Declaration of major falls upon departments

By Chris Keller

Big changes were implemented on Oct. 21 affecting the manner in which students declare a major or a minor. According to Dave Eckholm of Admissions and Administration, "The principle here is to give departments responsibility of student information." Previously, a student could change a major or a minor just by indicating it on their degree progress report, Eckholm said. "The departments were left out of it."

Now, a student must go to the department and apply to the major of their choice, said Eckholm. The department, upon looking at the student's record can accept them, reject them, or issue a type of "provisional acceptance," said Eckholm. "The departments can categorize students, such as intended major, provisional major, or others. This and make an intelligent decision."

The changes will also allow the department to manage the number of students in their classes and track the students taking their classes. Eckholm said, "By giving departments control, they can track their students and meet with those who might be at-risk of not graduating, students whose GPA has slipped, for instance."

The changes should help students be better aware of their status and help with advising, Eckholm noted. "The new system will allow the departments to be in control from start to finish," he added.

Murat addresses state issues in open forum

Originally state residents of Wisconsin were supposed to only pay about 25% of the total cost. Now, students are paying around 33%, he stated.

The first issue asked in the open forum pertained to the proposed Supermax prison which is estimated at a $75 million dollar cost. Murat explained the proposed prison will hold the worst offenders of the state. The prisoners would be under complete isolation, but currently an offi

Chain letters tow in e-mail litter

By Craig Stillman

The spreading of computer viruses no longer presents the only problem in the UW-Stevens Point computer labs. Chain letters have become the number one irritation to many UW-Stevens Point students.

"Every time I check my e-mail there is six or seven new messages that I have no interest in reading so I just delete them without reading what they say," said William Mooren.

The recent outbreak of chain letters can be attributed to the new e-mail program called Microsoft Exchange.

Jane Dumke, UW-Stevens Point postmaster claims the efficiency in mailing messages to hundreds of students in mere seconds is one of the problems with students trying to send e-mail in that it clutters people's e-mail and severely hampers the students ability to send e-mail.

Two candidates set to visit campus

By Steph Sprangers

Two speakers will visit UW-Stevens Point next week. Taxpayers' party candidate, Wayne Wiedeman and Democratic congressman David Obey will speak about current issues to students.

Wiedeman, U.S. Taxpayers' party candidate for the 24th senate district, will be entertaining an open forum at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point on Tuesday, October 29 at 7 p.m. in Room 125 in the University Center (UC).

"There is an upwelling of interest in third parties. I hope that students take this opportunity to learn more about Mr. Wiedeman and the Taxpayers' party," said SGA Legislative Issues Director Ann Finan.

Later in the week, Congressman Obey (D) will be addressing the Student Government Association.

Forum focuses on family and women issues

A forum on "Women and Family Issues in the 1996 Election" will be held at UW-Stevens Point on Monday, Oct. 28. The 7 p.m. program, intended for members of the public as well as UW-Stevens Point students, will be held in the Nicolet Room of the University Center. Panelists include Nancy Bayne, Women's Studies coordinator and professor of psychology at UWSP; Lisa Stokes of Planned Parenthood, a community organizer; and Ethel Quiser, board member of the Lake County 9-5 Poverty Initiative Network, University of Wisconsin Women's Consortium Steering Committee, co-facilitator of Pivot Point, and a lobbyist, educator, mother and student.

Forum sponsors include Students Are Voting Everywhere (S.A.V.E.), the Women's Resource Center, and the Student Government Association on campus.

In hope of eliminating the problem of chain letters, an awareness is being raised in students by Information Technology to use e-mail responsibly. In the next week or two Dumke hopes to institute a policy similar to that of the Internet in which each student must accept terms of an agreement before continuing. This policy will serve as the first warning for the student and alleviate the mass number of chain letters being sent, by making the students responsible for their actions.

Students still remain skeptical that there will be an end to the flooding of e-mail with chain letters. "I don't believe that anything will be done to prevent chain letters. Plus I don't know how they will stop it if they don't monitor everyone's mail," insisted Kevin Beckard.
Approximately seven million vertebrate animals are killed each year for dissection in U.S. biology classrooms. And for what purpose? What gains are made when students cut open and explore the inside of frogs and cats and dogfish sharks? The Humane Society of the United States (HSUS) believes that whatever benefits might arise from dissections, they are far outweighed by the associated costs. Allow me to explain.

First, there is the moral suffering involved. Investigations into the dissection trade have documented, among other abuses, cats being drowned ten at a time in burlap sacks or prodded roughly into crowded gas chambers, rats embalmed with formaldehyde while still living, dozens of live frogs piled into sacks for days or weeks without food, and sickly turtles kept in filthy, overcrowded holding tanks. These sorts of conditions appear to be quite commonplace, and though they are inexcusable and sometimes illegal, they are perhaps specifically violent exercise; it involves killing, preserving, cutting apart, and then discarding an animal. However well-intentioned an instructor's pose?

Humane Society of the United States (HSUS) believes that whatever the alternative. Even the economics of dissection do not argue for its use. The specific impact of their capture for classroom use is not posing a threat to the population of frogs. Abundant resources are available for learning anatomy, physiology, genetics, toxicology, and other animal-related fields that do not require animals to suffer and/or die. To anyone who simply cannot bear the thought of dispensing with hands-on contact with a preserved animal, human cadavers offer the fullscale experience with the insides of frogs and cats and fetal pigs and dogfish sharks? The motives are concerning violations of human rights.

To do a little research on the subject I looked up Amnesty International on the internet. I was able to read the annual report from this year they give, regarding human rights over the previous year. Although Burma was not listed specifically, the report indicated that not all of the countries who are guilty of human rights violations are listed, and I don't doubt that they are guilty of such violations. Some of the countries that were listed though were: China, Japan, Korea, Mexico, Germany, Spain, France, The United Kingdom, and The United States of America.

In following the rationale for those working for the Free Burma Coalition campaign, the university should also not be purchasing any products produced in any of these countries. This is taking the issue to the extreme. But unless all of those countries are held to the same standard there is a lack of credibility because there are a few people choosing which countries are targeted.

I feel that if people are against the practices of a nation or faction they should provide students with the information they feel pertinent to the issue and let the students decide if they want to support a boycott.

The example is with Taco Bell in the UC. If students support the cause then Taco Bell will be hurt financially. If they don't support the cause then they have made the choice themselves, and have not been told they can or cannot purchase certain products.

They immediately leaped off the moving wagon and followed the strange animal into the dense forest, muskets at the ready. Of course, they found no trace of it. About the ninth or tenth time this happened, the rest of the wagon train, not to mention the horses who kept getting their legs tangled in the reins every time the men bolted from the wagon, were beginning to get a bit put out. Their wives, who were sitting in the back of the covered wagon, even began having doubts about their husband’s sanity.

Emily: “There go them two fools again. I reckon they be chasin’ that dang shadow they keep yappin’ about.”

Denise: “Hey, watch who you be callin’ a fool. Your husband’s the first one off every time.”

Emily: “Yeah, well yours is the one who comes back every time and says ‘we just missed him, honey,’ when we know dang well they never even seen the thing.”

Denise: “Well at least mine don’t say, ‘we’ll get the little devil next time,’ ten straight times.”

Fortunately for us, one of these extremely beautiful women wrote the entire conversation down in her diary and then mailed it to the Library of Congress where it’s being kept in an air-tight canister and being guarded by two really rough looking guys with machine guns.

By the way, as a little side note to that conversation, it turns out that witness to the line of dialogue, the following words appeared in parentheses: At least my husband don’t smell like the back end of a horse. He He He.

But back to the snipe, and the fact that it is quite the elusive creature, as the two husbands could testify to, if they were still alive.

One reason, and this is a big one, for the snipe to be nearly impossible to see may be that it is the color of camouflage. In fact, it is believed to be the only animal with camo skin, which means it could be hiding in the pile of leaves at your feet! LOOK OUT!!!

(Only heed that warning if you are standing in a pile of leaves, which for some reason seems highly unlikely.)

Now you may be thinking, if a snipe has never been seen, how do I know what it looks like? And you think I’m going to tell you? HA.

Well, actually, back around 1702, an old-timer became the first and only human to see the snipe. Unfortunately he was mute and illiterate. He did however, draw a nice stick figure of the animal in the dirt, after which he walked over to a pile of leaves and jumped in it.

Witnesses to the event apparently assumed, for reasons unknown to this day, that he was trying to show them the color of the animal. Go figure. How they decided to name it the snipe is pretty obvious: the guy’s name was Buck Snipe (duh).

It should be noted that witnesses also observed that Buck never did get up from the pile of leaves — until the next morning, whereupon he stumbled forward and fell into the next pile of leaves he found.

Hmmm.

Established elk ready for second winter

The Wisconsin Elk herd continues to do well, despite what appears to have been a poor calving season.

Only two births were confirmed this year by the research team, on July 5 and 6.

One of the calves was a 30-pound female that was captured and radio-tagged on her second day, while the other calf managed to elude capture.

According to Dr. Ray Anderson, director of the project, “This very late calving was probably a result of the breeding being done by yearling bulls during the previous rut.”

The two adult bulls were not with the major group of cows during the 1995 rut.

When breeding is done by yearling bulls, the pregnancy rate is lower and the calving dates are pushed back because the cows are less receptive towards them. As can be seen from the map, the elk are located over a large area.

Four deaths have been recorded thus far, including an elk (f1) that was shot and killed accidentally during the 1995 deer-gun season.

The shooter, who turned himself in, received a $500 fine and 1 year revocation of hunting privileges.

“We are looking forward to the impending bugling season with considerable anticipation,” said Anderson.

The research team expects the fall rut to be highly active, more so than it was last year when there was a predominance of yearling bulls in the herd.
Following the rebound of the wolf: the cougar

By Charlie Sensenbrenner

Just as wolves have slipped back through the shadows of time into their former habitats, another carnivore thought to have long been extinct in Wisconsin may have silently returned.

In fact, the primary difference between the two large carnivores would seem to favor the presence of cougars.

While wolves must feed on a pack of at least three, the cougar leads a solitary life. According to DNR biologist, the big cats need just one deer every two weeks and would pose little threat to Wisconsin’s enormous but highly limited deer herd.

Other possible selections on a cougar’s menu include cotton tail rabbits, snowshoe hares, porcupines, and mice, all of which thrive in our forests.

Due to their inability to roar, cougars, also called mountain lions, have been dubbed as one of the “lesser cats,” separate from the “great cats” of Africa and Asia.

They are relatively docile and mild mannered for an animal of their considerable strength and power and are recommended over other big cats as pets.

Cougars seem to have a curious fascination mixed with fear in relation to humans, during the lion’s extremely secretive and shy nature, they have been known to linger around the edges of camp sites and quietly bed down in thicket and road trails to watch hikers pass by.

The general consensus among wildlife biologists is that settlers relentlessly hunted the deer herd to near extinction and logged the northern forests, the eastern cougar was driven out of existence near the turn of the century.

However, since that time, countless stories of the sleek, long-tailed cat have continued to surface.

The Door County Advocate ran a story on July 30, 1996 about a sheep farmer concerned for the safety of his flock after repeated sightings began to surface in the summer of 1995 near Whitefish Dunes State Park.

On July 8, 1994, an observer witnessed a mother lion with two kittens in eastern Sawyer County.

Cougars in the west are rapidly increasing in number due to re-classification from a shoot-on-site varmint to a protected game species.

A third possibility is that the growing western population has expanded into Canada and followed the same path used by western coyotes decades ago into the lake states.

Most of the cougar sightings are clustered in Northern Wisconsin and seem to support an immigration-type theory.

Adrian Wydeven pondered the return of the cougar in a 1992 report.

“Whether wild cougars are re-establishing in the state, or captive cougars are being released into the wild is still unclear. Some of the observations in unlikely locations are probably captive cougar escapes or released into the wild. Undoubtedly some cougar observations are misidentifications,” said Wydeven.

First gun hunt in October since 19th century

Portions of southern, central and eastern Wisconsin will be open for gun deer hunting from October 24 through 27, and Department of Natural Resources officials are urging hunters and others outdoors enthusiasts to exercise caution while enjoying the outdoors during that period.

According to Bill Myton, DNR deer and bear ecologist, this will be the first October gun deer hunt in Wisconsin since the late 1880s.

“The use of blaze orange clothing has greatly improved the safety of gun deer hunting.”

It is possible that you have noticed a few familiar faces mincing from the Point campus this semester, and that is because a group of adventurers have come to spend a semester in England. There are 30 students that have travelled on this year's Fall tour abroad. A large amount are from UW-Stevens Point, but there are some from surrounding colleges. The group participated in a three week continental tour and are now in London for a semester of studies.

As a group, we toured through Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland and France. Throughout our semester, we travel together to a few cities in England. The classes are set up so that we all have three day weekends which we can spend as we choose. The International Programs department did an incredible job of organizing the trip, while still giving us our freedom. During the tour, we were able to go out to explore and study on our own schedule, in smaller groups of our own choice.

This gave us the feeling of really being a part of the cities we visited, and not the group of annoying tourists that we encountered so many times.

Jan Seiler, Professor of Foreign Language

By Michelle Ristau
Fresbitter

At some stage in our college career most of us have encountered an inspiring professor. Jan Seiler is that for many students. Seiler's enthusiasm for teaching remains in the minds of his students several years after class was dismissed. Jan Seiler is a Professor of Foreign Language; German namely, with English as a Second Language (ESL) and Methods of Language.

To add to her credentials, she is currently the Department Chair. Seiler has taught at UW-Stevens Point since 1969.

Her husband, Mark Seiler, is also a German Professor at the university.

For Seiler, it is crucial to make the material interesting and engaging.

"Learning a foreign language, even at the beginning level, can be overwhelming. I try to make a special effort to make it fun-it can be fun," Seiler stated.

Seiler uses many different teaching methods to ensure her students' involvement. For example, she allows students to study and practice in small groups or pairs. This type of interaction allows students to talk about activities they enjoy in German. Seiler also believes in reality, or hands on experience.

As much as we would all love to travel abroad, it simply isn't possible.

In place of travelling, Seiler offers authentic items to her classes. If, for instance, her class is studying a chapter on money, she will bring in German money.

"It is work to have an interesting class. Some professors are able to walk in and shake it out of their sleeve. I prepare, and enjoy doing so," she said.

Seiler never intended on becoming a teacher. It was through an education class in college that she found an interest.

"When asked to prepare mini-lessons for class, I realized how creative and challenging teaching can be compared to other things. There is more to teaching a foreign language than lectures; I enjoy it much more." Seiler states.

Sculptor to exhibit his work at UW-Stevens Point

Another piece will be placed in the courtyard of the Fine Arts Center from Nov. 10-21. The third sculpture will be showcased in the student show last year, after which he found an interest. He had a work selected for the student show last year, after which one of the art faculty suggested he utilize more space to portray the evolution of his recovery. This is his first one-person show.

Korzinek's sculptures are constructed with found objects and items from nature such as bones, insects, vines, branches and "rotted" metal.

Steve J. Korzinek of Wausau, a senior art and design major, will install three sculptures in three locations over the next three months at the UW-Stevens Point.

"It portrays the evolution of his recovery," Seiler said.

Talent search seeks out local comedians and musicians

Stardom isn’t far off when you compete in the third annual Mastercard American Collegiate Talent Search. Students that have comedy or musical acts may be eligible and can sign up with Travis at the Centertainment Productions Office in the lower level of the University Center. Mastercard Acts is a national talent search created by Mastercard International Incorporated and coordinated and administered by the National Association for Campus Activities (NACA). It is designed to discover the most talented and promising student entertainers in music and comedy. UW-Stevens Point is one of 100 campuses across the country scheduled to host local competitions, from which one winning act will advance to the semi-finals in Chicago. Two acts will be selected as winners at each of the six semi-finals contests and awarded $1,500 and advance to Nationals in Philadelphia, PA. Nationals will be held on Feb. 23, 1997. One winning act will be awarded the title “Best Student Act in America,” $15,000, and the opportunity to perform for entertainment professionals at the National NACA conference. A contribution of $10,000 will also be made to the winner’s university scholarship fund.

With the Milwaukee Bucks trying to finalize their roster for the opening of the NBA season, guard Shawn Respert's name has been mentioned as a possible casualty of cut day. It's true that the Bucks have a logjam in the backcourt, but it would be a huge mistake to trade him, or even worse, release him. Sherman Douglas and Elliot Perry are battling for the starting point guard spot and second round pick Moochie Norris is impressing the Bucks organization with his point guard skills. At the shooting guard spot, Ray Allen and Johnny Newman are fighting for the starting nod, which would leave Respert third on the depth chart at that position.

Respert was the eighth pick in the 1995 NBA Draft by the Portland Trailblazers, and the Bucks traded their 11th pick, Gary Trent, and a future first round pick to acquire Respert, who could be a force off the bench with his sharp shooting.

Last season, Respert was not given much playing time, but he was a key player for the Titans' championship teams.

Ropers is the team's returnee at reserve in front of the home crowd. Savonte Walker recorded six saves.

However, UW-River Falls rebounded, securing the match victory with a 1-0 win. The Pointers drew first blood in the first game 15-2. The Titans crushed Point in the second period on a Jennifer Tischaefer goal to tie the game 1-1.

The two games improved the Pointers' overall and 1-6 in the WWIAC. The NCHA will not be a cakewalk, as three conference foes are ranked ahead of Point in the NCAA Division III playoffs at the end of the season. "My goal this year is to play as many games as we're able to play. We've got as good a chance to win the national championship as anyone, if not better," said Baldarotta.

It all begins this Friday and Saturday as the pucksters travel to Superior for a clash with St. Scholastica.

The Pointers traveled to St. Norbert College on Tuesday as their final tune-up for the WWIAC tournament. UW-Stevens Point will be playing for their fifth consecutive conference title in Oshkosh in the tournament which runs from Friday through Sunday.

"I guess there's a lot of pressure, but at the same time I think we're just kind of rising to the opportunity," said Miech. The Pointers, the #1 seed, will face the winner of the Plateau-River Falls game at two on the schedule.

The Pointers headed to face a tough La Crosse team (10-5, 6-4 in the NCHAs and 12 assists for 24 points last season."

"Our record maybe isn't the toughest in the nation," said Miech. The two games improved the Pointers' record to 8-8-1 overall and 7-0-1 in WWIAC play. "Our record maybe isn't the best in the conference, but it's the toughest in the conference and it's one of the toughest in the nation."

"That's why we're playing so well," Miech added.

The Pointer football team's hopes for a WSUC championship and NCAA playoff berth hit a snag Saturday at the hands of UW-La Crosse.

The Eagles, the defending NCAA Division III national champions, shutdown the Pointer's potent offense in their 29-10 win Saturday at Goerke Field.

La Crosse held the Pointer offense, which was averaging 501 yards a game, to a paltry 156 total yards from scrimmage.

Point's defense forced five Eagle fumbles to set the table for the offense, but quarterback Tom Fitzgerald and company could only manage to squeeze three points out of them.

"The key to the game is defensively they dominated us," said UW-Stevens Point head football coach John Miech.

"We weren't able to get the job done on the offensive side of the ball, and that's why we lost," Miech added.

After an Eagle fumble, the Pointers were inside La Crosse's 20 yard line with just over two minutes left in the half.

After a sack, two incomplete passes and a delay of game penalty, Point found themselves on the 45 yard line for 4th and 25.

Fred Gallestie tried a 51-yarder that had plenty of leg but was wide left, sending the Pointers into the locker room trailing 7-0.

In the second quarter, La Crosse struck early with a 10-play, 75-yard drive culminated by Jeff Baker's 25-yard touchdown pass to Erick Jenkins.

After an Eagle fumble, the Pointers were inside La Crosse's 20 yard line with just over two minutes left in the half.

But a Fitzgerald completion to Bill Ott in the end zone was called back for offensive pass interference, which is the longest winning streak in the nation in all divisions.

La Crosse added a field goal with 6:53 left in the third quarter to stretch the lead to 10-0. Point finally took advantage of a turnover, as a Galceke field goal pulled them within seven at 10-3.

After the Eagles went three and out on their next drive, Fitzgerald connected with tight end Druummy for two big plays on an eight play, 56 yard game tying drive.

The five yard scoring strike to Drummy in the left corner of the end zone notched the game at 10 with 14:48 to go.

Although the momentum seemed to be in Point's hands, La Crosse marched down the field on their next drive, taking the ball 80 yards for what would be the game's deciding score.

Baker connected with Brandon Hall on a 43-yard bomb, setting the Eagles up at the one yard line.

Brian Steines punched the ball in from there to give La Crosse a 17-10 lead with 11:20 remaining.

The Pointers were unable to do anything with the football for the remainder of the contest and La Crosse would go on to go for two more touchdowns.

"Their wide receivers made some great plays and great catches in the fourth quarter that hurt us," said Miech.

Stevens Point had a chance to come within seven points of the Eagles with just over six minutes left.

But a Fitzgerald completion to Bill Ott in the end zone was called back for offensive pass interference.

The win gave La Crosse (6-0, 4-0 WSUC) its 20th straight victory, the longest winning streak in the nation in all divisions.

The Pointers (5-1, 3-1 WSUC) face another tough opponent this Saturday when they travel to Whitewater. The Warhawks are coming off a tough 21-20 loss at UW-River Falls.

Point, Whitewater, and River Falls are fighting for second place in the WSUC, and possibly for a NCAA playoff bid.

The Pointers control their own destiny, as they play both teams in the next two weeks.

"If we win the next three football games, we'll have an outstanding opportunity to get into the NCAA playoffs."

"We're capable of winning the next three games, we're capable of losing the next three games. It's an attitude situation. If they want to play La Crosse again, they'll have to win the next three games, and I'm sure we'll have an opportunity to see them in the playoffs," said Miech.

Tennis falls in a pair of heartbreakers

By Charlie Sensenbrenner

Two is probably one of the least feared numbers by superstitious athletes.

But take up the around the UW-Stevens Point tennis team, and expect to be driven away by crossfifed-crossfingers.

Last weekend, 5-4 loss.

The curse of the doubles team in the #1, #3, and #4 slots while tied in the singles matches.

However, things took an unexplainable turn for the worse in doubles play.

Petzold and Oswald fell to Piering and Lisa Schluhecke 6-4, 6-6, and 7-4 in #1 doubles.

Brenda Gottsacker and Oelke fell with a disappointing 6-1, 7-5 loss in the #2 doubles match against Janace Zelter and Brittany Moser.

The #3 team of Bacher and Byrne defeated a brilliant 6-3, 6-1 victory over Sarah Prether and Przybyski.

However, by then the damage had already been done.

Amy West and Jenny Stong of Oshkosh seemed to feed off their team's momentum and took the tie-breaking match from Point's Karen Simon and Lynn Schoeni 6-4, 6-7, 7-5.

Brenda Gottsacker, Jenny Bacher, Jenny Oelke, and Dena Bastian all went down fighting and the Pointers found themselves tied with the Titans.

Tight Corner
by Grundy and Willett

I was watching a parade wind its way through a pretty European village during spring.

I looked twice at the tall woman on the pont-cart.

We were so happy to see each other again.

That's my name, Julia! I be gettin from...a rope.

If only she'd remembered to shave.

A trend in Hollywood is to follow a movie that has enjoyed critical or box office success with a movie that is basically the same, yet usually light-years worse. An example of this would be following Pulp Fiction with schlock like Things To Do In Denver When You’re Dead.

However, that tendency has been broken. Hollywood has followed up a piece of trash like Congo with a better movie in The Ghost and the Darkness.

The Ghost and the Darkness is based on a true story, in which a colonel from late nineteenth century England comes to Africa to build a bridge across the river Tsalvo. There he runs into personnel difficulties brought on by the attack of man-eating lions, and he brings in a legendary hunter to help him kill these lions.

Colonel John Patterson is played by Val Kilmer, now a bona fide Hollywood star. He plays his role well, but is certainly not spectacular.

The real gems in this movie are in the supporting cast. Michael Douglas plays Remington, the legendary hunter. Douglas manages to play this character very, very well.

John Kani plays Samuel, the camp liaison. He is the star of this movie, delivering one-liners that actually work. He has many insights and is convincing as a person, a tough job for many actors.

The real strength in this film is the cinematography. More than once I was amazed at the beauty of Africa and its denizens.

Director Stephen Hopkins has a bright future ahead of him.

Rating (four possible):

Gorky Park (1983, 2:05)

Three Russian youths are found faceless in the snow without fingerprints, teeth and any other trace of possible identification. It is KGB officer Arkady Renko’s (William Hurt) responsibility to uncover their identities and figure out why they were murdered.

Standing in Hurt’s path for the truth is American business man Jack Oswald (Lee Marvin) and his love interest played by Joanna Pacula.

Hurt (Body Heat, Kiss of the Spiderwoman) and film legend Marvin both give applaud worthy performances.

"Gorky Park" viewers will be more and more obsessed with solving the mystery as the movie progresses.

Directed by Michael Apted, this film is worth stepping away from the new release racks to search for.

Huge UK chart breakers arrive

90 FM’s Picks of the Week

“K” is the debut from the UK trio that calls themselves Kula Shaker. The band’s cool tunes, with great jump and beat, follow the London-pop sound as established by bands such as Charlatans UK, Stone Roses and Oasis. The twist for Kula Shaker is the psychedelic-like sound, as seen through the group’s Indian influences.

Instruments such as the tamboura, sarod and tabla are used, as is Sanskrit, the classical literary language of ancient India, for a few of the songs’ lyrics. "K" is both well-crafted and performed, with a very clean sound.

Look for Kula Shaker. Predictions are they are going to be as big here as they already are in the UK.

“Who can you trust” comes from another UK trio, Morcheeba. Vision Trust, the album’s label, calls it "Tricky-esque, shifting soundscapes...

In essence, it is mostly a mellow sound, with a slick groove and good female vocals to support it with. The hit single, “Trigger Happy,” epitomizes the sound and idealizes the band’s retro funk influences.

If you are looking for a modern sound to pop in your CD player and kick back to, this album might be it.

known, it is certainly not ecologically beneficial. Moreover, the world needs people who value environmental stewardship and compassion for life; dissection fosters neither.

Perhaps there are a few fields, such as veterinary medicine, for which cutting open and examining the insides of dead animals is indispensable. But how ironic that healthy animals would be killed for students whose professional goal is to save lives and ease suffering.

With all the suffering in the world, should we really be adding to it in our education programs? Is dissection necessary when other learning methods have been shown repeatedly to effectively replace it?

We think not.

as representatives of the next generation of leaders, find our own identity and then take action on that identity.

In closing, I'd like to give you a quote from Franklin D. Roosevelt: "civilization is a tree which as it grows, continually produces rot and dead wood. The radical says: 'Cut it down.' The conservative says, 'Don't touch it.' The liberal compromises: 'Let's prune the tree so that we lose neither the old trunk nor the new branches.'"

Most of this information is taken from American Government: Roots and Reform, by Karen O'Connor and Larry J Sabbath.

joy bringing humor into the classroom." Seiler remarked.

There are up to 25 students in Seiler's classes. She uses this to her advantage.

Seiler is able to sit down and work with her students.

"I enjoy interaction with students. It is through interaction that they become active and involved, not just passive recipients of notes," Seiler said.

Seiler also teaches Culture Civilization this semester. She admits to learning a great deal from this experience.

"In this class I am able to bring in videos, even cd's, related to famous artists or composers. I certainly learn a lot from digging around in the library and searching the internet for new ways to excite my students," Seiler said.

Jan Seiler is a professor that puts in much effort, if not more than students believe.
