RIGHT group takes action against City Council

Group claims city ordinance unconstitutional, Mayor disagrees

By Jennifer Tatro
CONTRIBUTOR

Radical Intellectuals Getting Hyped Together (RIGHT) is a group of concerned individuals who seek to ensure personal freedoms.

The student organization was founded at UWSP in 1991 and now has 30 members.

"We take what some consider radical actions to ensure personal freedoms," said Matthew Eddy, president of RIGHT.

In 1992, the group went to Washington, D.C. for a gay/lesbian march. "It was one of the largest demonstrations on the Capitol Mall in history," said Eddy. "Ten students from UWSP went."

The organization's most recent challenge is to protest the Stevens Point City Ordinance 24.40 (b), titled Unlawful Assembly.

In last week's letter to the editor, Eddy stated, "In brief, the ordinance is extremely vague as to who is in violation.

disturbance to the comfort and repose of any person acting lawfully is, gives the officer too much power.

"The purpose of Unlawful Ordinance 24.40 (b) is to discourage groups of people from assembling together," he added.

not affect them, but it does," said Eddy.

"The ordinance has not been enforced to its full extent yet. By not practicing your right to assemble, your right will slowly be taken away."

To test the ordinance, the group is planning to peacefully assemble on the Stevens Point City Hall lawn on Monday, November 7, at 5 p.m.

"We want to remain silent, as to not mix freedom of speech and freedom of assembly.

"We want to be peaceful and do not want to break any other laws such as littering or alcohol abuse so the city will have no reason to disperse us," said Eddy.

"People have the right to peaceably assemble; the university is a very liberal institution.

"They want to protect people's freedom, and this is good, but we live in an adverse society and we

"We feel that people have the notion that this ordinance does not affect them, but it does."

Matthew Eddy, President of the RIGHT group

"The ordinance reads that someone in violation is 'any person who is a member of a group of three or more persons who are loitering or prowling in a place, at a time, or in a manner not usual for law-abiding citizens.'"

The ordinance also states that if the alleged person "creates an unreasonable danger of a disturbance to the comfort and repose of any person acting lawfully," they can be found in violation of the ordinance.

RIGHT feels that not specifying what an unusual time and/or manner is and not defining what "Racism and sexism could be a problem," said Eddy. "Something as simple as skin color can be disturbing to some people," he said.

"Anything could cause discrimination, but I do not foresee this as a problem," Mayor Halverson countered.

"The ordinance was proposed because of the recent shooting in front of Bruisers and complaints concerning large assemblies of people causing noise, profanity, intimidation and leaving litter behind," said Halverson.

"I feel that people have the constitutional right to peaceably assemble, but people also have a right to peace," said Halverson.

"When noise and getting out of hand is a problem is when it causes a bother."

In opposition, RIGHT feels that the intent of the ordinance is necessary in order to control mobs and violence, but the wording is too vague and could lead to the infringement of constitutional rights.

"We feel that people have the notion that this ordinance does

Voices heard on capitol steps

Students across the state oppose tuition hikes

Over 500 students from across the state gathered last Wednesday at the state capitol to protest high tuition increases and to inspire students to vote on November 8.

The rally, sponsored by the United Council of UW Student Governments, featured several state legislators and student leaders speaking on the need for a strong state commitment to higher education.

Speakers included United States Student Association President Stephanie Arellano, State Rep. Tammy Baldwin (D—Madison), State Sen. Fred Risser (D-Madison) and United Council of UW Student Governments President David C. Stacy.

Letters of support from State Reps. Terry Musser (R—Black River Falls) and Sheila Harsdorf (R—River Falls) were also read.

The rally opened with an explanation of the issues at hand.

"Tuition is out of control; students' tuition should not have to bear the burden of property tax relief... (and) students are voting everywhere," said United Council Legislative Affairs Director Sachin Chheda.

Baldwin spoke of Wisconsin's traditionally strong commitment to higher education and warned about threats to that tradition.

"Further shifting of the state's revenue burden to students will result in you, the students, being denied the opportunity to pursue your goals, improve your lives and improve the quality of life in Wisconsin," Baldwin said.

Stacy also spoke about the recent property tax relief proposals and the threat they pose to higher education.

"Access, affordability and quality are in jeopardy. Property tax relief to fund kindergarten through 12th grade education must not gut our university system," Stacy said.

"(We) have paid enough. We are here to tell them that we will not tolerate property tax relief at the expense of students. We just don't have the cash," said Arellano.

Numerous speakers added that tuition increases have outpaced inflation, property taxes and health care costs.

"There is no reason that tuition should be increasing at two to three times the rate of inflation," said Risser.

UWSP students rally

By Greg Vandenberg

More than 400 students gathered on the steps of the state capitol Wednesday, October 26 to protest tuition hikes.

The rally had representatives from seven of Wisconsin's universities, including 25 students from UWSP that attended.

The students were protesting the continual increase of secondary education tuition throughout the state.

"Tuition has more than doubled in the last decade," said Student Government Association Senator Dan LeBeau.

"The universities continue to downsize, and education, which was number two on the state government's priority list, has fallen to number seven."

The United Council sponsored the rally to generate student involvement in elections and to stop this increase of tuition costs.

The United Council is a conglomeration of student governments from universities throughout the state.

This council was formed to lobby the state government for student rights at its headquarters in Madison.

The rally lasted from 12 p.m. to 1 p.m. and included numerous state representatives who spoke on tuition hikes.

"The rally was a starting point. If students don't continue to vote and get involved when the budget cuts occur, these cuts will continue," said LeBeau.

"Get out there and vote and make your opinions known!"

Students of UWSP who were involved in the rally were transported to Madison by bus.

MOSCOW—Russia has suspended oil shipments to Cuba because Cuba has run out of sugar to repay its debts.

According to the agreement, Russia was to deliver 2.5 million tons of oil to Cuba and receive about one million tons of sugar in return.

So far this year, Russia has sent 1.5 million tons of oil and Cuba has sent only 500,000 tons of sugar.

VIBO VALENTIA, ITALY—Two men were questioned on Tuesday regarding the fatal shooting of the seven-year-old American boy whose organs were donated to five Italians. The suspects were picked up Monday.

HEISTERBERG, GERMANY—Two escaped inmates led police on a wild chase across Germany until one was captured on Tuesday.

The Swiss man, who had been serving time for extortion, was captured by police, but his accomplice, a former East German army commando with the nickname "The Machete Murderer" is still at large.

NATIONAL

LOS ANGELES—The Menendez brothers' second murder trial is tentatively scheduled to begin on March 13. The judge must decide if Lyle, 26, and Eric, 23, will have separate trials.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH—Police are searching for a 17-year-old with a bad home life and an obsession with the movie "Natural Born Killers."

He is accused of shooting his stepmother and half-sisters in their beds. Nathan Martinez shaved his head and started wearing tinted glasses like Woody Harrelson in the movie.

Police watch for yellow lights Violation of the Month set for November

The Violation of the Month for the Stevens Point Police Department is violation of traffic control signals by motorists.

The Stevens Point Police Department will be targeting yellow light offenders. Green means go; red means stop. But what does that yellow light mean?

If your answer is "speed up," you may be in trouble, especially this month, when officers of the Stevens Point Police Department will be focusing on drivers who fail to obey traffic signals.

In November, Stevens Point officers will be making an extra effort to stop people who run red lights, run yellow lights and improperly turn on red lights.

The law on traffic lights is as follows:

Red: STOP. If the way is clear of traffic and pedestrians, you may turn right unless there is a "no turn on red" sign. The same applies to left turns from a one-way street onto a one-way street.

Yellow: If you can do so safely, stop before entering the intersection. A yellow light clears the intersection before the red light.

Green: GO. When the way is clear of traffic and pedestrians, you may go straight ahead or turn left or right where permitted.

Motorists observed violating the Traffic Control Signal Statute may be issued a citation that can cost up to $126.20 and will be assessed three or four demerit points based on their record.

Officers from the Stevens Point Police Department encourage everyone to drive cautiously and defensively as winter draws near.

If anyone has suggestions for the violation of the month, they can contact Sgt. James C. Benz at the Stevens Point Police Department.

UAB chosen as finalist for award NACA chooses 56 to win first annual award

UWSP's University Activities Board (UAB) has been selected as a finalist to compete for the National Association for Campus Activities (NACA) Associate's Choice Award.

The Associate's Choice Award is presented to one outstanding student programming organization that demonstrates professionalism in developing and presenting campus events and programs, exhibits an understanding and concern for attractions' needs and creates a positive working relationship with associate members.

Nominees were considered based on criteria such as professionalism, promotional efforts and creativity in the presentation of events, to name a few.

The talent firms belonging to the NACA nominated 56 schools for the first annual award, and the five schools whose names appeared most frequently on the ballots were selected as finalists.

Over 1,100 colleges and universities and 575 talent firms are part of the NACA, which is the largest and most influential cam-

He is anxious to attend the NACA national convention in Anaheim, Calif., on Feb. 18, where the award winner will be announced.

Diekroeger believes the UAB is deserving of the Associate's Choice Award because "We offer the best opportunity for student involvement and education around; here, the students do anything."

He also noted that "To be nominated for the first annual Associate's Choice Award is impressive in itself; it shows that we are doing things right."

The UWSP UAB is comprised of 14 paid students and over 100 student volunteers.

Diekroeger notes that each person, whether paid or volunteer, is vital to the success of any campus event or activity. Students can join UAB at any time during the school year.

"We offer the best opportunity for student involvement and education around; here, the students do everything."

CRIME LOG

10/28—There was a report of disorderly conduct and underage drinking in Pray Hall.

10/29—An officer saw a group of males urinating in the Schmeckle Reserve Area. They ran into the reserve when they saw the officer, who was unable to locate the group.

10/30—A CA in Pray Hall requested assistance with a resident. An argument with the resident's visiting friend had escalated and became disruptive. Close to two cases of beer were confiscated and poured out.

11/1—A DeBot service worker reported six bullets on the ground in the first stall to the north of the cycle area. An officer found and picked up four of the bullets.

One last breath of autumn air

"Horoscope Guy" speaks

To all the people out there who hate me,

Where to start?

First off, let me say that I am sorry: not for writing this particular horoscope, but sorry that people were hurt or offended by it. I write the horoscope to make people laugh: that's its sole purpose. I don't use it as a forum for social issues, and little (if any) of it should be taken seriously.

Before I discuss the letters, let me explain the horoscope. I firmly believe that a joke loses something when explained, but perhaps this joke will shed its misunderstanding rather than its humor.

Real horoscopes tend to be ambiguous things that can be applied to almost anyone. I decided to make my horoscopes over-specific, and applying to no one (hopefully). As far as the individual horoscopes go I try for the most ridiculous (and occasionally risqué) things that I can think of. It's said that art holds a mirror to life, I wanted to use a fun house mirror.

Now, Take Back the Night is a group that strives toward a noble purpose. However, it does have the reputation for being a fanatical man-bashing cult. It is from this reputation that I draw the witch parallel.

What do you do with witches? Burn them. This is ridiculous, and a stereotype to boot, and I'm sorry if any Wiccans were upset.

The last line is what stepped on the most toes. Probably because it was the closest I came to real life. I know that a lot of men who try to attend TBTN rallies feel uncomfortable, and somewhat abused themselves. So I exaggerated it to "no one really cares." Besides, the thought that people were burned alive and no one cared is again, ridiculous.

Never knew so much thought went into a two sentence joke, did you?

I've dealt with most of the issues brought up by Teresa Darr's letter already. But I would like to touch on a couple of things. I didn't call anyone a witch. I did compare the two gatherings, but even then only humorously. Also, I'm a little miffed at being deemed "...part of a great network of violence against women."

The letter from Stacy Matthews and Quincy Chapman touches on some new subjects. First, I didn't mean to imply that "...rape survivors and their allies deserve to be burned at the stake," any more than I meant to goad people into killing their math tutors, handing out LSD, (or tape-worms,) committing adultery, stoning people to death, or <shudder> giving Chia pets as gifts. Perhaps when seen with its fellow horoscopes this one will seem more understandable.

Second, I like to think I am at least slightly informed on women's issues having both read a bit, and done volunteer work for a Madison women's group, soliciting funds and distributing materials. Hell, I even know one or two women personally.

Third, I stand in defense of The Pointer. My editors have (so far) given me free reign over my subject matter. They saw this for the joke that it is. The claim that The Pointer is "...printing misinformation aimed at injuring its readership." is more absurd than most of my horoscopes. There is no information in them! Anyone who could take them seriously would have to be dangerously insane to begin with. In addition, the most injury I hope to give any reader is a pair of aching sides.

Though I don't believe I was wrong, I offer up the following revision.

Capricorn (Dec 22-Jan 19): Out on Halloween you stumble onto a rally for Take Back the Night that does not resemble a coven of witches. After congratulating them for doing important work empowering victims you continue on your way.

True, but it just doesn't seem the same.

If there is anyone else out there with an opinion on this or any other horoscope I would like to hear from you. Send to "That Horoscope Guy" c/o The Pointer. Please include an address and/or a phone number as I respond to all of my hate mail personally.

Pat Rothfuss

"Raped women are not witches"

Dear Editor,

I was appalled when I read the Horoscope section in The Pointer. I cannot believe someone compared the Take Back the Night rally to a gathering of witches! As a participant in this event for the past two years, I was personally offended at being called a witch.

Many may say I am overreacting to this one little thing, but this one little thing is just part of a great network of violence against women.

Take Back the Night symbolizes our desire to clear the streets of evil, not bring evil to it.

Raped women are not witches. Supporters of raped and sexually mistreated people are not witches. We desire no violence, no hatred, and no evil.

Does UWSP advocate homosexuality?

I am writing in response to Mrs. Pat Onans' letter to the editor, published in the Oct. 22 issue of the Stevens Point Journal, entitled "Withdrawing Support from University."

Mrs. Onan, it is unclear to me just which issues you were trying to discuss. You imply that the topics of your letter range from homosexuality to the division of church and state.

You stated that for UWSP to "endorse the chosen homosexual lifestyle that was abhorred for thousands of years now in the Bible is an outrage." You go on to imply that UWSP has an "anything goes mentality."

Perhaps you are in need of more background regarding the recent homecoming election. Two people were chosen from each of four residence halls and two from the 10% Society. According to Gwen Wheeler, Homecoming Coordinator, "The 10% Society won with approximately 140 vote."

This semester at UWSP, there were 8,424 students. The 140 votes signified that 1.6 percent of the total number of UWSP students voted for them and that 98.4 did not. I find it difficult to believe that these results would turn our campus into a "breeding ground for homosexuals."

Or is it not the results that upset you? Is it your belief that homosexuals do not have a right to an education? Are you suggesting that education should be reserved for only moral people? Who would make that decision and whose definition would be used as moral?

It is unfortunate that you feel UWSP will not provide your daughter with a good education because of an elected homosexual homecoming king and queen.

However, a Christian college may not exclude your daughter from attending school with homosexuals or being taught by them. Mrs. Onan, are you aware of a recent study conducted by the National Health and Social Survey? Its findings showed that 4.2 percent of the people surveyed (in the U.S.) stated that they are homosexual. Certainly, that does not omit people who state that they are Christians.

UWSP is not an institution whose job is to teach morals. That is defined by the First Amendment, which clearly states a division of state and religion. However, in the explanation of Amendment I to Article I of the Constitution, it states, "Congress could pass legislation against any sect which practiced customs contrary to morality."

Mrs. Onan, this is my dilemma. The opening statement of your letter said, "As my husband and I left the congressional debate...." By the fact that you and your husband had attended a congressional debate (at UWSP), it appears that you are well-informed and concerned citizens.

Then why, Mrs. Onan, did you decide to attack UWSP, who has no legislation over morality, and the very institution which led you to your awareness, instead of the congressmen who were sitting directly in front of you?

Linda Larson
Student of UWSP and proud of it!

Take Back The Night is misunderstood

Dear Editor,

We are writing in response to the Horror Scope published in the October 27 issue of The Pointer, and in particular, the Capricorn entry regarding the burning of witches. In that entry, the author described a scene in which witches were burned at the stake, only to find that they were really women in a Take Back the Night Rally, and that "nobody really cared."

We were shocked, angered and offended by the idea that rape survivors and their allies deserve to be burned at the stake.

There's funny and there's hurtful. Hurtful and hateful. While the author was apparently trying to be funny, what came across was an obvious misunderstanding of women, their issues, and the seriousness of the Take Back the Night event. How can a person be so afraid of a group of women and men asserting their human rights, that they could joke about killing them?

Perhaps the author misunderstood what Take Back the Night is about. We, who take part in the activity, continually hear people refer to the event as a "male-bashing, femi-Nazi gathering." These people have obviously not attended or even paid partial attention to the goings-on at this event. For it is women and men, survivors and friends, liberals and conservatives, community folks and college students, who gather on this one day to support our friends whose lives were touched by the trauma of assault.

We are also concerned that the editorial staff of The Pointer allowed the entry to run. Obviously we are concerned about free speech and its protection, but a newspaper editorial staff has an obligation to refrain from printing misinformation aimed at injuring its readership. Though a student-run newspaper, The Pointer should hold itself to the same standards of professionalism to which any other paper subscribes.

Sincerely,
Stacey Matthews and Quincy Chapman

Instead of demonstrating, students should vote

For tuition to come down, they should commit themselves to a "real demonstration"

By Bill Downs

CONTRIBUTOR

Last week's demonstrations in Madison, and here, over rising tuition costs reminded me of the student protests of the sixties. The symbolism and emotion of the marches brought back many of the memories I have of that era, and they also reminded me that students really haven't learned much in 30 years.

Instead of organizing demonstrations, students should be organizing voters. If there are ever going to be changes made to the way things are done in government it must come through active participation in the election process.

Once all the riots and smoke had cleared during the campus unrest of the sixties the leaders of the rebellion found that they had accomplished little except to get a lot of people hurt or killed.

In the final analysis it was through the electorate that changes in the draft and the voting age became realities. When incumbents see their popularity waning in the polls they take action, not when a group of people sit in front of doors or brandish signs with clever slogans.

Since eighteen year olds won the right to vote they have done little with this precious right. Whether it's through their ignorance or indifference, it would seem that all the protests, riots, and sit-ins of the sixties were for naught.

As a student I'm concerned about the rising cost of tuition too. But, I would be more impressed if I saw students organizing campaigns to register voters and championing the cause of the candidate who has a plan for reducing the cost of education.

Demonstrations are good if they are used to punctuate the only legal way we have to make changes.

However, most demonstrations merely provide a short insignificant and forgettable media event.

Each election year for the past several elections there has been the bellow from the disgruntled electorate to "throw the rascals out." Yet, each time, the old party line politics prevails.

If students want to see the cost of tuition come down they must be willing to sacrifice their time and commit themselves to the "real demonstration" of getting out the vote.

Next week we'll all have that opportunity to demonstrate our resolve to get tuition lowered. Get registered and VOTE!

SGA Speaker holds loaded budget to editor's head

To be sure the Student Government Association (SGA) is an important organization on campus. The decisions they make have an effect on all of us.

I assure you, should the SGA make a decision that is important, I will be more than happy to give them the coverage they deserve.

However, it is my responsibility to report news that I feel the student body wants to know about (or needs to, at any rate) and because we weekly receive enough copy to fill several papers, editorial decisions regarding inclusion or exclusion in The Pointer have to be made.

Now, I do not, nor have I ever, perceived The Pointer as a "campus newsletter," yet I would happily send a reporter to cover every event, major or minor, that happens on this campus, and I would happily print every schedule, press release, letter or editorial that crosses my desk, if for no other reason than to quell the incessant flow of irate callers wondering why this or that particular organization's 'news' didn't make the paper.

And I can tell you, each one of these callers feels their 'news' would "serve the best interests of the students."

Unfortunately, only one of these organizations has the ability to cut our funding because they feel that they are "being somewhat ignored by The Pointer."

And I, like Mr. Thoms, would hate to see The Pointer "experience any (budget) difficulties because of a perceived failure to serve the best interests of the students."

So yes, Mr. Thoms, I will work with you now, "to head off any such perceptions," even though it seems just a little bit like extortion.

After all, now's as good a time as any for the students to see how a government really works.

MEMO

To: Lee Allen, Pointer Editor-in-Chief
From: Christopher Thoms, SGA Speaker of the Senate

15 October 1994

RE: Attention to SGA

Lee, how's things? After talking to a few Senators and other students, it has come to my attention that the Student Government; the primary agency for the resolution of student issues; has been somewhat ignored by the pointer as of late. Your News Editor, Stephanie Sprangers, herself said that she has not been giving SGA as much attention as she should be. Hopefully on your (The Pointer's) own recognizance this oversight will be corrected.

I hardly need remind you of the importance of SGA. However, there are some things I wish to make explicit. SGA is a group of people elected to represent the students of this campus. Making policy decisions in the name of the Student Body is our responsibility. As such, the decisions of SGA are those of the Student Body, reflective of student interests. I would appreciate it if the efforts of SGA were given more attention. I am not suggesting that The Pointer express the opinions of SGA, but I am asking you to report more on the issues facing students and what their elected representatives are doing (or not doing) to resolve such issues. Criticism or praise, SGA should be given more attention.

The disposition of student moneys (segregated fees) is also, as you know, the responsibility of the Student Government Association. SGA endeavors to allocate money to student organizations so as to benefit the greatest number of students possible. Those organizations which serve the students best receive the largest allocations. In particular, The Pointer receives a fairly large portion of segregated fee money from the students. In essence, the students pay The Pointer to distribute information. During annual budget allocations in the coming Spring, I would hate to see The Pointer experience any difficulties because of a perceived failure to serve the best interests of the students. Please work with us now to head off any such perceptions.

Please contact either President Ferriter or myself if you ever have any concerns or need any assistance. SGA is here for you and all students. Thank you for your time and take care.

body, encouraged the crowd to examine the causes of tuition increases and has called for a study of the corporate influence on public universities.

Miranda is in his sixth day of a hunger strike to draw attention to spiraling tuition costs.

The impact of the UW System was given credit for Wisconsin's strong economy. "State leaders talk about how well Wisconsin's economy is doing compared to other states.

"One of the major reasons is the strong commitment to higher education we have made in this state," Stacy said.

Student leaders also stressed that students must remain involved in the days ahead.

"We must exercise the most vital right that we have...the right to vote," said Matt Blevins, chair of the Associated Students of Madison.

Jamie Kuhn, president of the UW-Green Bay student body, said, "Everyone has a right to education, and everyone is capable of improving society."

Her call for diversity and a strong University System resonated across the issues of tuition, property tax relief and student empowerment.

Ray Harmon, president of the UW-Milwaukee Black Student Union, also spoke on access to education.

"Tuition is like a fire out of control, and we need to hose down that fire to allow an affordable education for all."

Students were left with a message to get involved on their campus and in their community.

Sarah Behl, Legislative Director of the UW-Stevens Point Student Government, reported on activities student activists have conducted this fall to register students to vote and educate them.

She also reported on three concurrent rallies being held at UW-Superior, UW-Oshkosh and UW-Marathon County.

Chad Thompson, president of the UW-Fox Valley Student Association, closed the rally by exhorting the students to "maintain a level of participation that tells the people of Wisconsin we are serious, and we are strong... Don't let the fire die."

Founded in 1960, the United Council of UW Student Governments is the statewide student association for UW System students.

It represents 130,000 students on 22 of the 26 UW campuses.

Changes; hard.
What vice has brought us to this threshold?
Youth spins crazily away-we're never told how or what or why.
Not that we'd listen.
It just happens.
It's too late, it's not too late.
We'll ask again tomorrow.

Stan Gruszynski supports Bill Murat

"Being elected to public office is a privilege and it carries a serious responsibility to use good judgment and common sense. The qualities and character of those we elect will be reflected in the decisions they make on our behalf. That is why I am giving my full and unequivocal support to Bill Murat who is running for the position I once held in the State Assembly. Bill will do an excellent job and I urge you to support him on November 8th."

New license plates feature wolves

License plates adorned with a picture of a timber wolf will be available starting Jan. 1, 1995 to Wisconsin motor vehicle owners who want to show their support for endangered resources.

Under an agreement between the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (DNR) and the Department of Transportation (DOT), car and truck owners can buy endangered resources license plates depicting a timber wolf and rising moon for an additional $25 annual fee when registering each vehicle.

The additional $25, considered a tax-deductible donation to the State of Wisconsin, will support a wide range of programs to protect endangered animals, plants and habitats in Wisconsin.

Application forms for the license plates are being developed and will be available at the Division of Motor Vehicle Customer Services Centers statewide before Jan. 1.

benefit Wisconsin's natural resources."

"Public support for endangered resources is helping us recover bald eagles, timber wolves, peregrine falcons, trumpeter swans and a host of other aquatic and terrestrial animals," Meyer said. "Endangered resources programs also inventory rare plants and animals, purchase natural areas and protect remnants of rare, special habitats," Meyer added.

"The Bureau of Endangered Resources relies heavily on voluntary contributions for a substantial part of its budget," said Charles Pils, director of the DNR's endangered resources programs. "We are a small program with a big job, and the license plate purchases will certainly help."

Show answers deer questions

Deer hunters interested in getting answers to questions on deer management, regulations and this fall's hunting opportunities should tune in to "Deer Hunt '94," a special edition of the public television show "Outdoor Wisconsin," to be broadcast from 7 to 8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 9.

This is the fourth annual deer hunting special sponsored by WMVS-Channel 10 in Milwaukee and the Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

The program will feature segments on the outlook for the upcoming gun deer hunting season that runs Nov. 19 through 27.

It will also include deer initiatives to involve the public in deer management, managing deer in northern forests, deer damage abatement programs, opportunities for hunters with disabilities and hunting safety and regulations.

"Outdoor Wisconsin" host Dan Snail will anchor the special, which will be broadcast live from WMVS's Milwaukee studio.

Small will conduct live interviews with DNR wildlife managers, researchers, law enforcement authorities and district personnel concerning the state's white-tailed deer herd and the upcoming gun deer season.

As in previous years, DNR specialists will be on hand to answer questions phoned in by viewers, who may call a special toll-free number: 1-800-221-1036.

Trippers plan fall adventures

By Cathy Kozlowski
CONTRIBUTOR

The UWSP Trippers are organizing a day trip to Rib Mountain on Nov. 5 and a kayak clinic on Nov. 6.

UWSP Trippers officers call their club "an outdoor adventure club," according to Jen Falck, vice-president of the group.

This year the Trippers have participated in horseback riding, a Porcupine Mountains camping trip, a hayride and a kayak clinic.

"We are into education and preparation. For the Porcupine Mountains trip, we gave information on safety, environmentally-sensitive camping and on safe and appropriate equipment," Falck stated.

"There is a great range of experience in the Trippers. In the Porcupine Mountains trip, the beginners were not intimidated.

"Everyone helped each other along," Kate Bernovich, president of the Trippers said.

"Trippers was established around the '60s and died out in the '80s. As other CNR organizations formed and took trips, the Trippers died out.

"In the Spring of 1992, David Bernovich, this year's treasurer and last year's president started it back up," added Bernovich.

"Next semester there will be a ski trip to Treehaven and a spring break trip. Other possibilities include biking and kayaking," Bernovich said.

The membership fee for the Trippers is $6 a semester or $10 a year. It includes discounts at recreational services, discounts on trips themselves and early sign-ups for trips.

The Rib Mountain hiking trip is $3 for members and $4 for non-members, and the kayaking clinic is $2 for members and $3 for non-members.

"We welcome anyone interested and any new ideas," Bernovich concluded.

For more information, call Kate or David Bernovich at 341-2062 or Jen Falck at 341-6799.

Boaters take precautions for cold weather

Whether you're hunting ducks, taking your last few casts of the fishing season, or simply enjoying some time on the water, cold weather boating requires some extra caution.

According to Bill Engfer, Boating Law Administrator with the Department of Natural Resources, water temperatures change dramatically each year as winter approaches and the days become shorter.

"Cold water saps strength from your body. It dulls your senses and makes it more difficult for you to save yourself," Engfer said. "The key to staying alive is staying out of the water."

Engfer said boaters should sit low in the craft and avoid standing, since many drownings are the result of victims falling overboard after tripping or losing balance.

Efforts should be made to avoid cluttering or overloading the boat, and movements within the boat should be kept to a minimum.

Similarly, boaters should avoid alcohol. Engfer said people often think drinking may keep them warm. Instead, it impairs their judgment and increases the likelihood of an accident.

Always wear an approved life jacket. In addition to keeping you afloat, your life jacket will buy you some time in the water by extending your protection from hypothermia.

For years, I have listened to people talk about landfills and waste, but I have never understood the gravity of the problem until I spent a day going through the junk behind a camp shelter.

Old coffee makers, metal furnaces, pipes, faucets, trash compactors and stoves that had all seen their useful days come to an end were piled up.

They sat neglected in a heap of awkward clutter. Shiny metal glinted arrogantly in the sun, reminding me of its permanence.

We didn't actually throw any of the junk away; we just cleaned it out of one area and stacked it neatly in the next. The amount of waste always remained the same.

As I carried armloads of metal to the new pile, I thought about how this simple chore was a small-scale representation of the global environmental problems.

We have piles of waste, and all we can do is keep moving them from one place to another. We put them on barges or bury them deep underground, but the amount continues to grow.

Meanwhile, we continue to create more and more waste as new technologies and fads sweep out the old to usher in the new and "better."

My arms began to ache and the pile started to dwindle. As I worked, I couldn't help but think about the good old days when things were durable and people thought twice before throwing anything away.

Necessity drove them to conserve and reuse. They did not live in the throw-away world we are living in now.

We would do well to imitate today the ideas of yesterday.

White named top environmental interpretation student

An environmental education and biology major at UWSP has been named the top environmental interpretation student in the country.

Debbie White, a senior from Mount Prospect, Ill., received a $1,000 scholarship from the National Association for Interpretation, a professional organization of environmental educators.

She will receive an all-expense paid trip to the group's annual conference in Cleveland, Ohio next week to accept the award.

White says studying biology and environmental education has allowed her to combine two of her most passionate interests—teaching and nature.

As she described her motivation in her scholarship application, "Environmental interpretation brings together a lifetime of interests and puts my talents to the test.

"Interpretation feeds on the overwhelming emotions I experience when I feel in touch with the world around me; it allows me to focus this enthusiasm and use it to help inspire others to realize the beauty of nature."

Nominated for the honor by Professor Michael Gross, White served an internship at the Shedd Aquarium in Chicago last summer.

Gross describes her as "the most gifted among the 53 students that I currently advise in resource education and interpretation.

Debbie White, senior environmental education and biology major.

"In fact, she would rank as one of the top students in the 17 years that I have been teaching in the College of Natural Resources."

In addition to the summer internship, White has worked as a laboratory teaching assistant at UWSP, as an assistant naturalist at the Grove National Landmark and as an art instructor and camp counselor.

Her supervisor at the Grove was Molly Shallop Stoddard, a 1990 graduate of UWSP, who encouraged White to pursue a career in environmental interpretation.

White hopes to work as an educator at a zoo or aquarium following her graduation in December. Eventually, she plans to pursue graduate studies.

White says she has enjoyed her professors at UWSP and her involvement in the practical experiences offered by the program.

She says she has especially appreciated the opportunity to spend several weeks working directly with children at the Central Wisconsin Environmental Station.

The daughter of Carolynn and Bob White, 1403 Greenwood Drive, Mount Prospect, White has also attended Northern Illinois University, National Louis University and a community college, both in the Chicago area.

DNR officer recommends watching for the "second deer"

By Bruce Neeb

DNR PUBLIC INFORMATION OFFICER

"Watch out for deer on the way home." I'll never forget my reaction to the last time I heard that.

As a Public Information Officer with the Department of Natural Resources, I write that news release each year urging caution on the highways during the deer mating season.

"Mom, you don't need to remind me," I said.

Yep, I know all the best stretches of highway for prime deer viewing. I know all about using my high beams, watching the edges of the road and slowing down through those areas at night.

"If I hit a deer, it would be like a fireman's house burning down," I said.

My family is into it as well. My wife never fails to remind me to slow down on a stretch of county highway about four miles from her mother's house.

For years, the kids have known their seat belts will keep them from flying through the air if we have to stop to miss a deer.

I was consciously looking for deer as we drove through that same stretch of county highway near Ladysmith last Friday.

The doe arrived right on cue, and in classic form, leaping full stride onto the shoulder and into the lane about 25 feet ahead of me.

On went the breaks, car seats and seat belts straining as my sleeping kids rocked forward.

As the doe cleared the path of the van, I eased off the brake, then thought out loud, "O.K., where's the second deer?"

And there it was, also in full stride, and just eight feet in front of me. This time the tires nearly skidded as I reapplied the brakes. My wife and kids rocked forward even further.

The van had all but stopped as the young buck cleared the bumper, his backside within inches of the chrome.

The kids gained a new appreciation for their seat belts as my wife explained to them that we had just missed two deer. I felt pretty smug as she marveled at my ability to predict the second deer.

I realized I had been lucky when we arrived at my mother-in-law's house later, and she told us a deer had run smack into the side of a friend's car down the road just earlier in the evening.

It is that time of year again. We will hear a lot of folks talking about close calls during the next few weeks and others talking about repair bills and deer that were injured in collisions.

Personally, I hope I have had my close encounter for this season.

Of course, after writing this, I can't help but think there's a bunch of deer out there waiting to show me I'm not so smart after all.

Winter camping season begins

An empty campground is a rare treat for summer visitors to state park and forest campgrounds, but for those campers willing—and prepared—to brave camping during a Wisconsin winter, empty campgrounds are more the norm, according to park officials.

More than 20 Wisconsin state parks and forests are open to winter camping, and most campgrounds have only one or two sites occupied on weekends.

"Winter campers say the quiet and reduced crowds are what they like about it the most," Brude Chevis, Department of Natural Resources (DNR) forest manager for the Southern Unit of the Kettle Moraine State Forest, said.

"And, of course, there are no mosquitoes. That's a big selling point."

Chevis' unit has some of the most popular winter camping sites in the state.

The southern forest unit has three primitive campsites with Adirondack shelters located along the Ice Age Trail.

The shelters have a roof and three sides with dirt or gravel floors, and campers commonly set up tents inside the shelters.

The shelters are located from 100 to several hundred yards away from parking lots, and users must carry in gear and water.

The shelters are often reserved a week or two in advance for many winter weekends; in the summer the shelters are commonly booked months in advance, Chevis says.

Most campers are there to ski on the forest's 40 miles of cross-country ski trails.

"Some campers will park at the other end of the trail, up to ten miles away, and then ski, hike or snowshoe to the campsites," he stated.

Anyone interested in staying in one of the shelters must register at the forest office and pay a camping fee.

Chevis recommends reserving a shelter at least a week in advance for a nominal reservation fee to ensure an opening.

The northern unit of the Kettle Moraine State Forest has six Adirondack shelters that are not heavily used.

Camping in both units of Kettle Moraine State Forest is restricted to the shelters or to campgrounds.

Both units of the Kettle Moraine, the Northern Highland, Black River and Point Beach state forests, the Bong Recreational Area and 16 state parks also offer winter camping at designated campgrounds.

At some park and forest campgrounds, camp sites are plowed out to provide access to recreational vehicles; other parks just plow roads through campgrounds.

All the parks open to winter camping have water available and open toilet facilities; some parks offer electrical hookups.

All vehicles must have admission stickers and regular camping rates apply.

Friends don't let friends write drunk

By Ryan Garns
HUMORIST

American literature has achieved some of its greatest work through alcohol. William Faulkner, Norman Mailer and Tennessee Williams all found their creative juices inside a bottle.

I, too, aspire to literary greatness. Therefore, I co-wrote this week's column with Jack Daniels.

Before starting a new paragraph, I took a shot. (Toward the end. I kind of lost count):

Overpopulation has become a serious problem in recent years. Experts tell us that the number of people in the world has increased by 50 percent in the last ten years.

There are different theories as to the aftermath of this explosion. Some postulate that everything will pan out equally. There will be more people, but there will be more resources to compensate.

Others believe that the outcome will be more hazardous. Effects of this problem would include famine, limited space, and an increase in dating services.

Personally I don't see a problem. The world is a wonderful place. Life is precious. The more the merrier, I say.

Yet some people out there don't think that way. They want to control everything. They say overpopulation is bad.

If we're going to stop it, I think we should start by killing all of the members of '80s bands. Wang Chung, Tears For Fears, Oingo Boingo—especially Chicago.

My ex-girlfriend used to love listening to Chicago. Her favorite song was "Will You Still Love Me." Yeah, right! I couldn't get her on the phone for three months. Then I found out she was dating my old roommate. Peter Cetera can kiss my ass.

I don't ask for much. I'm a good looking guy. I treat women with respect. Why me? My life is shit.

I'm sorry. I shouldn't be taking out my problems on you people. I don't know how I thought I could write a weekly column anyway. I'm not funny. My editor's gonna kill me.

Screw her! What does she know about pain? She just sits at her desk all day, working for the Man.

My parents think I'm in college right now. Christ, they want me to become an astronaut or psychiatrist or a doctor or a teacher or the President of Jello or some shit like that.

They don't understand. I need to find my own way in life.

I hope they never find out that I'm living with a woman.

But, anyway, if we ever hope to solve this overpopulation problem, we need more shoes.

How are people expected to drive without this all important Charmin? Does it stay krispy in milk?

And isn't it people everywhere who want to fine-tune the world happiness? They should stop eating pizza. Jesus, I wonder if they'll print thisssssssssss Analysis: Drinking doesn't work for me the way it did for Faulkner.

Or as my English teacher would scold, "When you can write like Faulkner, then you can drink."

The outline is jumbled and ideas are confusing. On the other hand, the number of typos are about average for The Pointer.

Scared Weird Little Guys perform in the Encore

These guys may be a little weird, but they have a big sense of humor.

Scared Weird Little Guys, a musical-comedy duo, will perform at the Encore on Saturday, November 5. The show starts at 8 p.m., and the cost is $2 with an UWSP ID and $3.50 without.

Members of Scared Weird Little Guys John Fleming and Rusty Berther have performed throughout Canada, the United States and Australia.

The duo performs hilarious musical parody, combining jokes with original and popular songs.

They have been called the "Weird Al Yankovics of Australia," satirizing anything from Elvis to Prince, politicians and other topics.

According to Fleming, they try to use topics the audience can relate to.

Fleming and Berther were formerly members of the popular Australian acappella music group, The Phones, before forming Scared Weird Little Guys.

Fleming plays guitar, and Berther plays banjo and bass. Both members sing.

The Melbourne Times calls them "Accomplished musicians, guitarists, singers, and composers... any subject, any style." The Herald Sun of Melbourne says, "scared... weird... bizarre... LAUGH."

Popular in their homeland, the duo has appeared on various Australian television shows.

Scared Weird Little Guys' visit to UWSP is sponsored by UAB.

Gumshoe Troupe expresses artistic abilities

By Monica Marie Kamps
CONTRIBUTOR

About 25 people sit in the sundial on the cement steps leading up to the Fine Arts Building. Each is bundled against the growing cold with coats and blankets. The quiet night is everywhere.

A candle is lit, then another one. Finally, a lantern illuminates the faces of James Johnson, president of the Gumshoe Troupe and Donna Decker, faculty advisor.

The Gumshoe Troupe is a group of students who provide a positive environment for multimedia performance art.

The group was founded by four students: James Johnson,

Deb Kosowicz, Matt Gillis and Benjamin Zoltak. It is the first group of its kind that the UWSP campus has seen.

The first event planned by the group was an open reading in the sundial. It was held at 11 p.m. on Sunday, Oct 30.

Johnson opened the reading with an excerpt from The Vampire Lestat, a novel by Anne Rice, and a few of his own poems.

Donna Decker and Kyle Downey followed, reading and performing their poetry, respectively. Zoltak, dressed all in white, lit up the night with a fireball blown from his mouth, then closed the reading with his Halloween poem.

Events to look forward to may include Zoltak spatter painting and Johnson playing the steel drums. Also in the works is a benefit for next semester, which selected bands will be playing at.

During the breaks in the music, the troupe hopes to hold performances on their own.

If you are interested in becoming part of the troupe, they are looking for dancers and musicians in particular.

Meetings are held every first and third Wednesday of the month at 8 p.m., in the LaFollette study lounge of the UC. For more info, call Donna Decker at 346-4332.

PAR holds bake sale

By Dawn Evans
CONTRIBUTOR

The Stevens Point-based group People Against Racism (PAR), will be holding a bake sale Monday, Nov. 7 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the UC concourse.

All proceeds will go to the UWSP Native American Center.

The new group formed recently, due to a common concern over racism in the Stevens Point area, especially towards Native Americans.

Said group member Christina Updike, "Stevens Point still has a ways to go in attitudes towards non-whites.

"Being a small city, Point hasn't had as much exposure to minorities. People need to be more aware of other cultures."

PAR spokesperson Stacy Kollvoss said, "In light of the Columbus Day controversy, we felt that the money should go to the Native American Center.

"This will aid them in their ongoing process of educating the general public on Native American issues."

The bake sale will be co-sponsored by Delta Phi Epsilon sorority.

Area artists exhibit work

Barbara Cranford and Lilas Smith, two area artists and long-time special students of UWSP's art department, will open an exhibit of their recent work in the Agnes Jones Gallery on Nov. 7.

Chapter Four

Bradford Pierce never did like coming to the Pentagon. The Deputy Assistant Director of the CIA always felt like he was being watched. Cameras, cameras and more cameras; they were everywhere.

President Douglas Graham was about to finish up his briefing. Bradford slowly turned and looked at Defense secretary Cordell Pearson. He was sweating.

He turned back toward the President and pretended to be paying attention. President Graham had closed his folder.

Pierce barely noticed when the President said "And remember, this meeting is classified. You gentlemen are dismissed."

Suddenly, books were being slammed and voices crescendoed. The meeting was over.

Bradford stood up, and the second-in-command of the CIA forced himself to engage in the usual small talk and shaking of hands. Five minutes later he left the room.

He took the elevator to the third floor and walked down a hallway until he found Communications Room 24-C. He entered and closed the door behind him, making sure to lock it.

The room was dark, except for the light that flowed through a doorway at the back. He walked through the doorway and into a room full of electronic gear.

Seated at the radio console were Cordell Pearson and Secretary of the Interior, Charles Canton.

"Hello gentlemen."

They both turned.

"It's about time you got here. We didn't think you were going to show up," said Charles Canton.

"Hey, you don't have to worry about me. Make the call."

"Yes sir, Mr. Deputy Assistant Director, sir," Pearson said mockingly.

He put on a headset and fiddled with some buttons.

"O.K., here we go." He turned on the headset and started talking.

"Alpha one, Alpha one, this is Foxtrot. Come in Alpha one, over."

A few seconds of static passed. Then from 3,500 miles northwest of Washington, D.C. came the response.

"Foxtrot, this is Alpha one. The kids are home, repeat, the kids are home!" rang a distinctly Russian voice.

"Roger that, Alpha one, Foxtrot over and out."

Pearson turned to face the other two.

"Phase one is complete, gentlemen."

Fozi's Masala

Religion is a topic which many people tend to avoid. Like myself, I am sure that you have come across discussions on religion.

It is a topic which is never ending; one can sit for hours and never really reach an understanding.

I chose this topic because in these times, many people are turning away from religion and searching for other answers, while others are content with what they have.

I recently had the pleasure of participating as a panelist in a program at Watson Hall called "Religious Diversity." At first I was hesitant to take part, because I was not sure I was in a position to represent my religion.

I was given a list of questions on different issues such as abortion, capital punishment and premarital sex and was asked to discuss how Islam dealt with them.

The first thing I did was call my friends who I thought were more knowledgeable than me.

After talking with them, I felt prepared for the discussion.

Besides Islam, there were four other panelists representing different religions (Christianity, Hinduism, Buddhism and Paganism).

I took it for granted that we would all come with different answers because we were representing different religions. We were given five minutes to describe our religion to our audience.

The questions did not deal with the philosophical thought behind the religion but how all the faiths deal with problems in society. We all had aspects in common, yet we were still very distant.

Wars are being fought all over the world because of religion.

Are they being fought because of a few "power hungry" people exploiting religious fervor for their own selfish reasons? Innocent people are being trampled for simply believing in something different.

If all organized religions in the world are sending out the same message, who can judge which is better?

We should grow to respect each other's beliefs and fight for the cause of humanity as a whole. This is where man-made institutions have failed.

Religion is something that is personal. No one can force it on another human being. People wonder at the people who hold fast to their faith.

I can only speak for myself as to why I still cling to my religion (even though the world is constantly changing).

Some changes are better for us, while others are threatening the existence of life on our planet.

Islam is a way of life for me which I apply every day. It's something that seems rational. I cannot separate it from my everyday experiences.

Many people tend to say "How can you believe in something that is centuries old?" It is like believing in historical facts.

If no one had written about history, then we would have never known how people lived.

Full-coat model personal flotation devices (PFDs) afford the best protection, since they help to retain the body's heat.

If you fall into the water, quickly climb back in, or climb on top of your overturned boat, Engfer said.

"Even if your boat is disabled, think twice before you start swimming to shore," Engfer said. "Swimming in cold water saps you of energy.

"If you're a long way out, you may want to sit tight and wait for help."

Engfer said studies show that in cold water, even a strong swimmer has only a 50-50 chance of making it to shore if land is a half mile away.

Once back on shore, Engfer said, it's important to get to a warm place, remove all wet clothing and warm up slowly.

Women's kickers continue championship trend

Pointers win third straight WWIAC crown, will host regionals this weekend

By Brett Christopherson
SPORTS EDITOR

Everybody was after them. And they could have easily panicked. But like a true champion, they rallied together. And when it was all over, they still were the best.

For the third straight season, the UWSP women's soccer team was crowned WWIAC champions, sweeping UW-Superior, UW-La Crosse, and UW-Eau Claire in the conference tournament last weekend on UWEC's Stein Field.

As a result of winning the conference championship, the Pointers also received their second straight bid to the NCAA Division III playoffs which begin this week.

"This bid represents the level our program has risen to," said head coach Sheila Miech. "We have a lot of maturity on this team, most of whom played in last season's NCAA tournament. That alone gives us the experience you really need to take that next step."

The bid wasn't the only thing causing Miech to smile as Stevens Point was chosen to host second-round regional action this weekend where the winner goes on to play in the NCAA Division III Final Four.

"It's going to be exciting to have this kind of quality tournament," she said. "It's nice to be able to have the opportunity to host, and it will be great to have lots of fans at our games."

The Pointers (16-2-2) had little trouble against the Yellowjackets (0-14) in the opening round, pounding them 9-0, but had to go into overtime before turning away the pesky Eagles (13-5), 2-1, despite outshooting them 40-6.

"The La Crosse game was very tough, and I knew it would be going in," Miech said. "We played well, but they have a phenomenal goalkeeper, and we just couldn't get the ball in."

Stevens Point didn't have as much trouble against Eau Claire, who they battled to a 1-1 tie earlier in the season, whipping them 3-0 in the title game.

This was the third straight year the Pointers and Blugolds tangled in the championship game with Stevens Point winning 3-0 in 1992 and 1-0 last year.

"We played out of our minds," Miech said. "To play at Eau Claire where they have the home-field advantage, it was just a great win."

The Pointers were faced with adversity early on, however, as junior Becky Brem was forced to leave the game with a sprained ankle while junior teammate Erica Corbin suffered a concussion.

Despite those setbacks, Stevens Point managed to get past the always dangerous Blugolds (14-6-2) thanks in large part to a total team contribution.

"It was a physical game," said Miech, "but everybody was outstanding. Every member contributed, and it was just a great team effort."

The 9th ranked Pointers look to extend their storybook season on Saturday, hosting 8th ranked Wilmington College. The winner of that game will play for the regional crown on Sunday. Game times on Saturday and Sunday have yet to be determined.

Netters finish third in conference tournament Sweo takes number 2 title

Although the UWSP women's tennis team didn't win the overall WWIAC tournament, they still had some reason to be proud.

Stevens Point's Danyel Sweo won the number 2 singles championship, stopping Eau Claire's Kara Kester, 5-7, 7-5, 6-3 in a match that lasted 3 hours and 25 minutes.

This was the third singles championship for Sweo who also won at number 6 in 1991 and at number 4 in 1992.

"Danyel had an outstanding tournament," said head coach Nancy Page. "The championship match was a survival of the fittest sort of match. Both players put out maximum effort."

As a team, the Pointers placed third overall with 26 points, losing to champion Eau Claire (54) and runner-up Whitewater (46). UW-Oshkosh (23), UW-La Crosse (16), UW-River Falls (12), and UW-Stout (11) rounded out the tournament scoring.

Other finishers for the Pointers included Heather Stenmark, who placed fourth at number 1, Laura Petzold, who was third at number 3, Amy Gibbs, who also was third at number 4, and Carmel Thorson, who placed fourth at number 6.

"Our team goal in singles was to have every player win her opening round match," said Page. "Five of our six players did just that."

While singles play was strong for the Pointers, the doubles play was not as the Pointers saw no team finish above fourth place.

"Doubles was a disappointment," Page said. "We won only one opening round match."

Although the Pointers will lose Sweo and Gibbs, Page expects her young team to be even stronger next season.

"We will miss our two seniors," she said, "but I look forward to having a strong and experienced team next season."

Harriers finish high at conference meets Johnson takes first for men; Zak second for women

By Joe Trawitzki
CONTRIBUTOR

Both the men's and women's cross country teams ran extremely well at the WSUC/WWIAC meets last weekend in Menomonie, Wis.

The men finished a solid third behind champion UW-La Crosse and runner-up UW-Oshkosh while the women placed second overall, losing only to UW-Oshkosh, who is ranked third in the nation.

Stevens Point's very own Jeremie Johnson took individual honors for the men, winning the race with a time of 25:35.6. This marks the second consecutive year Johnson has been conference champion.

Also running strong for the men, who are now ranked 10th in the nation, were Josh Metcalf, who placed 18th with a time of 26:18.3, Carlin Shotts, who was 22nd with a time of 26:32.9, Chris Krolick, who crossed the line 29th, with a time of 26:44.3, and Brian Thill, who finished 35th with a time of 26:54.7.

On the women's side, head coach Len Hill was very pleased with the performance of his 15th ranked squad.

"This was a great team effort," he said. "We knew that after Oshkosh, it would be a close race. We knew what we needed from each person and got it plus more."

Wendi Zak led the way individually for the Pointers and was in front for part of the race, but tired and wound up with a second place finish. Zak's time was 18:44.1.

While Hill was happy with Zak's performance, he felt he could use the race as a learning experience to help his young runner cope with fatigue.

"Wendi did a great job for us," Hill said. "I think that we learned something from this that we can use in the future to help her in a situation like this."

Amanda Livingston also placed in the top 10 for the Pointers, finishing sixth overall with a time of 19:05.6.

"Amanda is a real tough competitor, and I knew that she would make the top 10," Hill said. "There was a good gap between her and the pack behind her for most of the race. They did close on her, but they couldn't catch her."

Heather Ironside (19th), Tami Moyer (37th), and Toni Milbourn (38th) finished out the scoring for the Pointers with respective times of 19:40.7, 20:12.5, and 20:14.3.

"Heather had struggled some this season but was able to put it all together and gave us a real solid finish in the middle of our scoring," Hill said. "Tami and Toni did an excellent job in finishing out our scoring for us. We knew that Eau Claire and La Crosse were a little stronger in these positions and we needed to keep as close as we could to keep the score in our favor."

Both squads get a much needed week off before traveling to Rock Island, Ill. to compete in the NCAA Division III Regionals beginning November 12.

Pointers get "Angry" in 38-0 pounding over Titans

By Joe Trawitzki
CONTRIBUTOR

The UWSP football team extended its winning streak to four games, manhandling the UW-Oshkosh Titans, 38-0, last Saturday at Goerke Field.

Stevens Point's offense was unstoppable, producing 435 total yards including a season-high 311 yards rushing. The ground attack was led by running backs Todd Schoenherr, accounting for 98 yards, and Stan Strama, who chipped in with 87 yards.

"We ran the ball more this game because coming into the game, we (the coaching staff) felt Oshkosh had a weakness stopping the off tackle run," said head coach John Miech. "Oshkosh couldn't stop the run all day. Our tackles did a great job."

While the offense was running at will, the Pointer defense shut down the Titan offense, allowing 184 total yards with just 12 of those coming on the ground. The defense also forced seven turnovers including five interceptions.

"Our defense played exactly the way we hoped they would," Miech said. "We knew if we could get to their young quarterback, he would get confused. We constantly sent one or two linebackers to keep Oshkosh off track, and the result were the turnovers which led to us controlling the game."

Although the Pointers (5-3 overall, 3-2 in the WSUC) finished the game with complete control over the Titans (2-6, 1-5), the game did not start the way they had hoped as Stevens Point quarterback Tom Fitzgerald threw

After this slow start, the Pointers regrouped and drove 77 yards for a touchdown to go up 7-0. The score came on a 7-yard run by running back Nate Harms.

The Titans tried to come back after allowing the touchdown, moving the ball into Pointer territory once again.

However, the defense stopped the Titans once again, forcing yet another turnover when defensive back Randy Simpson intercepted a pass and returned it 69 yards.

The interception return led to a Todd Passini 40-yard field goal, giving the Pointers a 10-0 lead at the end of the first quarter.

"It really helped when Randy Simpson intercepted the pass and returned it 69 yards," Miech said. "That was the turning point that allowed us to pull away. Oshkosh had been moving the ball and playing right with us, but after the interception, everyone came back together to break the game wide open."

The scoring continued in the second quarter with Schoenherr and Strama each adding a touchdown on 11- and 1-yard runs, respectively, stretching the Pointer lead to 24-0 at the half.

In the third quarter, wide receiver Tim Ott recovered a Strama fumble and ran 48 yards for the touchdown, and in the fourth quarter, running back Jody Damitz finished the scoring with a 3-yard run.

The Pointers attempt to continue their winning streak this Saturday when they travel to River Falls to take on the Falcons. Kick off is at 1 p.m.

an interception on the first play of the game.

As a result, the Titans were deep in Pointer territory about to score before the "Angry Dog" defense forced a turnover.

Men's soccer club earns a trip to NCCSA tourney Funding main concern for Point tournament last weekend in Minneapolis.

Stevens Point opened the tournament with a 0-0 tie against North Dakota University before pounding Augustana 6-1 in their second game.

The good times didn't last, however, as Point was then beaten by number 1 seeded Mankato State, 3-0, but rebounded against UW-Eau Claire, 2-0, in their final game.

"We played outstanding," said player/co-coach Joby Polanski. "I'm extremely proud."

While the offense was a missing unit against North Dakota, it more than made up for the lost power against Augustana, scoring six times.

Ahmed Tauzani led the way for Point with two goals while teammates Dan Rave, Polanski, Craig Zipper, and Toru Susuki each added a goal apiece.

Polanski said the key to the game was the overall effort of each and every member on the team.

"We had tremendous effort from the players," he said. "We rival UW-Eau Claire, netting a pair of goals, to lift Point past the Blugolds.

"Everything fell into place in our final game against Eau Claire," Polanski said. "I thought we played really well.

Scoring the winning goals against Eau Claire were Polanski and Shane Bengford.

Point will now travel to Phoenix in a couple of weeks to compete in the NCCSA tournament. However, money problems might force Stevens Point to skip the entire event.

"What we would like to do, and I'll be honest with you, is just get there," said Polanski. "We need to get there first, and unfortunately, we have to look at it that way."

If Point does manage to get to Phoenix, Polanski expects some tough competition and hopes to come back home with a couple of wins.

"We would like to win one or two matches and move on to the next round," he said. "We're going to be playing against some tough teams that have great financial support."

Mistakes prove costly for Pointer spikers Stephens and Heiden named to All-Tourney team

By Brett Christopherson
SPORTS EDITOR

They're almost there.

While the UWSP women's volleyball team has seen steady improvement since the beginning of the season, they just can't seem to put it all together, finishing fourth overall at last weekend's UW-River Falls Trick or Treat Volleyball Tournament in River Falls.

Although costly mistakes seemed to be the Pointers' own worst enemy, head coach Julie Johnson was still encouraged with the performance of her squad.

"I was very pleased," the first-year coach said. "I thought we played well, but we made some mistakes at crucial points."

Stevens Point (19-18 overall, 1-7 in the WWIAC) started the tournament strong, stopping Hamline University, 15-10, 15-7, 15-12, before pounding the UW-River Falls junior varsity team, 15-8, 15-10, and 15-5.

"We didn't screw around," Johnson said of the match against the Falcon's second team. "We did what we had to do and beat them."

Unfortunately, the good times didn't last as the Pointers were swept by the Falcon varsity team, 16-14, 15-13, 15-6 as well as by UW-Stout, 15-6, 16-14, and 15-13, in the third place game.

Despite losing to the Falcons and the Blue Devils, Johnson remained optimistic about the play of her team.

"We played them close," she said. "Again, I thought we proved we can play with any of these teams."

Heidi Stephens and Jolien Heiden led the way for Stevens Point and both were named to the All-Tourney team.

Stevens Point resumes action on Friday, traveling to Oshkosh to compete in the WWIAC championships. The Pointers will play UW-Platteville in their opening round game.

Comics aren't always nice

An editorial
By Andy Berkvam
COMICS EDITOR

For those of you that have not yet realized it, the contents of the comics pages are supposed to be humorous. They are not necessarily factual news nor the opinions of this paper.

The comics pages are meant to provoke. They are supposed to make you think about things in a way that you might ordinarily not by offering someone else's point of view.

In last week's horoscope one of the predictions was that Capricorns would mistake the participants at a Take Back The Night rally for witches and burn them at the stake.

The horoscope also predicted that people would poison children with LSD-laced Halloween candy, dress as Jesus, shove quarters up their nose, go quite insane and give themselves body and soul to a man dressed as Pan. It should be obvious to most people that the predictions in the horoscope were not meant to be factual.

When I read the horoscope, I didn't think that it was a recommendation to go out and burn rape victims. I thought that it was a description of a tragic case of misunderstanding, involving two groups of women that gather outside at night.

Assuming witches are evil creatures that deserve to be burned at the stake suggests a lack of awareness about witches. People should be careful about being misinformed themselves before they accuse others of the same shortcoming. I recommend all those who are upset about the comparison should look at last week's Dave Davis. It recommends the book The Truth About Witchcraft Today by Scott Cunningham to those who want to learn more about witchcraft. Being a witch does not mean being an evil person that should be burned at the stake. I think the witches that I know would strongly disagree with this viewpoint.

If people talk about what we print in The Pointer, that's great. It helps bring up issues and lets people air their views on those issues. The suggestion that something should not be printed just because the ideas in it might offend someone worries me. A paper that prints only things that offend no one becomes less of a paper and more of a newsletter. I think that The Pointer is already too much of a newsletter.

The comics pages are an open forum. We have a space for local submissions. Anyone is welcome to submit humor that expresses their viewpoint. I would like to print them all, even if they deal with unpopular subjects like murder, rape, assault, etc.

The readers of this paper are college students: people who are supposed to be highly educated and capable of forming their own opinions about the issues that they face in the world. Some people seem to think that by offering only one side of an issue, everyone will take that side. That is a dangerous path. I would prefer to see all sides of a issue offered so that people can make up their own mind.

To not print the offending horoscope would have been to restrict the horoscopes based on the ideas that they contained: in other words, censorship. Instead, I printed the offending horoscopes and let people make up their own minds about the ideas that were brought up.

The Pointer still wants humor

We are still looking for your humorous ideas to fill the comics page. Right now we are printing varied humor selections. But in the spring there will be more room and we want to start to find things to fill it with now. So if you have always dreamed of having your own weekly humor piece in The Pointer, now is the time to audition.

Of course we are still accepting one-time pieces too if you just have that one bit that you've always wanted to see in print.

If you have a humorous drawing, cartoon, photograph, story or other idea then we would like to hear from you.

Call The Pointer at 346-2249 or stop by our offices at 104 CAC and show us your stuff.
