Eco Fair highlights Earth Week

By Mike Kemmeter
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

UW-Stevens Point's celebration of Earth Week will end with a bang Friday with the campus' annual Eco Fair.

The all-day event, which runs from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. in the Sundial, is one of the numerous activities several campus organizations planned during the week.

"I think it is important to recognize the whole week of Earth Week," said Allison Plute, co-chair of Earth Week '99. "We're so caught up in school and work that we may not be aware of our responsibility to the Earth."

"Earth Week is a way to increase our awareness of it and even take action."

Plute and fellow co-chair Randy Bekkers helped plan the week-long festivities, which kicked off Monday with a student forum on sustainable living.

Other activities included a composting workshop Tuesday and a speech on environmental racism Wednesday.

"This is the most diverse (Earth Week)," Plute said. "We've tried to work with different groups on campus and we've tried to get more people involved."

Friday's Eco Fair will likely have the most participation of any event during the week.

The Fair will feature four live bands, which will perform from 10:30 a.m.-7 p.m.

Kriewaldt becomes a Lion

Detroit drafts linebacker in sixth round

By Nick Brilowski
SPORTS EDITOR

It would be fair to say that Trivia wasn't the foremost of Clint Kriewaldt's priorities last weekend.

In fact, the only trivia question that he is concerned with is, "Who did the Detroit Lions choose with the 177th overall selection in the 1999 NFL Draft?"

That's because the Pointer linebacker from Shiocton, Wis. is the answer, as the Lions took him with the eighth pick in the sixth round Sunday afternoon.

"It was definitely a nervous time," Kriewaldt said of the waiting and watching process. "We were just worried that a lot of linebackers weren't being picked up."

"It was just sitting around and waiting for the phone to ring. Every time it did my heart started to beat three times as fast."

Kriewaldt

The phone finally did ring just after 1 p.m. Sunday afternoon as a representative from the Lions called Kriewaldt to inform him of their intentions to take him if the St. Louis Rams, who had the previous pick, did not.

"Finally she said, 'They're taking your card up to the podium. It's official, you're a Detroit Lion.' I was really excited."

Kriewaldt, who felt it would come down to either the Lions or the New York Jets that selected him, at first liked the

Senate keeps writing emphasis credits

Students could have option to take all courses in major

By Mike Kemmeter
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

The Faculty Senate is recommending the number of required writing emphasis credits stay the same, but the group wants students to have a different option.

After over an hour of discussion Wednesday, the senate overwhelmingly approved a motion to keep the WE general degree requirement at six credits.

But, if Chancellor George approves the Senate's move, students will now have the option of taking all six credits inside their major.

The change will take effect for all students starting with the 1999-2000 academic year, regardless if they are freshmen or seniors.

Currently, students must take three credits inside and three credits outside of their area of study.

The Academic Affairs committee was recommending that the senate cut the WE requirements from six credits to three.

"I think this is a huge victory for students," said Brett Hazard, Student Government Association academic issues director. "Professor (Ed) Miller's motion (to give students an option) was what students have fought for for a while."

"It makes writing emphasis courses more accessible to students without lowering what students need," said Joe Olson, SGA senator.

A bottleneck of students needing WE courses was one reason for proposing a drop to three credits.

"The information I have is there is a monumental backlog. That's where my dilemma comes in," Vice Chancellor William Meyer said.

With a guideline of 17-21 students per WE section, Meyer said 202 sections would be needed every year if 90 FM, this year's Trivia contest was a competitive one.

"It was the first time in years when the number one team was not the same throughout the entire contest," Mills said. "This year's winning team actually had to fight for first place."

This year's winning team was CNOF54: Runnin' Outta Time, with second and third place winners Tin Man and Nothin' But Network, respectively.

The winning team consisted of about 30 people from all over the nation.

"Everyone on our team specializes in a different area, so we have a wide range of expertise," said Jim Krueger, a member of CNOF54: Runnin' Outta Time.

But according to Krueger, winning isn't everything.

"Trivia was an enjoyable experience not because we won, but because we had a great time doing it."

The 90 FM staff is proud of their involvement with Trivia 30.

"Our staff worked very hard to make Trivia 30 a total success," said Mills.

A minor computer glitch at the beginning of the race threatened to be a problem, but according to Mills, it was fixed immediately.

"Overall, everything went very smoothly, with few problems," said Mills.

Trivia will be back again next year on April 14, 15, 16, 2000.

idea of playing for the Jets but has since realized that the Lions may be the better opportunity.

"I think it's a better situation for me. It's a little bit closer to home," he said.

Pointer head football coach John Miech praised Kriewaldt, saying that he is a role model for other players who can attempt to reach the same goal.

"Clint is an example of if you're good enough, they'll find you," Miech said. "From day one that he stepped on the field, you knew he was something special."

"To have an opportunity to play in the NFL, you have to have some God-given ability. You add that ability to the work ethic and that equals a draft pick in the NFL."

Miech said he originally felt the Jets were the most interested in Kriewaldt's services. Two weeks prior to the draft, he stated that Detroit dropped off to the side and Miami and Dallas stepped up interest.

He also said that the Thursday before the draft 17 teams called to make sure that Kriewaldt was healthy.

Although the draft took place just last weekend, Kriewaldt won't have much time to sit around and think about his opportunity of a lifetime. That is because he will board a flight from Green Bay Thursday morning to participate in a minicamp for all of the team's new draft picks this weekend.

UW-System could see big faculty turnover

By Mike Beacom
MANAGING EDITOR

According to a report presented to UW-System officials earlier this month, nearly 40 percent of its current faculty will retire within the next decade.

The "graying of the faculty" could take almost 2,400 members of the UW-System's faculty.

According to Vice-Chancellor of Academic Affairs Bill Meyer, not only will UW-Stevens Point have to fill vacancies, but it will also likely see an increase in enrollment and therefore an increase in faculty positions.

Meyer also pointed out Wisconsin isn't alone in the problem of faculty aging.

"The problem we're facing is happening across the country," said Meyer. "We're competing against everybody."

UW-SP Chancellor Tom George says the report, presented by the Office of Policy Analysis and Research, is something the university has already considered and planned for.

"We're being very aggressive in hiring young faculty," said George. "It's a problem, but it's one we're starting to address right now."

"Dateline" contacted Dean Phillips for video footage of UW-Stevens Point and a photograph.

Before joining UW-SP, Phillips was a member of the Faculty of Resource Sciences and Technology at the University of Malaysia Sarawak. He began his duties as CNR Dean in the fall of 1999.

students want to graduate in four years.

"We would have to add four writing emphasis courses per department. That's the best numbers that I have," Meyer said.

Meyer said students often have trouble getting a writing emphasis course even though seats are available because the class conflicts with one in their major.

English Professor Don Pattow thinks there's another reason students have had trouble filling the six credit writing emphasis requirement.

"I think we get a lot of students who put off taking writing emphasis courses until their last semester," Pattow said. "If students could take six credits inside their major, it would reduce the backlog to zero, if there is one."

"I think more departments will offer writing emphasis. There's a lot of courses that could be WE," he said.

Don't forget to reduce, reuse, recycle

Dear Editor:

You may not have realized it, but it is Earth Week and it has come to my attention that students on this campus have forgotten some very important R's.

While people are doing great on this campus with recycling, they have seemed to forget that they also need to reduce and reuse.

Without learning to reduce and reuse, the effort to slow our production of solid waste is defeated even before we start.

The Portage County Sanitary Landfill receives about 120 tons of waste per day. At this rate the landfill will close in 2003.

Currently, the recycling industry is seeing a reduced profit and demand for their products.

Recycling should be our last resort. It takes a lot more energy to recycle a soda can than it does to refill soda bottles.

By reducing the amount of waste we create, we may be able to accomplish several objectives.

First, we would reduce the amount of waste we are producing. That, in itself, is a noble endeavor.

Second, with a reduced consumption there would be less to recycle. This could help the market by creating an increased demand and price for post consumer materials.

Be careful of mercury in your fish

Dear Editor:

A level of mercury in fish as small as one part per million can cause health problems.

Mercury is a neurotoxin! It greatly affects the brain and nervous system.

The FDA has imposed this level to help advise people on their dietary intake of fish. Using the FDA guidelines, the DNR has created a fish advisory. In this advisory the DNR suggests the number of meals of fish a person should consume.

To date 330 lakes in Wisconsin are considered mercury contaminated by the DNR. Most of the mercury that enters Wisconsin's lakes comes from airborne means.

The process of mercury deposition is much like that of acid rain, which is carried from smokestacks and falls somewhere down wind. The majority of mercury emitted in the state comes from coal-fired electric facilities, waste incinerators or chemical plants.

Mercury not only enters water through the atmosphere but it is also introduced directly into the water through discharge. Sources include direct discharge from wastewater treatment plants, industrial plants, land run-off and seepage.

However, the industrial wastewater is by far the largest contributor.

So with the fishing season upon us, before eating any fish, check out the DNR advisory.

To help reduce this problem support the "Mercury Cap and Reduction Bill" (Bill LRB-0989). This bill will reduce the mercury emissions in the state by 50 percent by the year 2015.

And then hopefully we won't have to worry about checking the advisory before enjoying a meal of fish.

Turkey hunter almost 'gets lucky'

New experience proves to be memorable, exciting

By Joe Shead
ASSISTANT OUTDOORS EDITOR

Springtime has presented me with an interesting problem. I can't seem to find anyone to go walleye fishing with me anymore, so I decided to try something new.

Okay, technically it's not new. I've tried turkey hunting twice, but never put any heart into it. This year it seems like something totally new and the best thing is, the turkeys are all over 15 inches, so they're all keepers!

Things began on a good note. I pulled into my grandma's driveway the night before my season opened to do a little scouting and saw a turkey in her yard!

My good fortune continued the following morning in the pre-dawn darkness. A bird flew into me. I knew, then, that my camouflage would work.

Although the turkeys weren't vocal the night before and I wasn't able to put one to bed, I just happened to set up within 100 yards of two roosting toms. My luck just kept getting better.

I clucked softly to let the big boys know my hen decoy was ready for business.

As luck would have it, a hen had moved in next to me. She was doing a much better job of sounding like a turkey than my feeble attempts, so I shut up and let her do her thing.

Minutes later, I saw turkey heads bobbing just over a tiny ridge 35 yards behind me. I had turned and was ready, but they were hens. My hen, who had been making all the racket, appeared as well about 25 yards away.

I was feeling pretty good then. Sure, there wasn't anything I could shoot, but turkey hunting is new to me. It's one thing to go out and see a deer during deer season. I've been around deer and deer hunters my entire life. Turkeys are different. I'd never even seen a turkey by my house until three years ago. This was a whole new sport and the fact that I'd been so close to these birds that are still so mysterious to me is rewarding.

There was more to come. After the turkeys passed, I decided to move just into the woods since the birds had passed behind me. My move was rewarded.

Within 10 minutes, another bird waddled into view. Again it was a hen. She crept to within 15 yards of me. I'm used to mentally trying to grow antlers on deer, but this time I was trying to grow a beard. On the bird, I mean.

For reasons still unknown to me, she turned back. It was then that I discovered she wasn't alone. She was accompanied by two toms that appeared to be twice her size. It was truly a wondrous sight. Their beards hung low and their magnificent red heads blazed in the morning light. Unfortunately, 60 yards was all the closer they would get.

The fact that I had seen that many turkeys, nine before I left, amazed me. I couldn't believe a novice like me could see so many turkeys at such a close range. Granted, I didn't get a bird, but the experience was memorable. Next time...

LAKE NESHONOC

By Matt "Bert" Ward
OUTDOORS EDITOR

The UW-Stevens Point subchapter of the American Fisheries Society is once again headed to Lake Neshonoc in La Crosse this weekend to partake in an annual lake assessment program that began in the early 80s by the society.

With the assistance of Mary Temp of the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources and the Lake Neshonoc Protection and Rehabilitation District, the UW-SP Fisheries Society will be able to receive hands-on training using fyke nets throughout the day and boom shocking throughout the night.

Lake Neshonoc is an impoundment, which encompasses approximately 700 acres and has a maximum depth of 11 feet. Ten fyke nets will be initially set Friday morning and will be pulled and reset both Saturday and Sunday mornings. The fish captured by the fyke nets are measured, weighed and then a few scales are removed. The scales are then aged at a later point in time by society members.

Boom shocking techniques will also be learned on Friday or Saturday night. With the assistance of Mary Temp, three Fisheries Society members will get the privilege of climbing aboard a DNR boomshocking boat and electrofishing for about an hour. Recent year's data has shown as many as 14 species of fish are present within the lake. Large populations of black crappie and common carp are common, along with smaller populations of bluegill, walleye, northern pike and largemouth bass.

The over abundance of common carp is a growing concern of many area La Crosse residents, due to their ability to uproot aquatic vegetation and inhibit spawning activities of desired gamefish present within the lake. The Lake Neshonoc Project is performed annually to provide Fisheries Society members with valuable field experience and so the Lake Neshonoc Lake Association can more fully understand what is occurring beneath the surface of their lake.

Fisheries Society studies also aid fisheries management efforts, help determine species diversity and acquire average length and weight data to further evaluate the fishery. Efforts are also aimed at reducing the lakes ever present common carp population by relocating them to a new residence in a local farmer's field.

Fisheries Society members get the opportunity to observe fish and get better acquainted with each other. (Submitted photo)

Conservation Reserve Program great for farmers, wildlife

By Ryan Volenberg
OUTDOORS REPORTER

The Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) was developed during the Reagan administration under the Federal Farm Bill, in hopes of boosting grain prices by paying farmers to take land out of production. This program, developed in 1985, has had many advantages other than just agriculture.

The CRP has created 36 million acres of new habitat in the U.S., which in turn has helped lift waterfowl and upland bird populations to record levels.

CRP means different things to different people. To UW-Stevens Point Wildlife Professor Jim Hardin it means, "Dependable, permanent cover for wildlife." It might, however, mean something totally different to a farmer.

The program pays farmers $50-90 per acre, depending on the soil type, to take land out of agricultural production. With a 10-year commitment by farmers, different plant and wildlife species have a large window of opportunity to establish themselves in the area, without the possibility of disturbance often caused by certain agricultural practices such as plowing.

Some of the benefits to wildlife include cover and nesting (especially during the winter), high invertebrate populations that serve as a food source to many animals and excellent vegetation diversity. Many species of wildlife take advantage of these lands to temporarily suspend CRP 337. Game farm owners believe CRP 337 would put an economic crunch on them and others in the business, forcing them to increase fees and cause many to go out of business. The question the DOA is trying to answer is, is it fair for game farm owners to charge people to hunt on their land and still collect money from CRP

Farmers aren't the only group of individuals taking advantage of

to temporarily suspend CRP 337. Game farm owners believe CRP 337 would put an economic crunch on them and others in the business, forcing them to increase fees and cause many to go out of business. The question the DOA is trying to answer is, is it fair for game farm owners to charge people to hunt on their land and still collect money from CRP funds?

Regardless of the controversies with the Conservation Reserve Program, it has undoubtedly proven to have a huge ecological impact on the environment, ranging from decreasing soil erosion, siltation and runoff, to increasing wildlife habitat. It has been one of the largest environmental success stories of the past century.

"CRP lands do an excellent job of supporting grassland food chains."

—Jim Hardin, wildlife professor such as waterfowl (60 percent increase of ducks in past decade), gamebirds (pheasant populations more than doubled in many states), songbirds, small mammals and many, many more.

"CRP lands do an excellent job of supporting grassland food chains," Hardin said.

The CRP, which was re-authorized as a part of the 1996 Federal Farm Bill, now focuses more on the ecological impact rather than the agricultural/economic impact of the 1985 Bill. Currently, the main objective is to the economic rewards of CRP. Game Farms have also been allowed to collect CRP money. But anyone planning to hunt pheasants on a game preserve this year may observe an increase of fees. The Department of Agriculture (DOA) authorized CRP 337, in which CRP payments would be suspended to commercial game farm owners. This bill was supposed to take affect in January, but before that could happen the North American Gamebird Association and others met with the DOA, resulting in a decision

Herpetology Society show a success

Over 1,200 people came to see the various reptiles

By Annie Scheffen
OUTDOORS REPORTER

The Herpetology and Wildlife Societies herpetology show was held last Saturday in front of the vivarium in the CNR building.

"The show was a huge success," commented Neal Halstead, co-vice president of the Herpetology Society. "We had more than 1,200 people come through to see the animals. It helped that Trivia was this weekend. I think many of those people attended the show and helped make it fun."

There were many animals at the show and they were all a big hit with the children. The kids were able to get their pictures taken with the pythons and even had the opportunity to hold some of the harmless snakes.

"Some of the kids had never been around snakes, much less hold them," said Halstead. "It was a very positive experience for them to overcome their fears about snakes and reptiles. Some of the kids walked around for hours holding the snakes, and my mom even held one."

There were many different kinds of slithery creatures including rattlesnakes, boa constrictors and of course, pythons. They even had a rhinosaurus vipor, albino bullsnake and a black rat snake.

The animals mainly belonged to members of the Herpetology Society and they were the ones responsible for them. They did however, have two guest speakers from Racine, Wisc., and another from Germantown, Wisc. Both had animals and stories to tell about them.

Along with the animals, the Herpetology Society also set up a makeshift gift shop where they sold rubber balls and pencil wraps in the shapes of reptiles and amphibians. It was a day of fun for kids and interest for adults.

Dominating pitching continues to lead Pointer baseball

UW-Stevens Point continues to roll as winning streak reaches 12 games

SPORTS REPORTER

Getting solid pitching and solid hitting at the same time are two ingredients of a good baseball team, and the UW-Stevens Point baseball team seems to have found the perfect mix.

Winners of their last 12 games and 19-6 overall, the Pointers move into the final stretch of their schedule looking to challenge for a WIAC crown.

UW-SP pitching has rendered just seven runs in the past eight games, whereas the offense has come alive with 65 runs over the same span.

Pointer pitcher Chris Simonson feels that the switch to the wooden bats has meant a significant change to the pitchers' advantage.

"It does a lot," he said. "You can be a lot more aggressive and challenge hitters and afford to make some mistakes."

The Pointers traveled to Mequon Tuesday to take on Concordia University and came away with a pair of lopsided wins by the scores of 10-0 and 10-3.

The Pointers traveled to UW-Platteville on Saturday for a pair of key WIAC contests and used strong pitching performances by Simonson and Justin Duerkop to come away with a sweep, 3-0 and 14-0.

In the opener, Simonson went the distance, allowing just two hits to earn his third win of the season.

The only offense the Pioneers could muster was an infield dribbler just past Simonson in the fourth and a bloop hit to right in the seventh.

Jon Winter and Pat McCann had two hits apiece for the Pointers who tallied once in the second and twice in the fourth.

In the nightcap, Duerkop matched Simonson's two-hitter, while striking out eight and walking none in the 14-0 romp.

Though the change in bats took a little while for Point hitters to adjust, they have begun to hit the ball like they're capable of, Simonson said.

"The last couple of games they put a lot of runs on the board," he said. "Hopefully that will continue throughout conference (season), it will snowball and be contagious."

Point got on the board early and often as they put up five runs in the first, highlighted by Chris Berndt's three-run homer, en route to the blowout victory.

Berndt and Pat McCann each had three hits for UW-SP.

The Pointers played host to Marian College on Thursday and came way with 1-0 and 7-1 wins.

Adam Adamovich tossed a six-hit shutout in game one as Mike McCann provided the lone offense for the Pointers with a RBI Overcast weekends continue to affect Pointer sports teams, but the track and field teams are adapting. With the men and women splitting for the weekend, the men's throwing team traveled with the women's team down to UW-Whitewater for the Warhawk Invite, while the rest of the men traveled south to the Augustana Meet of Champions in Rock Island, Illinois.

"We had a very good meet at Whitewater," women's head coach Len Hill said. "We had good performances, despite the weather."

"As soon as we have some good weather, we'll be in great shape. We're starting to lighten the training and their intensity is up."

In the field, thrower Sara Groshek hauled in another dominating meet as she scored 27 points for UW-SP and earned a provisional mark in the javelin event with her throw of 130-feet-1-inch.

For the distance team, Amanda Miller crossed the finish line of the 10,000 meter run in 42:25.90 earning second place overall and a personal best in both the 10K and her split in the 5K.

While the Point women racked up 79.83 points to place fifth at Whitewater, the Pointer men raced in 128.5 overall team points, not including how the throwers scored at Whitewater, to take second place and defeat powerhouse UW-Oshkosh by two points.

"We had a really good meet," men's head coach Rick Witt said as he counted up the 40 season's bests earned at the meet. "I can't complain at all, despite the weather conditions."

"Even with the thrower's 34 points, we still would have beaten Oshkosh, who only scored 14 at Whitewater."

Included within the many season's bests, Larry Aschebrook won the javelin in 189-2, Jesse Maynard took first in the pole vault after leaping 16-2 and Mike Hamilton jumped 21-10 in the long to place second overall.

This weekend, Point will be well represented at the Drake Relays by Groshek and Aschebrook in individuals, and Matt Hayes, Chris

Thoughts from the Dawg House... Bucks need to seize their opportunities

By Nick Brilowski
SPORTS EDITOR

As another NBA regular season quickly winds to a close, the Milwaukee Bucks find themselves in a situation they aren't very accustomed to — playoff contention.

The main problem for the Bucks isn't that they haven't been in this situation in seven years, it's that you just never know which type of team is going to show up on that particular night.

On one hand there is the team that defeats Eastern Conference leader Orlando by 12, and on the other, the team that looks completely uninspired while scoring just 77 points to the Dickey Simpkins-led Chicago Bulls.

Entering action against Central Division leader Indiana on Wednesday night, Milwaukee found themselves just 1.5 games out of the fourth spot in the East and an opportunity for home-court advantage in the first round. But, they were also just two games away from being in 11th place in the jumbled East.

There's no question the talent is there. Glenn Robinson and Ray Allen are one of the best duos in the league. Haywoode Workman has been a blessing at point guard after coming off a serious knee injury. Though currently suffering from back spasms, Dell Curry has been one of the best off-season pickups throughout the NBA.

There's no telling when, or if, point guard Sam Cassell will be able to return from his resprained ankle. The Bucks could desperately use him, but would it be too late in the season to find that chemistry that is very much needed during the playoff push?

Milwaukee needs to realize they have to come to play every night, not just in the fourth quarter when they usually decide to get things going.

With just over two weeks remaining in the regular season, coach George Karl, now more than ever, needs to get his team to play to their potential.

Face it, Milwaukee hasn't seen postseason play from any of its teams in a long time. The Admirals and Mustangs don't count.

Softball splits with Titans

By Michelle Tesmer
SPORTS REPORTER

The UW-Stevens Point softball team saw their tournament in Illinois cancelled this past weekend where they were looking to sharpen their skills against five tough teams.

Without the tourney, the team traveled to UW-Oshkosh Tuesday where the Titans stunned UW-SP in the first of two games.

The Pointers broke open the scoring in the third. Cari Briley and Jill Van Wychen both singled and Holly Kruit brought them home with a double for a 2-0 lead.

However, Oshkosh bounced back in the bottom of the third with a run of their own to make it 2-1.

Michelle Gerber singled with two outs in the fourth to start a Point rally. After advancing to second on a passed ball, Gerber took advantage of a Kelly Rutta single to score Point's third run of the game.

That was all Oshkosh allowed, as they shut down the Pointers' offensive attack. In the bottom of the sixth, the Titans mounted their comeback by scoring two runs to tie the game up at 3-3. This was the opening they needed to drive the stake home in the bottom of the seventh to win 4-3.

The Pointers got their revenge in the second game as they started the scoring in the first. Kruit scored on a Gerber hit to give Point the lead. That was all UW-SP would need as Jen Schaper took control and got the shutout.

Runs scored in the second and fifth by Rutta and Melissa Mullins respectively gave the Pointers a three-run cushion going into the seventh. Point added three more runs in the last inning to win the game 6-0.

The win snapped UW-SP's three game losing streak and it was their eighth shutout of the year.

This weekend the Pointers host the UW-SP Invitational.

Kriewaldt eager to make an impact

By Nick Brilowski
SPORTS EDITOR

Clint Kriewaldt doesn't exactly know what to expect when he takes off for his first minicamp as a Detroit Lion on Thursday morning. What he does know is that he is elated to have the opportunity.

The Pointer linebacker from Shiocton is still flying high after the Lions drafted him Sunday in the sixth round with the 177th overall selection.

When asked Tuesday if it had sunk in yet that he was on an NFL roster, Kriewaldt said, "I don't think so. I'm still on cloud nine. I don't feel real good right now because I'm so excited. There's so much adrenaline flowing."

Represented by agent Michael Bauer from Madison, Kriewaldt isn't exactly sure what will transpire at the minicamp this weekend, but he doesn't expect anything very strenuous, likely some drills in a t-shirt and shorts.

"I'm not sure what to expect. Probably a lot of classroom stuff. I'm not sure what's really going to happen yet."

Clint Kriewaldt (42) will participate in his first minicamp as a Detroit Lion this weekend. (Photo by Nathan T. Wallin)

Even though he has a long list of accomplishments at UW-Stevens Point including being the school's all-time leading tackler, earning first-team all-conference four times and being named to numerous All-American teams, Kriewaldt understands that he may be behind a little bit compared to his Division I teammates.

However, he does feel that Pointer head coach John Miech and the rest of the UW-SP coaching staff have done a good job getting him ready for his big chance.

"They prepare everyone on the team for a chance like this," Kriewaldt said of the coaches. "They got me prepared for this type of situation."

Miech also credited his staff

Golfers aim sights on fall season

By Jessica Burda
SPORTS REPORTER

Working to improve on last season, the UW-Stevens Point golf team teed-off against several conference and midwest teams in the Spring Tune-Up tournament Saturday.

Held at the Mill Run golf course in Eau Claire, the Pointers finished with an overall team score of 384.

Kathryn Carlson led her teammates on the 18-hole course, completing the day with 90, only 18 strokes over par. On the heels of Carlson, Jill Brenengen and Lea Haas tied for the day after bringing in 97 apiece for Point.

Coach Scott Frazier is looking ahead to next year as he continues to recruit.

"We've got four or five good (recruits)," said Frazier. "We'll need them to give the rest of the team a push."

As for the current spring performances, Frazier is pleased with his athletes, like Carlson, that have been putting in extra time to improve their swing and showing their improvement in the recent away meets.

In between roadtrips, the Pointers are working with new assistant coach and PGA member Greg Johnson.

Providing computer assisted analysis of the players' swings, Johnson is helping the Pointer women to fine-tune their play.

Up next for the Pointers, UW-SP heads to Winona State on Friday.

Rally set to 'Take Back the Night'

By Jessica Burda
SPORTS EDITOR

At a time when hate in our nation seems to be never-ending, members of the UW-Stevens Point student body are taking a stand against this violence.

"Shed light on our fight: Take Back the Night," is this year's theme of the 10th annual Take Back the Night rally.

The rally, which features guest speakers on domestic abuse and violence in relationships, will take place Wednesday, April 28 in the UW-SP Sundial.

Kicking off at 5:30 p.m. with folksinger Judy Gorman and later including campus and community artistic expression, the rally will provide an outlet for everyone involved to speak out against violence and educate themselves.

Following the Sundial events, a group march through the campus after dark will lead rally participants to the University Center for a performance by celebrated vocalist/musician Alice Di Micele.

The concert begins at 9 p.m. and will conclude this year's Take Back the Night rally.

They'll play Earth Day, Plasmic Style

Popular campus band plays finale before goodbye

By Tracy Marhal
ASSISTANT FEATURES EDITOR

Rusty's Backwater Saloon was the first place the Plasmic Style Coalition publicly presented what guitarist/vocalist Eric Herro describes as "plasmic and coalitious." Their music.

The sarcastic description Herro gave for their name fits right along with the explanation he gave for how the band derived its name.

"It was a bloody evening, very bloody, with lots of bats! And that's how the 'plasmic' fits in. And we had to advertise our style; four people creating a bold coalition of noise."

Coalition's music was eventually described by band members as "a get down dirty, rockin', jammin', funk."

That funk, produced by Herro and fellow bandmates Ben Ulman, Vince Farris and Brynt Ward started gaining popularity several months during basement party performances.

That popularity spread to shows at Rusty's, Witz End, the Basement Brewhaus and the Sundial.

Farris is the only member of the band who will not be graduating in May. And the Plasmic's members do not intend to keep the music going after graduation.

"I'm going to miss playing shows where everyone comes out with this big smile on their face," said Herro.

Encore to host Ska Fest

1999 Fest includes MU330

Centertainment Productions' Ska Fest will bring the ska performers MU330 and Free For All to the Encore stage.

MU330 has been performing ska music in the Midwest since 1988. Dan Pottahast, Ted Moll, Chris Diebold, Rob Bell and Gerry Lundquist have performed at more than 1,200 concerts in the United States alone. In recent years, the band has traveled and performed for audiences throughout Europe.

MU330 will perform music from their three albums, including "Press," "Chumps on Parade" and "Now/Jason." Free For All, MU330's traveling partner, will open this headline event.

The Ska Fest will begin at 8 p.m. on Friday, April 23 in The Encore. The cost for the event will be $2 for students w/ID and $4 for non-students.

Students in Spain enjoy spring break

By Mandi Serch
OVERSEAS CORRESPONDENT

UW-Stevens Point students studying in Spain are now back in classes, recovering from a two-week spring break.

Students were on spring break from March 26- April 11, but were required to participate in a Madrid Study Tour for the first 2½ days.

A professor from Madrid led the tour. Students visited the Prado and Reina Sofia art museums, as well as a theatre production of "Bodas de Sangre" (in English, literally "Weddings of Blood"). A Spanish movie replaced a walking tour of Madrid due to rain, and depending on students' personal feelings, attendance of a bullfight was optional.

For the majority of the students who chose to attend the bullfight, it was their first one. Students shared mixed feelings about the event.

Stacy Woytasik was disturbed by the fact that not all of the bullfighters were able to kill the bull right away, resulting in a slow death for the animal.

"When I arrived in Spain I knew that I wouldn't be able to leave without having seen a bull

What's in a name? – Steiner Hall

Prof only person to have two halls named in his honor

By Mike Kemmeter
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Although Trivia is over for another year, Herbert Steiner is the answer to a pretty good question.

The former history professor is the only person to have two different residence halls named after him.

After Steiner died in 1955, UW-Stevens Point built what is now South Hall and named it after Steiner. But when enrollments decreased in the late 70s, the hall closed and was nearly sold to a private group.

At the same time, a large nature reserve was being dedicated after Fred Schmeekle, who already had a residence hall named for him. So with the current South Hall on the selling block, university officials named the old Schmeekle Hall after Steiner.

But trivia aside, Steiner made numerous contributions to

Steiner

UW-SP.

A Stevens Point Normal School graduate in 1910, Steiner returned to his alma mater in 1918 to head the two-member history department.

Steiner never left, serving at UW-SP until his death. At the time, his 37 years on the faculty was the second longest tenure to May Roach.

Besides his work in the classroom, which included overseeing both history and social science, Steiner was the dean of men until 1953.

He was also active in the community and loved sports. He refereed high school athletics for many years in the Wisconsin Valley Conference and was a member of the Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic Association's rules committee.

Steiner helped charter the local Lions Club and served as their first president. He also was a chair for Red Cross drives and directed choirs at several area churches.

But Steiner is also known for a story from his college days.

As a student at Stevens Point Normal, Steiner was to speak at an event. He was a member of the

Success with Weight Management

Weight loss is a goal that many strive to attain, yet 95 percent of people who attempt to lose weight fail. We all practice weight management, but some of us have to work harder than others.

As a society we need to shift our paradigm regarding weight management to include life-style changes in exercise, nutrition, and stress management.

Exercise provides many more benefits than weight loss alone. Exercise increases self-esteem, increases energy and can reduce your risk of developing disease.

Exercise includes any activity that burns calories and is fun to do.

In balancing nutrition with exercise, follow this simple strategy: calories in equals calories out.

If you are consuming more calories than you are expending through physical activity, weight is difficult to manage.

Stress, if not managed constructively, can negatively effect weight management.

Not managing stress results in nervous eating, overeating, lack of appetite, poor choices in activity sleep and balance in daily activities.

Managing stress involves finding an activity that helps you relax such as exercise, meditation, breathing exercises or yoga.

Finally, to be successful with weight management, don't focus on weight loss as a goal. Focusing on numbers will be distracting and de-motivating.

Focus instead on exercise, nutrition and stress management to maintain your health.

Tastes of the Towne Mickey's

By Ethan Meyer
RESTAURANT CRITIC

Of all the options for pizza in the area, Mickey's on Second Street turns out to be one of the places to go, if you are looking for something beyond the mass produced boxed variety that most of us are accustomed to.

The place was bustling with business when my dinner companion and I arrived on Tuesday evening. We were greeted at the door by a gentleman that I assumed to be the proprietor of the establishment, and immediately seated.

Our waitress arrived promptly, offering drinks and menus. I was quite interested in sampling many of the entrees that were on the menu. Among them were mostacholli, frog legs and crab stuffed flounder. I had been previously convinced to try the pizza.

Our large chicken caccitorie pizza arrived in about 15 minutes, and we proceeded to dig in. I noticed that there was something unique about the taste of the pizza, but couldn't put my finger on it until my companion pointed out that the sauce had the definite

The Matrix: a visual masterpiece

By Nick Katzmarek
FILM CRITIC

The users at the Internet Movie Database (www.imdb.com) have determined that The Matrix is the greatest movie of all time, displacing The Shawshank Redemption.

Well, the movie was excellent, but let's not go overboard. While IMDB.com is a respected website, discriminating moviegoers will realize that special effects cannot be the sole determiner in a film's greatness.

That being said, it's important to note that The Matrix has a few shortcomings, namely in the person of Keanu Reeves.

Reeves has perfected the art of looking good in pictures, and this film is no exception. He fits the bill perfectly as Neo, the main savior type character.

But his acting really leaves a bit to be desired, as it does for all of the players in this movie.

They all give understated performances and while that can be a good thing, the over-the-top FX in the film demanded at least some emotion from the characters.

The cast includes newcomer Carrie-Ann Moss and Laurence Fishburn as the only real notables, and they are mediocre at best from an acting standpoint.

All of that aside, I wholeheartedly recommend The Matrix. It is a visual delight and deserves the attention it is getting, because the Wachowski brothers have put together an astounding collection of imagery and technological mastery.

And if you can get past the less-than-unified plot and the average acting, you'll leave the theatre with a smile on your face, and an aching back from sitting on the edge of your seat.

Bachelor Party
(1984, 106 min.)

Before Tom Hanks hit it Big and became a back-to-back Oscar winner for Philadelphia and Forrest Gump, he was best known for his over-the-wall slapstick comedic performances.

In 1984's Bachelor Party, Hanks is at the climax of that period with his portrayal of a bus driver who's settled down and becomes engaged to an upper-class girl.

Her family and ex-boyfriend would like nothing better than to see Hanks screw up the engagement, but he and his bride-to-be (Tawny Kitaen) are crazy about each other.

The only thing that might screw up their wedding day plans are the plans Hanks' friends have for his bachelor party. Loud music, drugs and prostitutes all play a key role in the festivities.

Bachelor Party is full of laughs and seeing Hanks from his earlier days is worth renting.

Oleander not into image

Oleander
"February Son"

By Steven Schoemer
MUSIC CRITIC

Down to earth with an attitude is the first thing that comes to mind when hearing Oleander's newest album "February Son."

I want to say Oleander has an alternative sound, but unfortunately "alternative music" is no longer "the music alternative."

It would be safer to describe it as more of a Seattle-type sound. The album seems to contain strong influences from bands such as Nirvana, Smashing Pumpkins and The Meat Puppets.

Even though all of those influences are present, influences that have been driven into the ground, there is something fresh about this band.

Most of the subject matter is surprisingly down to earth, and is delivered with driving intensity by the the music and singer Thomas Flowers.

What I mean is when you listen to the songs (I mean really listen to them, not just play the disc in the background at a party) you get that feeling in the pit of your chest that just says 'Hell yeah!'

Oleander is Thomas Flowers on vocals and guitar, Rick Ivanisevich on guitar, Fred Nelson Jr. on drums, and Doug Eldridge on bass.

These guys aren't putting up some kind of ridiculous front either.

There are no bizarre pictures of them in the sleeve trying to portray themselves as skull splitting tough guys.

In fact, the only picture of the band at all is a one inch by one inch photo that you have to squint at to see clearly.

This is definitely a band to check out. They are packed with energy but at the same time they keep it real.

In the end, they aren't about some far-fetched image. They give you their music and let you do with it what you want.

"It's a credit to Todd Hoffner, our defensive coordinator, and Steve Day, the linebackers coach," Miech said. "It assured us that we were teaching these players the right way."

Miech also stated that Kriewaldt's being drafted is a big help to the UW-SP program, both in terms of recruiting and getting current players recognized. Pro scouts who come to see a player at the Division III level are then obligated to return to that school for the next five years.

"What a young man like Clint Kriewaldt does, is he's an exceptional role model. He's a name in the state and people want to be like Clint. We'll use it in recruiting big time."
