selected by the conference board.

Runge won the 500 and 1000 Freestyle and Hahn finished first in the 50 and 500 Freestyle events.

The UWSP swimming and diving teams will compete in the Conference Relays meet at Whitewater on Saturday.

Football ends best season in 3 decades with 21-7 win Henderson, Hauri leave marks

by Bob Weigel

The best season in 32 years was not good enough for the Pointer football team to share a conference championship in their 21-7 win over Platteville Saturday.

Their 8-2-0 mark and 6-1 in the WSUC left the Pointers in sole possession of second place, and is the school's best since an 8-1-0 record posted by the 1961 squad.

Two events put destiny out of the Pointers' control.

UW-LaCrosse (7-0, 10-0) clinched its third straight conference championship by turning back Eau Claire, 42-32.

Had the Blugolds been able to upset, the Pointers would have attained a share of the title.

Coe (Iowa) College routed Carroll, 47-20, to seal its third straight Midwest Conference Championship under former Stevens Point skipper DJ LeRoy.

Had Coe (10-0) lost, the Pointers would have received strong consideration to become a part of the NCAA Division 3 play-offs.

The Pointers dominated the game to a greater extent than the 21-7 victory may suggest.

Despite a lopsided advantage of 523-263 in total yardage, the Pointers struggled to light the scoreboard early.

Three turnovers, dropped passes, and several costly holding penalties--as well as a missed 24-yard field goal--were among the hurdles which the Pointers were unable to jump.

Although the offense's performance was shaky at times, the Pointer defense was solid, especially after Platteville closed to within a touchdown near halftime.

Platteville managed a meager 109 yards in total offense in the second half.

Bill Altmann, under a strong rush, completed 14 of 34 attempts for 114 yards while fullback standout Rob Dal Santo gained 37 of his 105 yards rushing after the break.

Led by the one-two combination of seniors Roger Hauri and Jimmy Henderson, the Pointers moved the ball almost at will between the red zones.

Wrestlers look for third straight conference crown

After two straight Wisconsin State University Conference titles and an impressive showing at this year's first home open meet, the UWSP wrestling team is looking to hit the mat hard again.

Saturday's 26-team Tombstone Open in Quandt Fieldhouse gave seventh-year head coach Marty Loy a good look at this year's prospects, veterans and newcomers.

"I was really encouraged by the Tombstone Open," said Loy. "One of the nice parts is that we get to evaluate the new freshmen."

Loy's squad, who went 18-5 in dual meets last year, includes no less than 22 freshmen, a few of whom gave Loy a good showing in the silver division on Saturday.

Perry Miller took third in the heavyweight class and probable redshirt Pat Knoch wrestled unattached at 150 lbs., grabbing second.

Troy Szydel was third at 142 lbs. and Jason Malchow was second at 118.

In the gold division, Point's upperclassmen took charge with seven top three finishers.

Jere Hamel and Rick DeMario captured second and third respectively at 142 lbs., and Shannon Ludwig placed third in the 167 lb. class.

Colin Green was third in the 177 lb. division, while Brian Suchocki matched him in the heavyweight division.

Senior Travis Ebner and junior Shane Holm finished big at 190 lbs., placing one-two.

Loy is looking forward to having nine seniors to help with the team.

"One of the benefits this year is our leadership," said Loy. "Every one of our seniors is

The UWSP men's and women's swimming and diving teams both walked away victorious after last Saturday's meet against UW--Whitewater.

The UWSP men's team dominated UW--Whitewater's 142-95 by taking seven firsts and nine seconds out of 13 events.

Eight firsts and as many seconds put the UWSP women's team on top with a 133-100 victory.

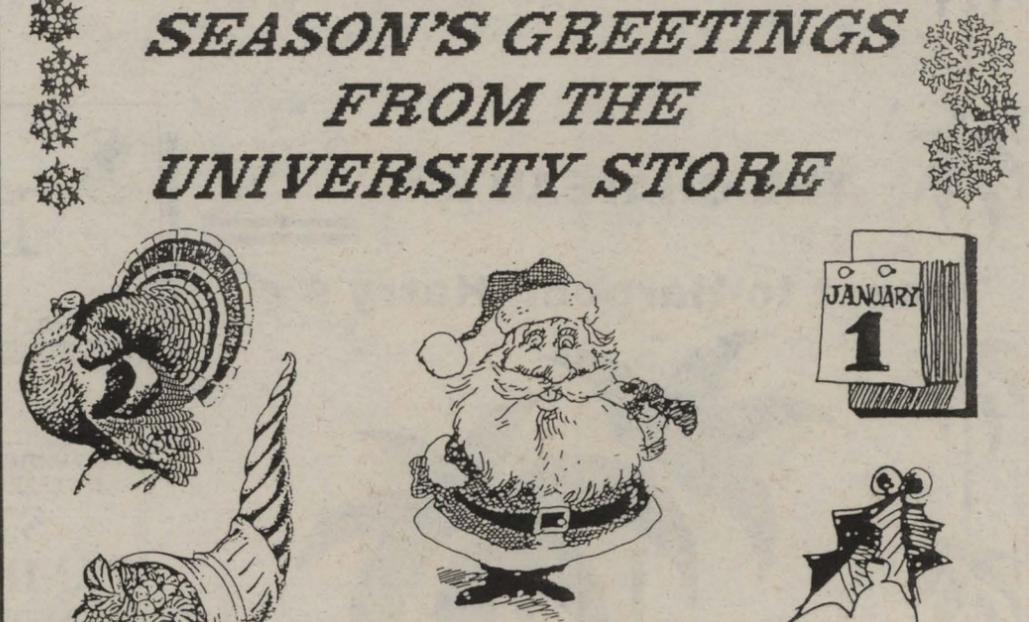

Despite the victory, head coach "Red" Blair said, "Our times are not very good, but I didn't expect them to be. After having a good week's practice, we were tired."

"I was happy with the win," Blair added.

While most of the men's and women's teams had opponents, the Pointer divers had only their teammates to compete against; since Whitewater didn't have any representatives for diving events.

"The divers did a great job scoring needed off Al Bouschor's second goal of the season.

Mike Zambon added a little icing with a short-handed goal six minutes later.

"It was really a great team effort," said Baldarotta. "Anytime you get a shutout in this league it's big-time stuff. We were really happy.

"They're a great hockey team. We have a lot of respect for them. They're going to be spoilers this year."

In spite of the loss, Lake Forest goalie David Kulik had 33 saves.

"They had great goal-tending," said Baldarotta. "That kid's going to take them a long way."

UWSP 6 Lake Forest 4

The Foresters took the ice looking nothing like their former selves on Friday while the Pointers trudged through the first period with all the intensity of a dial tone.

Lake Forest, who finished second to last in the NCHA last year, shot to a quick 2-0 lead behind goals from Chris Austin and Johan Larsson before three and a half minutes were up.

"We were terrible," coach Mike Baldarotta said. "Not to take anything away from them, but we were just terrible. They just dictated the play to us."

The Pointers swung back with Kevin Plager's first goal of the season at the 9:26 mark.

The joy was short-lived, though, as the Foresters lunged back with their third goal of the period less than a minute later.

After hearing Baldarotta's choice thoughts at the first break, the Pointers cut the lead to 3-2 on Frank Cirone's goal off a deft pass from freshman Matt Carey.

The Point defense locked down, too, shutting out the Foresters in the second period.

Andy Faulkner's third goal of the year, a dink from three feet out, tied the game at three apiece at the 14:38 mark.

"We made our own breaks (in the second period)," said Baldarotta. "We made the puck bounce for us, and that's what you've got to do."

By the third period, the Pointers had Lake Forest's number.

Al Bouschor put the Pointers ahead 4-3 with his first goal of the year at the 2:58 mark after a barrage of Stevens Point shots got the best of Forester goalie David Kulik.

The lead held until Lake Forest's Kit Read tied it up with 3:40 to go in the game.

The Pointers would hear none of that, clearing the puck to Jimmy Fish who scored on a quick shot off a Derek Marhand assist.

Cirone added the icing with his second goal of the night with 26 seconds to play.

They amassed 300 yards rushing and another 223 through air as Hauri postmarked 18 of 33 attempts to boost his season passing total to 2,072 yards.

It was not until the 10-play, 76-yard scoring drive early in the fourth quarter that the Pointers put the Pioneers out of contention.

"We weren't playing with a lot of emotion early in the game," said head coach John Miech.

"The 91-yard drive late in the first half was the difference. Not only because we scored, but because our offensive line took control and knocked the two best linebackers out of the game."

Henderson, who gained 184 yards in 40 attempts on the day, tiptoed 5 yards around the left side to score the 39th touchdown of his career, an all-time Pointer record.

Henderson finished the season with a new all-time record of 1,486 yards rushing.

He also elevated his career total to 3,097 yards--only 185 behind the record of 3,282--set back in 1955 by Norbert "Nubbs" Miller.

The 300 yards on the ground enabled the Pointers to set another all-time record of 2,348 in team rushing yards.

The former mark belonged to the 1955 team that ran for 2,139 yards.

The Pointers placed five players in the WSUC all-conference first team.

Henderson, who led the conference in rushing with 1,093 yards, was named to the first offensive squad, along with senior tight end Scott Zwirschitz, kicker Todd Passini and offensive tackle Brian Drummy.

On the first defensive team, lineman Bret Haume and free safety Randy Simpson took two spots for the Pointers.

Quarterback Roger Hauri, the second-ranked passer in the conference, made the second team with 1374 yards passing on the season.

Senior wide receiver Dean Bryan and offensive lineman Mike Feltz were also given second-team honors.

Dave Dremel, Pete Deates and Mark Leidel were named to the second team.

Offensive lineman Derek Sell, wide receiver Tim Ott and defensive lineman Chris Unke all received honorable mention.

taking some kind of leadership role."

Despite his team's recent success, Loy is looking for even bigger things from his well-mixed team.

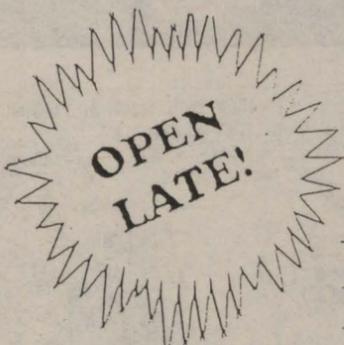

"We've gone from worst team to best team in the conference and one of the best in the nation," said Loy.

"You haven't done it all till you've won it all. We're still working on taking that final step and finishing the job off."

The team faces Northern Illinois University on Dec. 1 in its first home dual meet.

Salvation Army Food Drive
Share your blessings this Thanksgiving season by contributing non-perishable food items to the Salvation Army food drive. Look for collection bins at Stevens Point area Copps, County Market, IGA, Piggly Wiggly and UWSP convenience stores. Donations will be accepted through Thanksgiving Day. So, as you shop for your family, remember to share your blessing with those in our community who could use a helping hand. Please give to the Salvation Army.
