Campus celebrities ring in kettle funds

By Cindy Wiedmeyer

Churches, concerts, and malls use the superb sound of bells to create a Christmas atmosphere. But more useful is the happy, bundled-up individual ringing the volunteer bell at the entrance of nearly every shopping mall and grocery store. The bells of Christmas not only encourage listening, but giving. The Salvation Army along with University Centers, Campus Activities/Student Involvement Office, and Association for Community Tasks created the University's first Kettle Campaign.

The three day event featured 14 faculty celebrities ringing the volunteer bell at the University Center entrance. The Kettle Campaign was organized by graduate student Dora Tokgo and chaired by Olympic Silver Medalist Dennis Hall.

The volunteers' enthusiasm wasn't sparked by the cold weather conditions. Chancellor Thomas George stated, "I volunteered my time because I strongly support the Salvation Army and the student body. Although my finger tips got cold, I had a lot of fun. It gave me a chance to chat with a lot of people."

The push to get recognized faculty to volunteer gave Joan North, Dean of CPS, more reason to ring the bell. "It's important that people in positions others look up to give their time.

"If everyone helped a little bit, we could solve a lot of problems," she said.

Credit cards sweep in financial dangers

By Kris Wagner

With a simple, non-chalant sweep of a plastic card a student's wish for various items comes true, but along with the dream could come a long slide into the hole of debt. Many major credit card companies attempt to play college students into the world of plastic money by lowering their financial criteria.

Throughout the school year credit card booths pop up offering free merchandise by simply filling out an application. Little do some students realize along with the credit card comes an annual percentage rate ranging from 14 to 21 percent. If card charges don't get paid off by the end of the month high interest rates kick in, sucking students into a financial hole.

A UW-Stevens Point student found it easy to get into the hole of debt. "I have about $3,000 in credit card debt," said Wade Kohlman. "I think a lot of times they (students) don't realize the interest rates...especially freshman."

In the 1991 August edition of American Demographic Gall Wasserman, a spokeswoman for the American Express Student Program said, "We don't expect students to meet the same financial criteria as other card members."

Two weeks ago, Shabazz ruled that certain allocated segregated fees violated students' First Amendment rights. Last April, three UW-Madison students filed a suit against the Board of Regents pleading that the university's mandatory student fee requirement funded "private ideological and political organizations."

The fundamental Christian students claimed that organizations funded by student segregated fees such as Campus Women's Center, UW Greens, and Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Campus Center violated their constitutional rights. These rights include: freedom of expression, freedom of religion and freedom of association. UW-System Legal service estimates the appeal process to take about 12 months.

Board fights back

The future of student shared governance created intense waves of concern and echoes of conversation across all University of Wisconsin's campuses last week.

The final decision fell into the hands of the Board of Regents as they appealed Federal Judge John Shabazz's decision in the Southworth v. UW-Board of Regents case.

A total of 270 letters were written throughout the UW-System encouraging the Board to appeal the case. It was appealed late Friday morning.

"I couldn't be happier about the decision," said UW-SP's SGA Vice President Shelly Haag about the appeal.
CAP Services gear up for another blustery winter with the homes of over 50 low income families in Portage County through the Weatherization Assistance Program (WAP). The WAP, established in 1974 as a joint assistance and job training program, receives financing mainly through federal funds. The Department of Local Affairs and Development (DLAD) manages the program and trains workers. CAP Services may need building maintenance. The DLAD determines the allocation of funds by calculating need per county. Factors in the calculation include the number of low income occupants and the severity and duration of winters. In order to be eligible for assistance, the total income of a household must not exceed 125% of the poverty line; that is, a single person may earn $11,610 per year or a family of four, $23,400 per year.

If an applicant qualifies for aid, the weatherization project may take 6-8 months before completion. For those who do not qualify, a few basic winterizing activities can result in a warm and inviting place to live. Sealing around doors and windows practically eliminates chilly drafts; while caulking cracks and gaps in the foundation and siding will increase the insulation value of the home. Maintenance on the furnace will not only decrease heating costs but will also reduce the risk of carbon monoxide poisoning. The small investment in time and money required to perform these simple tasks shrinks in importance when compared to the savings reflected on utility bills. Time and money spent on these winterizing activities can result in a warm and wasteless haven for a family to endure one of Wisconsin's harsh winters.

The UW-Stevens Point will have two mid-year commencement ceremonies, at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 15, at Quandt Fieldhouse. UW-SP Provost and Vice Chancellor H. Howard Thoyre, recently named interim Chancellor of the UW Center System, will speak at both events. The awarding of associate degrees and bachelor degrees in the Colleges of Letters and Science will take place at 10 a.m., and at 2 p.m. Undergraduate degrees in the Colleges of Natural Resources, Professional Studies, Fine Arts and Communication, along with all graduate degrees, will be awarded.

At the two ceremonies, approximately 575 bachelor degrees, 70 master degrees and six associate degrees will be presented. The recipients of these degrees will be announced in Press-Gazette. The students earn their walking papers.

The Salvation Army affects the lives of millions of Americans each year. Helen Godfrey, Assistant Chancellor of Student Development, explains that, "I am impressed by the way the Salvation Army has helped others in the past. This campaign gives the university a chance to give back to the community who has helped us also." The proceeds go to the Hope Center of Stevens Point and other causes for the holidays and the entire year. The Hope Center provides shelter and three meals a day to Hope residents and the needy of the community. The Salvation Army also gives the gift of food and toys to approximately 75 families for Christmas. Two area nursing homes also benefit from gift bags the Salvation Army provides during the holiday season.

The Kettle Campaign created an astounding total of $279.52 the first two days. Lt. Bryan Crampton and wife Nancy, Directors of the Salvation Army, explain that, "The money collected at the university will go a long way." The efforts of this campus community not only allows others to enjoy this holiday season, but enjoy every day of the year. Salvation Army wants everyone to remember, "Need Knows No Season."

Title IX improves sports equality

By Mike Kemmeter
Sports Editor

With the 25th anniversary of Title IX approaching, UW-Stevens Point has shown an excellent record of improving the opportunities for women athletes.

Title IX, passed in 1972, ensures the equality of men's and women's athletes in all federally funded institutions. There are three areas of Title IX, and one of them must be met by every institution.

The first area, proportionality, requires that the undergraduate enrollment gender percentage mirror the gender percentage in athletics. For example, if 52% of undergraduate students are women, then 52% of athletes should be women.

At UW-SP during the 1995-96 school year, 344 men appeared on the list.

Let's Dispel a few Myths about Studying Overseas

Number seven first! Study abroad seems more applicable to certain majors, Political Science, History, Art, International Studies, Foreign Languages, etc., but the truth is that ever major and minor benefits! It builds a better resume, making you more attractive to future employers.

Remember, Planning ahead gives you a better chance of being sure that all the classes you take overseas, on languages or in other subjects, fit in your schedule, but it's never too late to do yourself a favor by adding international experiences to your resume. Participants generally return to the USA much better students than when they left. Remember: This is an investment in your future. No less than getting a college education.

As to number six: International Programs prides itself on serving as many UWSP students as possible. You must be in good standing, 2.25 GPA or above to apply for the English Language based programs and 2.5 for France, Germany and Spain, but we look at more than GPAs when we accept students. Motivation, maturity and resourcefulness is equally important.

Again, all UWSP's Semesters Abroad are inclusive "package" programs with room, board, International airfare, Wisconsin Resident tuition, lots of travel and more. You are not required to transfer schools, your financial aid remains intact. The application can be completed in a week and the help you get your passport and arrange your airfare. Really, it's much easier to be on your way to exciting destinations than most people think.

Next we'll tackle Myths 8 and 9. In the meantime why don't you stop by our International Programs Office in 108 Collins or check out our web site to find out how you can be studying overseas in the very near future.

Study Abroad is not for me because....

1. It is too expensive.
2. There's way too much paper work.
3. I can't afford to take a semester "off."
4. The credits won't count.
5. I don't speak a foreign language so I won't qualify.
6. I have good grades but I'm not "Fullbright" material...
7. It doesn't enhance my major!
8. It won't help me get a job!
9. I can get the same experience here at UWSP!
10. My boyfriend or girl friend won't like it!

Roommate’s departures sparks memories of good times

By Joe Trawitzki

Contributor

After all the pieces submitted to this paper over the last few years, it is finally time to move on to bigger and better things.

Through my time at this university, I have learned many things and met many people. I am thankful for every experience, many of which I cannot name specifically due to journalistic ethics.

In achieving my goal to graduate in only 3 1/2 years, I have learned numberless lessons about success for graduation—D stands for diploma.

Before I leave this fine newspaper, I would like to provide some advice.

First of all, don’t be afraid to take some time away from class. Class is important, but so is learning on your own. Taking an occasional day off teaches one the essential aspects of the class. The key to getting away with this theory is knowing when attention is required. Also the ability to “cram” the night before a test is a must.

Second, and most important, try everything at least once. Well almost everything. Through my time here I became involved with many different organizations on and off the campus. This social experience is where I have learned the most about myself and the real world.

Finally remember the most important thing about success for graduation—D stands for diploma.

If you happened to read an editorial on drinking and letting loose, written earlier in the year by Joe, you’ll realize that the weekends and many times weeks days are an important part of Joe’s character and an integral ingredient of his definition of college living.

I can say that if I and many others have benefited through the weekend adventures with Joe and although there are those who would call an occasional bender unhealthy, you only go to college once.

A great person who will be missed by so many, Joe Trawitzki is the ultimate representation of what a college student should be.

So to a co-worker, roommate and most of all friend, congratulations and bottoms up to your future success.

Trawitzki gives advice on way out

If it had not have been for Joe, I more than likely would not be sitting at my desk, typing this, and perhaps wouldn’t even have a desk to call my own in The Pointer office.

It was Joe who got me a job writing sports early in my college career, and who knows if I would have stayed with journalism if he hadn’t. Although I’m sure many would not have had a problem if I hadn’t, including the Residence Hall Association and Jody Belzer.

Joe has also been a faithful writer for the sports and editorial sections. I can say that, even though I’m currently waiting for his assignment this week, because it’s not one name in The Pointer staff box which has worked for this paper longer than he has.

Mosaic defines biotic integration

By Michelle Ristau

Assistant Features Editor

The most distinct part of our campus goes unnoticed everyday. As we walk through the Sundial, we simply glance at the mosaic that defines our campus and community. Is it any wonder why our campus is thought of as a natural resource school, when the most defining aspect of our individuality is expressed through nature images on the wall?

Look at the images represented. The theme of the mosaic is that man is an integral part of the natural world. There is an image of a sunflower encompassing the form of man. We also see a human connected with an image of a deer.

We are just as much a part of our biotic community as we are a part of the man-made world that surrounds us. Even the image of Old Main is overlapped with several images of nature, i.e., the leaf, a bird and a snowflake.

Possibly that the first idea the creators want us to perceive is that nature, as a whole, encompasses our lives. The image of Old Main signifies the importance that the history of our campus and community plays in relation to our view of the environment. For example, the building is seen through extensive map lines.

The images on the mosaic portray the natural environment and the social environment that we live in. Sadly, cultural norms conflict with the environmental values depicted on the wall. The images remind us that the ethics we hold now allow us to act in ways that harm the environment.

We should change our ethics. We are intertwined with our biotic community, whether we like it or not. Unless we change our point of view we may lose not only our sense of integration, but the biotic community itself.

It was a brisk, fall evening. Beautiful colors surrounded the visibly wind-whipped lake as my brother-in-law fishing buddy, John, and I continued our search for that all elusive "trophy" musky.

We had been fishing for two days now, and as our weekend drew near to an end, the muscles in our hands, shoulders and back approached their fatigue limits.

All day yesterday we had heaved monster crank baits out into the depths of three lakes that experts had labeled as containing "excellent habitat for large fish."

Our large sucker minnows - often mounted as trophy fish by neighboring state rookies, darted seductively in and out of cabbage beds, while the quick release bobbers bounced along the surface of the choppy water.

Our four person, two boat mercenary team had not been without luck up to this point in our mission. So far we had caught a total of six muskies and one snake, ranging from 25 to 37 inches in length. But so far, nothing in the coveted 40 inch or greater class.

I was awakened from my daydreaming by my brother-in-law's question, "You know what I could really go for right now?" I mumbled in response, "No ... What?"

"Exhale," he exclaimed, "a vicious hitch," meaning he wished one of our suckers would be attacked by a demon from the depths.

The next 30 seconds were a blur for me because the instant he finished his rallying cry my sucker pole, which had been laying idly on the bottom of his boat, jumped up off the carpet and headed toward the rear of the boat.

I deftly leapt in the general direction my pole was traveling and just as it flew out past the outboard motor I impaled the palm of my left hand (you can still see the scar from the line release button) on my Ambassador 6000 reel.

I found myself hanging over the end of the boat (the stern for you avid fisher persons) holding onto the 65 horsepower Suzuki with my right hand and the musky pole in my left.

The five inch quick release bobber had dropped out of sight and line was spinning off my reel as it attached to a semi trailer on Highway 51. John had quickly pulled in my crank bait, retrieved his sucker into the live well and started the motor by the time I had recovered.

Over 150 yards of 40 pound Cortland line had already gone into the lake and my reel was getting close to empty, so John slid the boat in gear and we started slowly following whatever was on the end.

To our relief, we found ourselves making a beeline for the center of the lake where there was no weed structure, only 60 feet of pristine water.

As all veteran Muscovites know, the next 25 minutes of waiting for the fish to ingest the sucker minnow and turn it upside down seemed an eternity.

As we neared the middle of our wait time, the fluorescent orange bobber suddenly appeared about 100 yards off the side of the boat.

We simultaneously groaned in disappointment because this usually means that by some miraculous Houdini act, your musky has stolen the sucker off its harness hook and is laughing like Santa on his way home with a full belly.

To our amazement, the bobber started moving again, this time toward the rocky shore. After five more minutes of playing cat and mouse John said, "Let's pull in the slack and bring that puppy up for some air!"

I carefully reeled in the slack line until I felt the presence of resistance on the other end, leaned forward with the tip of my pole and swiftly yanked back, setting the hook.

Normally at this moment the fish simply fights a little and then comes in, but not this time. In fact, rather than pulling line in I could feel line cascading off my reel again.

I tightened the drag another few clicks to no avail and kept the line taught as so not to let the fish do the "flop in the air hook release dance."

During the next fifteen minutes we shadowed the fish back to the middle of the lake, over to the

Imagine yourself, the typical UW-Stevens Point undergrad, standing center stage in front of an audience made up of professionals from the very field you hope one day to join.

Thankfully, your quivering knees are hidden behind a podium and the microphones aren't able to throw the thunder of your pounding heart to the ocean of expectant faces before you.

Somehow you find your voice and the material you prepared flowing freely from your mouth.

When it's all over, you leave the stage with a new-found confidence and the professional respect of potential employers.

To most of us, this sounds unrealistic, if not impossible, at this point in our lives. However, one student proved that it can be done.

Jenny Baseman, a junior majoring in water chemistry, represented UW-SP's branch of the American Water Resource Association (AWRA) at their national conference in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida.

Her presentation titled, "Riparian Flow of Agricultural Chemicals to the Little Plover River" was judged as the second best among nine competitors.

It discussed research she participated in that discovered nitrates in the Plover River.

Their presence can be detrimental to health and may lead to blue baby syndrome.

Baseman has served as a senator in the Student Government Association for the past two years and is also the vice-president of her AWRA chapter.

Typically, very few undergrads present such significant research in front of other professors and professionals.

However, she stresses that the rewards are well worth it and anyone can easily take a similar route with a little initiative.

She encourages other students to "Get involved as soon as you can. Don't underestimate yourself because you think you don't know enough or haven't had enough classes yet. The knowledge and experience you will gain

Success rate down for turkey hunt

Hunters harvested 6,261 wild turkeys during the 1996 fall turkey hunting season in Wisconsin, according to final registration tags submitted to the Department of Natural Resources.

"The harvest was up slightly from the fall 1995 season, when hunters took 6,241 wild turkeys, but overall hunter success was down about 20 percent from 1995," said Keith Warnke, assistant turkey ecologist for the DNR.

"The cold, late spring last year resulted in reduced turkey reproductive success in many areas of the state," said Warnke. A wet spring the year before reduced breeding success that year.

"The decline in hunter success was likely due to the fact that wild turkeys have gone through two consecutive years of poor breeding conditions."

Since this is the last issue of the semester, I thought I'd cover a number of different subjects, or more or less just ramble until I run out of space.

Here goes...

With the advent of cold air into the area, we have what is called winter. With winter comes snow and with snow we can make, say it with me now - snowballs.

Since this is the last issue of the semester, I thought I'd cover a number of different subjects, or more or less just ramble until I run out of space.

Of course, I doubt that I'll ever work in an office building with cubicles (and after going the entire semester without saying the word cubicle, I've used it five times in the last 15 seconds).

Another topic I would like to discuss is that of logistics - the logistics of delivering presents to every child on Earth in one night. Unfortunately for us, Santa doesn't exist, and if I just shatter your dreams, get over it.

But let's assume, for argument's sake, that Santa does exist, and there are flying reindeer - that's pretty believable so far. Throw in the fact that he has to deliver presents to all children - and sometimes this gets lost in the shuffle, but at all adults as well - in the span of one night is bordering on insanity, even for a fairy tale.

In favor of Santa, he doesn't have to deliver presents to every child in the world because not everyone celebrates our holidays. So let's just say he delivers only to the United States. All right, and Canada too. That's still over 300 million people who have to get their presents, in one night.

I'm sorry, but I'm forced to say no way. It's just not possible. Even with the newest and fastest breed of reindeer it wouldn't happen.

He probably wouldn't even make it out of New York City, assuming that's where he started. In all likelihood, he would get mugged somewhere in Manhattan, his reindeer would get captured and sold on the black market and his bag of presents would end up at the bottom of the Hudson River.

I know it's a grim picture, but if he had started somewhere in the Midwest...does anyone else think I've thought too much about this? It doesn't really matter because I have now run out of space.

New category rules for walleye fishing

The new categories of rules for walleye fishing: Minimum-length limits: Options include a 15-inch minimum length with a daily bag limit of five (base regulation for most waters); 18-inch size limit is appropriate on waters with low densities; 18-inch length with a daily bag limit of three.

Slot lengths: The rule creates a 14 to 18-inch protected slot with a bag limit of five, of which only one walleye may be larger than 18 inches. This category will be in effect on 38 waters.

One over length limits: The "one over" option has no minimum length. The daily bag limit will be five fish, of which only one may be longer than 14 inches. This rule will be in place on 94 waters.

No minimum length: This rule is for waters with low harvest rates on the population where numbers are high. No minimum length limit is also appropriate for waters where older and slower growing fish have higher concentrations of mercury.

The changes will be included in the 1997-1998 "Wisconsin Guide to Hook and Line Fishing Regulations," which will be available early next year.

Waters with regulations other than the 15-inch minimum length limit will be listed by county in the special regulations section. The new rules will also be posted at boat landings on affected waters.

Because then you could sneak in a whole pile of 18-inch walleyes and while sitting in your cubicle, launch these missiles of death in all directions. Remember to hit your own cubicle with one so you can run out afterwards and yell "Who did that?"

Now, in addition to teaching classes, Dr. Jansky is in charge of scheduling, peer advising, helping students graduate, hiring and enrollment management. "Basically, I'm problem solving for faculty and students. It keeps me very busy," she stated.

When she's not being kept busy by her job, she is busy with her family, fishing, sailing and cross country skiing.

As the chair, Dr. Jansky sees some changes in the biology department in the near future. There will be a "tremendous turnover" of personnel as five more people are retiring by the year 2000.

"We hope to continue the tradition of being a strong organizational department which ties in with the CNR, but I see a bend toward the cellular and molecular biology," Dr. Jansky stated.

She explained this is because many of the graduate students are now trained in these areas and will have that knowledge to offer the students at UW-SP.

"The students in the last four to five years have improved and continue to grow in student quality. We hope to maintain that."

90 FM takes an alternative route to fund raising
Campus radio station to hold on-air auction and other events this weekend

By Michelle Ristau
ASSISTANT FEATURES EDITOR

90 FM WWSP, UW-Stevens Point's very own radio station, will be holding their first Radiothon fund-raiser on December 13, 14 and 15. The station will remain on air for 24 hours throughout Radiothon.

The radio station is holding the fund-raiser to support their commitment to bring alternative programming to Central Wisconsin. They also aspire to raise public awareness on what 90 FM gives to the community.

In addition to their regular programming, 90 FM delivers specialty music shows, news, public affairs shows, and sports to avid listeners.

In order to suit a variety of listener's tastes, the station provides special events such as Jazzfest, the World's Largest Trivia Contest, and now Radiothon.

Through the fund raiser's support, 90 FM looks to continue such programming.

Radiothon will start with a special edition of the show Club Wisconsin. This edition will feature interviews with bands like Fuzzdolly and Food Warning.

Afterwards, the bands will give a concert in the University Center Encore. The cost of the concert is $5.00.

The highlight of Radiothon is on Saturday. An on-air auction will run from 9:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. The auction will resume on Sunday again at 9:00 a.m. and will conclude at 9:00 p.m.

"I am impressed with the community support we have received when asking for donations," said Amy Heart, Program Director.

90 FM, never sold before, Packet football and computer printer will be on the auction block.

Also on Saturday, 90 FM will feature a Hip Hop House Show in the University Center. The show starts at 7:00 p.m., and the cost is $3.00.

Radiothon adds to the creative programming that 90 FM provides for the campus and community. With people's support, the station can ensure such diverse programs in the future.

The fund-raiser begins at 9:00 p.m. and continues until Sunday at 2:00 a.m.

The motion of dance

UW-Stevens Point students will take part in some of the 14 dances choreographed and performed by students in the annual production of "After Images" at the Jenkins Theatre.

Alison Gillis choreographed a modern dance entitled "Grace" and "Light the Furnace," a comedy piece.

In addition to university students, several students from Stevens Point area schools will dance in the production.

Selections to be performed will be diverse, ranging from "Euphoric Funk," choreographed by Melanie Rogers. This is a high-energy piece that explores the world's three major cultures.

Finally, "Centuries of a Lost Breath," (choreographed by Jessica Lanius) is a modern dance featuring seven women in corsets, which ends with a nude dancer. Lanius also choreographed a solo dance which she will perform, entitled "Shakespeare's Women." During the dance, Lanius will speak about the women Shakespeare portrays.

Gillis has appeared in previous productions of "After Images" and "Danztago" and the 1992 production of "The Tempest."

The performance will take place at Jenkins Theatre in the Fine Arts Center on Thursday, December 12, and Saturday, December 14, at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are available through the Arts and Athletics Ticket Office in Quandt Gym lobby or by calling (715) 346-4100 or 1-800-893-3378.

Cost of admission is $5 for the general public and $4 for UWSP students.
A special holiday show

Maureen McGovern, one of America’s most popular vocal artists, will perform a special seasonal concert for the entire family at the UW-Stevens Point on Friday, Dec. 13.

McGovern recently appeared in Wausau as part of a cross-country tour with Mercer Ellington and the Duke Ellington Orchestra. The concert begins at 7:30 p.m. in Quandt Fieldhouse. Seating is divided into three sections with various admission prices. Cost of tickets are $15, $18, and $20 for the general public; $12, $15, and $17 for senior citizens, and $7.50, $10 and $12 for students.

Tickets are available at the UW-SP Arts and Athletics Ticket Office in the lobby of Quandt Fieldhouse. For information and to charge tickets, call (715) 346-4100 or (800) 838-3378. The performance is sponsored by the Performing Arts Series and the UW-SP Student Government Association.

Q&A with Chancellor Tom

HAVE YOU BEEN A GOOD CHANCELLOR THIS YEAR? IF SO, WHAT DID YOU ASK SANTA CLAUS TO BRING YOU FOR CHRISTMAS?

I don’t know if I’ve been good, but I did ask Santa for a better state budget this coming year and an even higher degree of student success in all of their programs.

DO YOU BELIEVE THAT REINDEER CAN REALLY FLY?

This question has been asked by many people who have sung Mel Torme’s “Christmas Song,” and if so many singers do not know, I would not dare to suggest an answer.

WHAT ARE YOUR PLANS FOR THIS HOLIDAY SEASON?

I plan to catch up on the stacks of work that are still undone in my office and practice my altered scales and accompanying diminished voicings.

HAVE YOU WATCHED ANY OF THE CHRISTMAS SPECIALS THAT HAVE BEEN ON TELEVISION AND IF SO WHICH ONES? WHICH HOLIDAY SPECIAL IS YOUR FAVORITE ONE?

I have not had much time to watch television when these specials are on, but I was able to catch Mel Torme’s show last week. He is indeed one of the all-time greats, and always has superb instrumental backup (he can also handle the keyboard himself quite well)!

DO YOU THINK THAT THE ELVES THAT WORK FOR SANTA SHOULD BE PART OF A UNION WITH THE HIGH UNEMPLOYMENT RATES OF THE NORTH POLE?

I think the purported high unemployment rates at the North Pole are just a nasty rumor. I am sure Santa treats his elves very well. However, if they decide to unionize, I would ask our own WSEU 584 if they would welcome the elves.

My forearms were starting to cramp and there was a big bruise on my stomach from the end of my pole digging in as I fought to catch a glimpse of what was on the other end.

Suddenly, John yelled "Look at that 'gator!" as the biggest fish I've seen in fresh water came to the surface on the side of our boat.

After several last ditch circles around our boat, she gave up the fight and surrendered to the six foot net John placed around her body.

We had the next five minutes down to near perfection as we quickly untangled her from the net, gently removed the hook and recorded a couple of snapshots for memories.

As I lowered her back into the water, she quickly regained her strength and disappeared into the dark unknown.

John estimated her length at 44 inches and weight somewhere near 28 pounds - the biggest fish I've ever caught... so far.

Hockey splits physical series with Bemidji

By Ryan Lins

A sports analyst once said "we watched a boxing fight and a hockey game broke out." While this does not do justice to the excellent and intense play last weekend, it foreshadows the weekend was.

When long-time rival Bemidji State skated into town last weekend, the UW-Stevens Point hockey team was waiting, sticks in hand.

The play on both Friday and Saturday night was intensely physical and aggressive.

Both teams also combined for over 100 minutes in the penalty box in the two games.

"It's an intense rivalry (with Bemidji), especially when we play at Point," said sophomore Joe Geregich.

"I really didn't think it was that physical on Friday, but it was a lot more physical than Hamline," added Geregich.

Just two weeks later, against another NFC Central opponent, the Minnesota Vikings, Denver needed a miraculous catch to win.

Wide receiver Ed McCaffrey stole the victory after scoring a touchdown with under a minute to go in the game.

McCaffrey's catch comes close to rivaling Franco Harris' "Immaculate Reception," as he grabbed the ball out of the air after two Viking defenders tipped the ball away from each other.

The Favre-led Packers are a legitimate 13-3, with none of their wins coming from a fluke play.

And speaking of Favre-led Packers, how can a team have two candidates for the Most Valuable Player on their team?

The award is supposed to single out the player, not players, who are most valuable to their team.

That's like saying Troy Aikman is the MVP for the Cowboys, but without him, they still have All-Pro's Emmitt Smith, Michael Irvin, and Deion Sanders in the lineup.

If Aikman were to miss a game, the opponent would have to watch for the other three players, as they are just as dangerous.

Davis, the NFL's leading rusher coming into Sunday's game against the Packers, was shut down for 44 yards on 14 carries by Green Bay's "D." Against almost any other defense in the league besides the Packers' great run stopping unit, Davis probably could run wild even without Elway.

And without Davis in the lineup, Elway would still be able to throw the ball up and down the field as he's done in the past without a running game.

But looking at the Packers, they are essentially a one man team on offense, with that man being Favre.

Imagine if he went down an injury, what would the Packers do?

They'd have Jim McMahon running the show, and Edgar Bennett isn't a running back who can win games all by himself.

So out of the three players, Favre is definitely the most valuable to his team, and that's why he should be the NFL MVP once again.

Women's hoops wins WWIAC opener

Otter leads Pointers over Platteville for fifth straight victory

By Charlie Sennbrenner
ASSISTANT OUTDOOR EDITOR

Outstanding defense and solid shooting from the line helped the UW-Stevens Point women's basketball team remain undefeated with a 68-50 WWIAC victory over UW-Platteville.

Saturday's home game was their first conference game of the season and improved Point's record to a sparkling 5-0.

The Pointers roared out to an early 14-2 lead in the first ten minutes of play. But Platteville pulled back and cut the margin down to three points after a Patty Keenan 3-pointer with seven minutes left in the first half.

UW-SP remained poised, however, and headed into the locker room with a comfortable nine-point lead.

Early in the second half, Platteville's Colleen Miehe made the Pointer fans pretty nervous with a jumper that cut the lead to 31-30.

Point reclaimed control of the game with a 25-6 run in the middle of the half in which they held Platteville scoreless over a six minute span.

"It was a great team effort for us and important to come out and win our first conference game of the year," said coach Shirley Egner.

Freshman guard Jessica Ott led the way offensively with great shooting from her guard position. She hit 15 of her game-high 25 points from three point land and shot 70% from the field.

"Jessica hit a lot of threes all alone in transition versus the press, which helped because they pressed us all day," said Egner.

Center Christina Bergman added 12 points for the Pointers.

Terri Crum's six blocked shots were six more than the entire Platteville squad managed all afternoon.

"That's what Terri likes to do for us," commented Egner. "She was fortunate to get that many (blocks), but it's not unusual for her to do that." With a powerful inside game, the Pointers earned a remarkable 29 bonus shots from the line, which was ten more than Platteville.

The 19 extra points they earned were more than enough to cover the 18-point final margin.

The difference offensively was that the Pointers were able to recover their own shots with 15 offensive rebounds versus Platteville's nine.

Coach Egner expects her team to continue its hard-nosed play throughout the rest of the season and fight their way to the top of the WWIAC.

"Our toughest competition will come from Eau Claire, Oshkosh, and Stout who are all still undefeated," said Egner. "The Pointers will try to run their record to 6-0 Friday when they host Ripon College at 7 p.m.

Egner notches 100th win

With the Pointers' 68-50 win Saturday against UW-Platteville, UW-Stevens Point women's basketball coach Shirley Egner achieved a coaching milestone.

Egner, now in her eighth season at the helm, collected her 100th victory at UW-SP as her team won their conference opener.

Egner already is Point's all-time leader in victories, compiling a 100-75 record.

"I am so excited to be at 100 wins," said Egner. "We are still waiting for a few more, but we are feeling good about the season so far. This is the second time Miller became a three time NCAA Champion, losing in the finals 7-5.

After some of the tougher tournaments on any Division III schedule, the Pointer wrestlers displayed the experience they gained against Division I and II opponents.

UW-Stevens Point dominated the Wisconsin Open at UW-Parkside, a tournament comprised of mostly Division III wrestlers.

Point won four weight classes en route to placing eight wrestlers.

"After being banged up and wrestling such tough competition, this tournament gave us assurance that we are heading in the right direction," said UW-SP wrestling coach Marty Loy.

"We are still waiting for a few pieces of the puzzle to fall into place, but this is definitely a step in the right direction," added Loy.

Along the way Perry Miller (177) also successfully defended their titles from last season's tournament.

Jaime Hegland (142) won his first major college open to round out the champions.

Jason Malchow proved he will be a powerhouse again at the 118 pound weight class.

Wrestling at that weight for the first time this season, Malchow narrowly missed the championship, losing in the finals 7-5.

Finishing out the place-winners for the Pointers included Ross Buchinger, who took fourth at 134, and Mike Carlson, who was sixth at 150.

"It was great to see not only the older guys wrestle well again but to see some young faces on the awards podium," said Loy.

The Pointers close out this season's portion of the schedule tonight with a home dual against UW-Platteville. Action will begin at 7:00 p.m.

"Our toughest competition will come from Eau Claire, Oshkosh, and Stout who are all still undefeated."

Two criminals rob a bank and flee to Mexico, where they find themselves entangled in a centuries-old vampire feeding spree. The screenplay for this movie was authored by Quentin Tarantino. Got your attention yet? Yes, Tarantino is in-vogue, but there is a reason for it. His dialogue is crisp, his action is intense, and his characters are well-developed.

Teaming with Tarantino is director Robert Rodriguez. His Fangoria style weakens the second half of the movie, but the first hour is so is classic Tarantino and is reason enough to rent this film.

The cast list includes names like George Clooney (TV's ER), Quentin Tarantino, Harvey Keitel (Pulp Fiction), and Juliette Lewis (Natural Born Killers).

As the college music industry draws to a close in preparation for winter breaks throughout the nation, I thought it would be appropriate to compile a list of some of the better releases from the past few months.

Certainly not the absolute best of all the new music, these artists have talent and are on the brink of really going somewhere.

The Cheese- "Flip Your Lid," has strong rhythm and guitar work and exceptional vocals. A great mix of tunes for someone looking for something new.

Mother Earth- "Scenery and Fish." This second release is simply spectacular! Well written tunes that have real variation and style are mixed into a straight ahead rock, yet off-beat enough to be innovative.

The Urge- "Receiving the Gift of Flavor." One word best describes this selection: energy. These guys hump, stomp, and rock to a unique style all their own.

Foreskin 500- "Antitheses." Are you looking for something different? These guys fit the bill. They're an edgy funk, hip-hop and rock mix of power jams.

Thin Lizard Dawn- "Thin Lizard Dawn." This New York pop-rock has an edge and plenty of attitude. College rock to the bone!

"From a students' perspective, it is too easy," she said. "Credit cards target students who don't have much money to start with."

Many students use plastic money as an alternative when cash funds begin to deplete. "Credit cards aren't really meant for long term loans," said Vice President of Rental Banking Ted Schlafke. "I think this is where people get into trouble."

According to the National Credit Counseling Services 376 million Visas and MasterCards were in circulation last June. It seems that some credit card companies are monopolizing on students who have just stepped into the real world. By using business ploys like fund raiser programs offering up to $5 per application filled out, credit card companies target university organizations who seek a quick way to bring in money. Little do the organizations realize that they are indirectly hurting their fellow students.

Zawlocki ended her interview with one piece of advice for students, "Don't get credit cards! They will ruin your credit rating."
