Thoyre steps into new university system position

After considering the possibility of retiring in the spring, UW-Stevens Point's Vice Chancellor Howard Thoyre accepted a new position in the University of Wisconsin System.

Last week, Thoyre was named interim chancellor of the UW Centers. The position will be effective December 15. The appointment was announced by UW System President Katherine Lyall. Thoyre succeeds Lee Grugel, who died unexpectedly on October 31. The search for a permanent successor to Grugel will begin in December.

"Howard Thoyre knows the state and the UW Centers well," said Lyall, "and will be a strong advocate for strengthening the role of the centers within the UW System. He has proven himself as an able and dynamic leader, and I am grateful for his willingness to accept this challenge."

Thoyre has served UW-Stevens Point for 34 years, and had earlier announced plans to retire at the end of December 1996. He capped his career during 1995-96 by serving as acting chancellor prior to the appointment of Chancellor Thomas George. Previously, Thoyre spent eight years as vice chancellor and provost (1987-95) and six years as dean of the College of Letters and

Koch Refining Company spills, again

Over 2,000 gallons of fuel leaks out of tank

In recent years, a refining company's fuel storage and operations have been compromised several times, leading to environmental ramifications throughout the state. In the last six years alone, three fuel spills have struck areas near Stevens Point.

Last week, Koch Refining Company, based out of Wichita, Kan., spilled an estimated 2,000-3,000 gallons of unleaded gasoline from one of their storage tanks east of Madison in the town of McFarland.

The spill wasn't noticed until a McFarland police officer smelled the gasoline, while driving on Highway 51. After the officer found the source of the smell, Koch personnel were notified of the problem.

The spill closed Highway 51 for more than two hours.

According to Ted Amman, a spill response coordinator for the Department of Natural Resources (DNR), the exact amount of oil lost still is unknown.

"The best we can estimate is between 250-500 barrels," said Pat Thompson, a worker for Koch Refining Company. Koch reported that a barrel has 45 gallons in it.

"There is no such thing," said Amman. "To my knowledge, there are only 55 gallon and 30 gallon barrels."

The location of Koch and other tanker companies has many state residents concerned about unexpected fuel spills. The pipeline stretches across part of Wisconsin, beginning in St. Paul, running to Milwaukee. Locally, the line passes under the Wisconsin River and in the McFarland area, it runs near Lake Waubesa.

Two years ago Koch's pipeline near Plover, south of Stevens Point, leaked about 120,000 gallons because of a faulty O-ring in an underground valve. The company also had two leaks of 8,000 and 42,000 gallons within a time span of 1990 to 1991 in the township of Carson, west of Stevens Point.

Last week Amman said, "someone wasn't watching it (the fuel tank) close enough." Later re-

Just like any professional league, the Wisconsin State University Conference (WSUC) has handed down limits on how many athletes can partake in a sport. Starting this fall, new caps were created for three reasons: gender equity, financial restraints, and competitive equity.

Approved by the UW-System-wide Council of Chancellors last year, the ceilings in the WSUC vary depending on the sport, ranging from 100 in football to 12 in golf.

In the pros, for instance, Major League Baseball has a roster limit of 24 players, the National Football League

"I think people are taking a more preventative stance," Carlson said. "They realize by taking an extra minute to lock up their bike, their investment can be saved."

Carlson and West also recommend bicycle licensing as a preventative measure. West said many students avoid this to save money, but he sees a license as cheap insurance. West said, "If they ever do find your bike and it's not registered, how do they know who to return it to?"

"They lock the front tire and the frame, but leave the rear part of the bike unprotected." He estimates the rear wheel which contains the gears to be easily worth over $100.

According to Knuese, the proper way to use a "U-Lock" is to remove the front tire, and place it next to the rear tire. Then lock both tires and the frame to the bike rack.

Thus far in 1996, the Stevens Point Police Department has reported 141 bikes stolen, 62 of which are valued over $200. Carlson claims bicycle theft on the whole is down in 1996.

Carlson claimed that West and he can account for 200 unlicensed bikes sitting in storage. We want to return the bikes to their owners, but unfortunately we run into dead ends and can't find (the owners)." The unclaimed bikes usually are sold at auctions, said Carlson.

"Most people do not lock their bike the proper way," said Knuese. While there is nothing wrong with using chain locks, Stevens Point Police Sergeant Ron Carlson said, their structure allows a good bolt-cutting device to free the bike in seconds.

"Cycle and Sport Shop claims any quality lock can prevent theft. Point Police Sergeant Ron Carlson used. Bike the proper way," said Knuese. "We want to return the bikes to their owners, but unfortunately we run into dead ends and can't find (the owners)."

Protective Services tries to investigate all suspicious activity around bicycle racks, but West encourages students to report anything strange they might witness.

"If we can identify an area with a lot of problems, we can watch it more closely," West said.

allows 53 players on the active roster, and the National Basketball Association limits their rosters to 12 players.

"The reason it initially came up was a gender equity consideration," said UW-Stevens Point Men's Faculty Athletics Representative Virgil Thiesfeld.

However, before the ceilings were passed by the Council of Chancellors, the Office of Civil Rights (OCR) released a new interpretation of Title IX, improving the opportunities of the under-represented gender by cutting the opportunities of the overrepresented gender was not looked upon favorably.

"So those institutions that had thought this would help them in compliance by bringing the numbers of athletes closer to the required percentages, that really didn't apply anymore," said Thiesfeld.

"Our athletic committee is discussing the issue, and said in light of the new interpretation by OCR, it doesn't make any sense to put the ceilings on.

As for financial considerations for the ceilings, Thiesfeld said "I'm not sure we're saving a lot of money. We already have limitations on travel squads."

The UW-SP committee relayed their disapproval last fiscal year to Acting Chancellor Howard Thorey. As for financial considerations for the ceilings, Thiesfeld said "I'm not sure we're saving a lot of money. We already have limitations on travel squads."

"At this point it is my understanding that the Council of Chancellors is not ready to reconsider because it's just been started; it's in its first semester of implementation," stated Thiesfeld.

"If we keep the ceilings, then I'm sure there's some adjustments that we need to make after we have some experience with it," added Thiesfeld.

One change that could come deals with injury replacement. For example, if a player goes down with a season-ending injury, he could not be replaced.

"The athletic directors talked about the caps at our athletic directors meeting, and the chancellors had talked about them at the Council of Chancellors and there was some discussion about the caps and the numbers," said UW-SP Athletic Director Frank O'Brien.

"We were asked to hold off until the spring and then reintroduce it for discussion there because there is some concern about the numbers and whether they represent what we really want to do," added O'Brien.

As for the male athletes that are being cut from teams, Thiesfeld says, "the thing that's important to me, I think, is that we don't start blaming each other for things that we haven't had control over."

Thanksgiving a time for contemplation

Well, Thanksgiving is right around the corner. For some, that means hunting; for others, it means football, and for others, it means very little. Perhaps one of the most important of holiday shopping, but because this country, and makes me think of things that I have to be thankful for— it affords us. Take advantage of it. Let's enjoy the weekend, but let's also remember why we do go home.

Salvation Army in need of donations

Dear Editor:

These are tough times for a lot of people. The presence of a Salvation Army in town is a relief for a community that cares about such things.

At this time the Salvation Army pantry that serves so many hot meals and fills baskets for needy people is extremely low on many items, especially non perishables such as pastas, rice and vegetables. There has been a heavier than usual drain on the resources of the Army locally. At this moment, there are 23 individuals, including children under the age of 2, at the shelter. Over 300 meals are served in a month to anyone who needs one. Up to 75 food baskets will be provided to families during the holidays. Soon the bells will be ringing at the kettles...the main source for giving.

The Salvation Army is a separate and independent organization. It serves special needs and unconditionally gives to those in need.

Counseling, patience and understanding greet all who enter the shelter. There is an urgent need for food donations at the Hope Center Shelter (next to the YMCA) in Stevens Point. Thank you for caring.

Managers hope for good deer harvest
Zone T hunt could expand if goals are not met

Deer hunters are anxiously looking forward to the 1996 nine-day gun deer season that opens November 23. Their main concern is whether they will get a deer.

For state wildlife managers—who are already looking ahead to the 1997 season—the main concern is whether hunters will take enough deer this year to reduce the population in those parts of the state where deer numbers are too high.

"If hunters don't harvest adequate numbers of deer this fall, we'll be looking at our options for 1997, which may include continuing recommending another Zone T hunt concept, and possibly including more deer management units in the Zone T," explained Bill Myton, deer and bear ecologist for the Department of Natural Resources.

DNR wildlife managers and other members of the Farmland Deer Committee, which includes Conservation Congress delegates, and members of the Wisconsin Bowhunters Association and Wisconsin Muzzleloader Association, will be closely watching antlerless deer harvest levels in several southern farmland deer management units. They will also be evaluating the harvest levels of this fall's archery, gun and muzzleloader deer hunting seasons.

This committee played a major role in developing the 1996 Zone T deer hunting season.

"Most deer management units in southern Wisconsin are on the watch list," said Myton.

If the hunting seasons are not successful at reducing deer numbers, Myton says, the committee may recommend continuing with a Zone T hunt, and including additional deer management units in the special zone.

Units might be included in Zone T for several reasons. There are high deer numbers, and the demand for antlers permits is lower than the number of permits available.

Also there is agricultural crop damage of more than $10,000 for the unit or more than $75 per square mile of deer range.

Other factors, like proximity to a metropolitan area or a state park within another unit included on the Zone T list, might qualify a unit for inclusion in a Zone T hunt.

"The biggest factor is the percentage of deer over set management goals, the number of car-deer accidents, and the ability or inability of hunters to reduce or control deer numbers under the regular season framework," said Myton.

Before making its recommendations, the Farmland Deer Committee will fully evaluate all 1996 hunting season results.

The committee's recommendations would be forwarded to the Natural Resources Board for action, which would also be reviewed by the state legislature.

Anglers should beware of thin ice
By Dave Daniels
DNR PUBLIC INFORMATION OFFICER

By late fall, the open water fishing rods and reels have been stored and the outboard motors and fishing boats have been covered and protected from the winter weather.

As cold days across Wisconsin are forming the first ice on lakes, now is the time that avid anglers naturally begin to turn their thoughts to ice fishing.

For many, sitting over a hole through the ice, on a favorite lake during a sunny afternoon, is as close as one can get to true fishing enjoyment.

Unfortunately, many ice fishermen attempt to rush the season and begin venturing out onto ice that is far too thin to support their weight.

The results can be tragic, says DNR Law Enforcement Safety Specialist Jeff Dauterman in Antigo.

"If help is not received immediately, and the victim pulled from the water, hypothermia and death by drowning is inevitable," said Dauterman.

"T he possibilities of breaking through thin ice and falling into freezing water are tremendous. Often, the result is that the fisherman cannot get out because the unbroken, thin ice cannot support any weight," said Dauterman.

"In cases like these, one should ask yourself- What would happen if you fell through?"

"Walking to class on these days was similar to walking the Ho Chi Minh Trail, except it wasn't Vietnam and it wasn't a tropical rain forest, but it was as close to a death sentence as one can get without actually dying. And then it took half the class to thaw out.

So you'd be sitting there, shortly after arriving and the teacher would ask you something like 'Describe the thermodynamic effects of radiation on the surface of Venus?'"

"You would be memorably dumbfounded, because one, the class was medieval history and two, you couldn't talk because your face was frozen. So you said, 'Ma fate if loven. Ah art auk.'"

"You mean, 'If you don't want to participate in class discussions, why did you bother to come?' You sit there for the entire hour and learn nothing. But what can you do?

Sure you could skip classes, but the weather also has a way of playing with a person's mind. Some of them will assign a 5-page, in-class paper worth 400 points or some will have a pop midterm worth half your grade.

So either way, you're screwed.

To borrow a line from the movie The Freedom, "There's a kind of freedom in being completely screwed, because you know things can't get any worse.""

Unfortunately, I have yet to experience this freedom.

And I'm sure you're just happy to know that.

For those who are deer hunters, feel free to send me pictures of the huge trophy buck that you're going to shoot.

These pictures may be printed in this section.
Retirement means work for Nauman

By Byron Thompson

Dr. Nauman, professor of wildlife in the College of Natural Resources, plans on retiring in December, but he doesn’t plan on relaxing.

He would like to create some examples of what was here and then use these areas as study areas to show people what Wisconsin looked like at the time of white settlement,” Dr. Nauman explained.

He hopes to restore areas in every county in Wisconsin by working with other conservation groups. Dr. Nauman wants to put both plants and animals back into their original habitat.

For example, he hopes to restore the oak savannahs and beech forests. The beech forests were previously used by the passenger pigeon. He also hopes to put the prairie chicken back in southern Wisconsin.

Dr. Nauman, after 25 years of teaching service at UW-Stevens Point, is calling it quits. Sort of.

In 1971, Dr. Nauman came to UW-SP to study pesticides on wildlife. The college of Natural Resources was only created a year before he came, and when he did, he became only the third wildlife biologist on staff.

Since then, Dr. Nauman has taught classes in wildlife management techniques, waterfowl management, wetland ecology, endangered species and game farm management.

He has helped over thirty-five graduate students receive their master’s degrees and seven have received their doctorates.

I am very proud of my role in helping students get their masters degrees and find employment in the wildlife field. I have students from Alaska to Florida,” Dr. Nauman remarked.

In Dr. Nauman’s spare time he likes to hunt, fish, garden and spend time with his family. Currently, he is also running his own environmental consulting firm.

“Noope. I guess I don’t have too much time for retiring,” Nauman admits.

Fire Crew ready for spring

Step testing offered for students

By Brian Luebke

The UW-Stevens Point Fire Crew will be testing stepping both current members and students interested in joining the Fire Crew on December 2, 3 and 4.

This test is open to students who have passed the Forestry 224 class, Basic Fire Operations. Students who have taken the class in past years and are interested in becoming an active participant within the Fire Crew are encouraged to take the test.

Students who have stepped in previous years must take the test again because the certification of the “Red Card” is valid only for one year.

Interested students should sign up for one box-time slot on the Fire Crew display case near the Fire Crew office, CNR 321A.

The testing will be held in CNR 321. A five dollar membership fee will be collected at the time of the testing.

Please direct questions to the officers in the Fire Crew office, x2897, or Dr. Cook, x2269.

On the night of the test, wear comfortable clothing for stepping up and down on a box for five minutes.

Turkey hunt deadline near

The deadline for submitting an application for the 1997 spring turkey hunt is December 10.

Applications must be received at the Department of Natural Resources office by 4:30 p.m. December 10, or post marked December 10 in order to be considered in the drawing for spring hunting permits.

More than 87,000 permits in 50 zones will be available this spring, according to Tom Howard, DNR turkey specialist in Dodgeville.

Research projects on the turkey population in management zones 1 and 1A have been completed, Howard says, and the two zones have been rejoined as zone 1.

Hunters who have been applying for permits in zone 1A should now request zone 1.

Applications for those hunts are available at DNR district and area offices or by mail from DNR Licensing Section, PO Box 7921, Madison, WI 53707.

UW-Stevens Point students spend a semester in Poland

Editor's note: The article below was sent from the semester abroad group in Krakow, Poland. The experiences of viewing the gas chambers at a concentration camp and crossing the border are told by one of the group members-KL.

The weather seemed to fit the place. Gray was the color that painted the sky while cold winds whipped through the atmosphere. Not even a $500 Gortex coat could keep the cold out.

It must have been a hundred times worse for the prisoners who did not have the luxury of Gortex. First stop, just like 50 years ago, was the shower/gas chamber.

I saw the last glimpse of natural light through a window at the entrance, as did so many who could not ponder the moment like I did, because they were over taken by fear and the reality that humanity was over for them.

The rooms were wait high with countless pairs of shoes and raw materials. The barracks were intolerably cramped. Yet, they served as a relief from the day.

While staring at the long empty bunks, it was hard to imagine the inevitable filth of a thousand men that were once crammed there.

A series of trenches, where 14 to 18 thousand Jews were shot in a single afternoon, are still visible. The trenches are located above the town of Lublin. In the town below they played classical music to cover up the gun fire. Also visible from the town is a smoke stack.

Crossing the border...

A group of four to six armed and heavily uniformed guards come through the train car with no smiles. An officer barks foreign language demands, the only identifiable phrase "passport please."

The officers study our faces as our papers are examined. They continue to examine our passports as serious expressions are exchanged between officer and tourist.

They offer another glance and maybe a nod-the only break from the intimidating seriousness. Other passports get stamped, but yours never seems to get such war prizes. You feel cheated as you are skipped over.

You put the sacred documents away and sleep all back into sleep until you are abruptly awoken by another entourage. This uniformed group is adored differently from the first.

The process, facial expressions, or lack of, and the intimidating seriousness are the same. Slowly you notice the passing landscape that you have missed, as they move on to share their seriousness with others.

University Band to toot their horns

The University Band will perform in a concert at UW-Stevens Point Nov. 24.

Selections on the program include: "Toccata for Band" and "English Suite" among many other favorites.

Daniel Stewart, the conductor of the band, has been a member of the UW-SP faculty since 1971.

He is an associate professor of music, specializing in oboe and saxophone.

In addition, he has performed with symphonies and orchestras in the eastern United States.

The concert is at 7:30 p.m. in Michelsen Hall of the Fine Arts Center. The event is open to the public without charge.

A smoke stack, a room for piled bodies, and a cold stone slab to Satan, used to extract any last commodities from the inhuman.

The gold fillings were not the last profitable material taken. There was the ash fertilizer.

The human ash that came from the ovens is present to this day. Contemplate this idea.

One can smell the fumes from an adjoining room where fuel was stored.

The pungent smell, which is present after fifty years, will not be forgotten along with an open entombment. Under the saucer cover is evidence of the inhumanity served to the Jewish men and women of the concentration camps.

After fifty years, the winds have not blown these ashes away; they will not be forgotten.

Q&A with Chancellor Tom

HOW MANY LICKS DOES IT TAKE YOU TO GET TO THE CENTER OF A TOOTSI POP?

In my case none. I crunch it down and then dispense with it in one gulp!

WHAT DO YOU THINK SHOULD BE DONE ABOUT THE PROPOSED SEGREGATED FEE INCREASES?

I am watching the SGA discussions about this issue with great interest. Frankly, I have full confidence in our student leaders to bring forward an appropriate course of action. My confidence is based on a long tradition of positive student government leadership and experience in making sound budgetary decisions.

DO YOU THINK THAT VIOLENCE ON TELEVISION AFFECTS THE AMERICAN PSYCHE?

While I am concerned with children spending too much time watching television, I believe most Americans can separate TV violence from standards of how to behave in the real world. For instance, I really enjoy watching a late night Charlie Bronson, Dirty Harry, Chuck Norris or Jean Claude Van Damme movie without feeling the need to resort to violence as a means of getting things done.

ARE YOU PLANNING ON GOING DEER HUNTING IN SEARCH OF DA TURDY POINT BUCK?

Alas, I am not a hunter, but I enjoy looking for opportunities to observe da turdy point buck (can anyone really pronounce that phrase?) However, I will avoid this particular pastime during the Wisconsin hunting season!

HOW DO YOU THINK THE NEW MEN'S BASKETBALL COACH, JACK BENNETT, WILL DO IN HIS FIRST SEASON?

Jack, the team and coaching staff, have the right ingredients (outstanding ability, superb talent and infectious enthusiasm) for a truly successful basketball season. I enjoyed watching a real defensive battle at the Purple/Gold game on Sunday, and I am eagerly looking forward to our first game this Friday night in the Terry Porter Classic.

Rick Witt named NCAA Division III Coach of the Year

By Charlie Sensenbrenner
ASSISTANT OUTDOORS EDITOR

With the ultimate goal of national prominence, the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point Men's Cross Country team culminated a memorable season with an outstanding run at the NCAA Championships in Rock Island, Illinois. The WSUC men's cross country team finished third overall behind UW-La Crosse (86) and North Central College (94), with a team score of 99 points. Last year not a single Pointer qualified for the championship race, much less the entire team.

This season's leap into the upper echelon of the nation's elite was nothing short of miraculous for an inexperienced squad that displayed an outstanding work ethic and an incomparable competitive drive all season long. "As I think back to the beginning of the season and realize how far this group has come, 'Proud' does not do justice to how I really feel," reflected cross country coach Rick Witt.

Individually, the Pointers entered the race hoping to claim up to six spots on the All-American list. In the end, the bold prediction fell only slightly short, with three All-American runners and three others just seconds away from recognition.

"As I think back to the beginning of the season and realize how far this group has come, 'Proud' does not do justice to how I really feel."
Coach Rick Witt

"I felt that we ran extremely well and La Crosse was just a little better than us on this particular day," Witt added.

"I cannot say enough about all the guys on the team," added Witt. For his efforts, Witt was named the NCAA Division III Coach of the Year to go along with his regional honor.

Coach Tim Olson. "If they were to give out an award for the country's outstanding assistant coach, he would win the award hands down. "Our success would not have been possible without his effort and hard work," stated Witt.

The only disappointment of the season was that the runners were not meeting what they have to do next year to win the National Championship. But according to Witt, the runners are "already talking about what they have to do next year to have a chance to win the National Championship." The entire team will remain intact for another run in 1997.

Pointers prepare for Terry Porter Classic

By Joshua Morby
CONTRIBUTOR

The big dogs of UW-Stevens Point will showcase their talent this weekend in the 13th annual Terry Porter Classic. The four game tournament in Quandt Fieldhouse kicks off the regular season for the Pointers.

"At this point we're ready to go against someone other than ourselves," said UW-SP men's basketball coach Jack Bennett. "The only other returning Pointer who earned honors in last season's Classic is Russ Austin, who was named to the All-Tournament team.

Game one of the Terry Porter Classic on Friday at 6 p.m. features the Moorhead State Dragons vs. the Saint Xavier Cougars. The Dragons, under head coach Dave Schellhase, finished with a 19-8 record last season. Coach Mike Keenan's Cougars finished 21-13. Game two features Point vs. the Mount St. Claire College Mountaineers on Friday at 8 p.m. "Mount St. Claire is coming here with one win under their belt. To win we'll have to get our defense set and make them earn what they get," said Bennett.

The Mountaineers finished last season 16-3. Andy Eberhart was the reigning regional player of the year and an All-American dozing All-American runner.

The Pointers tip off their inaugural season under new head coach Bennett. Point finished last season with a record of 19-8. UW-SP has won 13 of the last 14 games of the Classic. The Pointers have won a semifinal game in the 12 year history of the tournament and are 20-4 overall at Terry Porter Classic record in Friday's game.

After the tourney, the Pointers step into action on Wednesday at 4, when they host Mt. Senario College.

Despite the Green Bay Packers' 21-6 loss at Dallas Monday night, the Pack will still have home field advantage throughout the playoffs if they can win their final five games of the regular season. The chart below shows the five contenders for home field advantage and their remaining schedules.

The two teams that should concern Pack fans are Denver and at Detroit.

Denver comes to Lambeau Field on Dec. 8, but the cold weather won't give the Packers any advantage over the Broncos. However, the Lambeau crowd, coupled with the return of Antonio Freeman, should give Green Bay the win.

The Packers always have problems in Detroit. They haven't won in the Silverdome since 1991, and Lions coach Wayne Fords is tough to beat in December, especially with his job on the line.

At worst, Green Bay should finish 11-5, but more likely they will be 12-4 or 13-3.

At 13-3, they will insure the road to the Super Bowl goes through Lambeau Field.

If they finish 12-4, things become very complicated.

Dallas would have to lose one more game to finish 11-5 because they hold the head-to-head tiebreaker this season.

San Francisco would also have to lose one game to finish 12-4.

The Packers hold the tiebreaker because of their 23-20 overtime win in Week 7.

Washington would have to lose at least one game and finish 12-4 or 11-5. This tiebreaker depends on overall conference record, where both Green Bay and Washington currently have two losses.

At 11-5, the Packers would have no chance at home field, leaving them on the road after one home game in the opening round of the playoffs.

Green Bay can realistically win their final five games of the regular season. But even if they drop one of them, they can still host Dallas in Lambeau Field for the NFC Championship with some help from Cowboy opponents.

After Monday night's seventh straight loss in Big 'D', the Packers can ill afford to make another trip to Texas if they have any hopes of getting to New Orleans for Super Bowl XXXI.
Women’s hoops points upward

By Ryan Lins
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

The woman’s basketball team is all fired up about opening the season this weekend. The team will face a worthy foe in Upper Iowa University. The Pointers will look to repeat last years 65-49 win against the Peacocks.

The Pointers have good reason to be optimistic on Saturday. First, they have history on their side. The women’s basketball team has started out of the gates strong, and has captured six of the last seven openers.

Most importantly for the team’s success this year is returning starters and key reserves.

Two-thirds of UW-Stevens Point’s top scorers on the team have returned. These include guard Marne Boario (14.2 ppg), forward Christina Bergman (7.0 ppg), and forward Terri Crum (3.5 ppg).

The Pointer wrestling team takedown. The wrestlers did everything I asked them to do, now I just have to win the close matches,” said UW-SP wrestling coach Marty Loy.

“Our guys know this match means little as the season continues. We will see them again with more important titles on the line,” added Loy.

On Saturday, the Pointers placed seven wrestlers in the top four at the Golden Eagle Open. The Open included tough competition from defending national champion Wartburg, Division II UW-Parkside, and Division I schools, UW-Madison, Marquette, and Northern Illinois.

Perry Miller, ranked 81 in the nation among Division II heavy-weight, led the Pointers, winning the tourney and improving his undefeated record to 5-0.

Point’s Jaime Hegland came close to duplicating Miller’s feat before losing in overtime in the championship match to returning All American Nate Skar.

Hegland beat two-time All-American Jeremy Krings to reach the title match. Chris Coburn also scored his first goal in a Pointer uniform at 3:41 of the second for the three goal advantage.

Goals by Matt Interbartolo and Ryan Aikia later in the second finished out the scoring. A stinging Pointer “D” allowed Gorman to record the blocking by only allowing 15 Forester shots on goal compared to 45 for the home team.

To his credit, Gorman was forced to make numerous great saves in the final 2:30 minutes as Lake Forest was on a 5-on-3 power-play.

For his netminding heroics, Gorman was named the NCHA player of the week.

The two victories lifted the Pointers record to 5-2-1 in the NCHA and 5-3-1 overall.

Hockey dominates in Lake Forest sweep

By Nick Brilowski
CONTRIBUTOR

As an old song goes, one is the loneliest number.

For the Pointer hockey team so far this season, they have been impressive in one game of each weekend series but disappointing in the other.

Leave it to Lake Forest College to be the perfect cure for the Pointers’ ailment.

Point put it all together in two impressive home wins this past weekend against the Foresters.

Six different Pointers hit the lamp on Friday night leading to a 6-1 victory.

Casey Howard got the scoring started at the 5:12 mark in the first period. Just over a minute and a half later, Forrest Gore continued his great play by notching his eighth goal of the season for a 2-0 lead after one period.

Eric Brown countered a Lake Forest goal with a power play goal of his own at 12:12 of the second period to retain the two goal lead.

The Pointers laced the game with three third period goals. Willy Friericks, Chad Franckowski, and Brian Hill each found the back of the net to account for the final margin.

Bobby Gorman stopped 31 of 32 Lake Forest shots in just missing out again on his first shutout. Saturday night, Gorman got plenty of help from his defense as he got that first shutout in a 5-0 win.

Brown got Point out to an early lead as he scored on a power-play goal with 11:27 left in the first.

Only 20 seconds later, D.J. Drayna notched his first goal as a Pointer to make the score 2-0 after the first.

New Holiday Collection Schedule
Ransom fails to meet demands

By Mike Beacon
Film Critic

If director Ron Howard made one mistake in his latest film, Ransom, it was that he let the film keep rolling.

Up until the final twenty minutes, Ransom offers moviegoers suspense, drama, and action. Howard had what could have been a jaw-dropping ending to the film: a happy one. Howard had what could have been a jaw-dropping ending to the film: a happy one.

To accompany these qualities, but conventional Hollywood style instead he chose to go with the son is abducted in a park while Mullen is attending to personal business.

The ransom demand is set at $2 million, and Mullen is instructed to pay within 48 hours or else he will never see his son again.

After an initial trade-off is botched up by the FBI, Mullen doubts he will ever get his son back. He decides to offer the $2 million as a bounty on the kidnappers rather than as ransom. With his wife (played by Rene Russo) and the FBI's head coordinator for the mission (Delroy Lindo) both against his bounty offer, Mullen treats the retrieval of his son as more of a personal grudge to prove to the world that he does not back down to the demands of anyone, no matter what the costs or sacrifice.

Of course in the end, the bad guys get most likely what they deserve, while the good guys return to their normal lives.

I would highly suggest waiting to see this film when it comes out on video in six months.

The Shawshank Redemption (1994; 142 min.)

Wow - a movie adapted from a book that I didn't want to pitch out the window when I brought it home.

Based on a novella by Stephen King, this movie offers much to the viewer. Excellent cinematography by Frank Darabont and virtuoso performances by Tim Robbins and Morgan Freeman make this a must see. It was even nominated for Best Picture, and rightly so.

Robbins is Andy Dufresne, a banker who is convicted of his wife's murder and sent to prison for life. There he meets Red, played by Freeman. The story follows their institutional life for twenty years, recounting the horrors of prison life, the corruption, and the affirmation of life. This movie is worth a trip to the video store.

The Thief

You hold death in your hand and laugh at nature's misfortune, asking me to look into the cold, clouded emptiness of your prey's black hole eyes which, before your immortality, were once rich and full of life... but those eyes you were too far to see: So independent, whimsical, alert, curious, content, cautious, and carefree... there are many eyes that yours have not seen: Eyes that explode with fear and dart in confusion at the slightest sound. Eyes that scream and show more pain with a single glance than any words have found.

Chasing the eyes that live, and celebrating the eyes of the dead, you call yourself the hunter. But I call you the thief:

Stealing the breath of the living, and daring to parade it before me.

I like the thrill of the hunt, for the illusion of self-righteousness, hidden within the power to create death that drives you to steal? I would like to see your eyes the day that they scream.

Presidents' second campaign a success

90 FM's Pick of the Week

By Patrick McGrane
Music Critic

The Presidents of the United States of America return with "1", their follow up to their highly regarded debut. What is the formula to their success? Simplicity. We're talking about three guys: one playing a Basitar (two-stringed bass), one a guitbass (three-stringed guitar), and one that simply plays the drums. All of this simplicity leads to great tunes that rock you silly!

Their music is fun all the way through, with great songs like "Mach 5," "Tiki God," and "Volcano."

With a sound that is nothing more than punk-and-spunk, three-chord rock, the Presidents deliver an energetic and straight-ahead release. The formula works!

They've been called "...a necessary addition to mid-90's rock".

The entire album, and I mean everything, is just plain great.
