Brick Dick goes limp New one to be erected

By Dick Incider
UW-SP ESCAPEE

UW-Stevens Point's old one-eye that has spewed for over 30 years is no more.

The big brick smokestack that rests atop the George Stien Building, which students call "the brick dick," collapsed Tuesday afternoon and forced university officials to begin plans to construct a new unit.

One university official wasn't shocked that the smokestack keeled over. "The 'brick dick' has been going for so long, spitting smoke all day and all night since the 1960s," said Woody Hahrdonn, a university custodian. "What did you expect? I don't know anybody or anything that can keep it up for that long."

Students across campus were saddened by the news of the smokestack's demise.

UW-SP sets example in problem solving Bulletin boards to solve major social problems

By Ima Liar
THUMB TACK SUCKER

UW-Stevens Point has drawn statewide attention with its answer to the recent problem of hate crimes. Residential Living's solution to utilize bulletin boards to educate students has been hugely successful.

Shortly after the bulletin boards were put up in the dorms, all hate crimes stopped and those responsible for these acts came forward and asked for help.

"Those bulletin boards really made me respect people even though they may be queer," said Ginger Vitis, student.

"I no longer have hateful thoughts and I think that everyone is beautiful even though they are different, all thanks to bulletin boards," added Vitis.

Opium den beneath Sundial

By Ellas Junkie
BEER BOOZER

The Archeological community was turned upside down last December when UW-Stevens Point anthropology professor Donald Fadner released a report detailing the discovery of a prehistoric sight beneath the Sundial.

Apparently, Fadner stumbled across the ruin while returning home from a night of binge drinking on the square with university colleagues Ruth Dorgan and Arthur Hopper.

"We were all drunk off our asses and decided to cut across the Sundial because it was so cold," said Fadner. "When we got to the middle, Ruth and Art decided it would be funny to pull up the storm sewer grate."

Not to be outdone, the inebriated Fadner crawled down the shaft into the black abyss below. Falling to his knees, Fadner ignited his Harley Davidson Zippo to shed a dim but illuminating light on his surroundings.

Much to his surprise, Fadner found himself kneeling in what appeared to be fossilized mammoth droppings. Fadner said that he was so excited he immediately yelled to his colleagues, "I've found some really cool shit down here."

Hopper's grinning face appeared above the round opening. "Let's smoke it," yelled Hopper.

After procuring a pipe from Dorgan's purse, Fadner filled the bowl with what he believed to be ancient shit. Being joined in the sewer by the others, the three-some took turns inhaling the suspected drug.

"Suddenly," explained Fadner, "everything became very clear. It was not some kind of hairy elephant shit we were smoking, but some of the best damned opium you could ever imagine."

"We were so fucked up that we decided to explore the shaft a little further and soon we had stumbled across a vast network of catacombs."

Fadner describes the tunnels as being "adorned with velvet frescoes" and "furnished with luxurious pillows and oil burning

Chancellor George applies for principal position at SPASH

By Aunt Agonist
JABBA JAW

Chancellor Thomas George may be leaving UW-Stevens Point after all. According to sources, George has applied to be SPASH's new principal.

"We have to start correcting socially unacceptable behavior at a young age, and where better to start than at a high school where most deviant behavior manifests," said George. "We have to curb the number of bigots and racists who come to college and I am going to take out the SPASH trash," added George.

George, who will be taking a significant pay cut if he gets the job, said that he would supplement his income by coaching the SPASH hockey team and driving trucks.

"This will be a great opportunity for me to realize my childhood dreams of being a trucker," explained George. "I always wanted a gut and to stop at truck stops," added George.

"I nearly peed in my pants when I heard the news," said Jeffrey Buhrandt, 90 FM's station manager. "The chancellor has always had some good ideas, but this one takes the cake."

The Chancellor's wife, Barbara Harbach, is supportive of George's decision.

"Tommy has always had a wild and unpredictable side to him. I am not surprised that it finally came out in the open," said Harbach.

SPASH administrators have yet to respond to the Chancellor's application.

PENIS recognizes new student organizations

Five of the 11 newly formed student organizations at UW-Stevens Point have been recognized by the organization People Everywhere Need Inspired Students (PENIS)

All five organizations are headed by UW-SP student Andrew Bushard and have a membership consisting of almost 90 percent of the campus population. The umbrella organization, Protesters Anonymous acts as a support group for students addicted to protesting.

Other organizations include the Federation without Computers, Tree Huggers "R" Us, Yahtzee

Club and Letter Writing Coalition. "These new organizations signify a new era in student involvement," said Cindy Polzin, newly elected SGA president.

"After my first meaningless protest, I was an addict. I wake up chanting and sometimes I crave getting mace in my face so much I break into cold sweat," said Emma Freesoul, student.

PENIS recognized this organization for its outstanding workshops on "Safe Sex while Protestng" and "How to deal with Dick Head Authority Figures."

Theater Department presents nude musical

UW-Stevens Point's Theater department will perform a musical entitled "Exorcising the Nude in You." The musical explores ugliness of the human body and tells the story about the persecution of artists who dared to draw and exhibit nudes in a public courtyard during the Victorian era.

"When I saw the script, I knew we just had to perform it because of the many moral lessons it conveys," said Thomas Nevins of the theater department.

The morals Nevins speaks of are a reflection of the department's stance on curbing artistic freedom and admiring the human form.

"Call it tits, boobs or breasts, but those things should be constrained, hidden and never see the light of day. Breasts are the cause of all our social problems," said Nevins.

The much-anticipated musical will feature original scores by Benjamin Peterson, a music student. The theme song, "Sins of Nudity" will feature a full orchestra and is already available on compact discs.

"The music and lyrics are moving and powerful and I just adore the puritanical sound of the scores. The animalistic rhythm synergizes with the innocence of the flute and conveys a very poignant message of sexual frustration," said Arric Otzelberger, 90 F.M.'s music director.

"My work is my contribution to society and my effort to educate kids on the harmful effects of nudity. If we

protest diversity

By Robin Racist
100% REPUBLICAN

The Young Republicans Against Diversity (YRAD) will be holding "straight, white, protestant male week" next week.

"We're tired of being pushed around by those queers and smelly foreigners; it's not like they'll be controlling the government any time soon," said Joseph McCarthy, Jr.

Festivities for the week include a Pat Buchanan dress-up day, mourning dove barbecue, superiority march, a speaker from Bob Jones University and lobbying for white male history week.

"Everyone fails to recognize the importance of the white males in American history," said McCarthy. "Diversity causes a lot of problems in this world. If we were all one uniform type of people, there would be no racism, war, or any bad French movies. Things would be perfect if everyone was like me."

Members of YRAD argue that UW-Stevens Point is the perfect test case for their "perfect world" because the campus is so damn close to uniformity already.

"If you take away the exchange students on this campus, the majority of students are eligible to join our club—except for the women, who should be in the kitchen anyway, not in my political science classes," said Newt Herd.

A handful of young college democrats and minority students have formed a militia to retaliate against all the YRAD members during "straight, white, protestant male week."

"We have plans to stick nails under the tires of their beamers, replace their aged scotch with concentrated urine and vanilla extract, and set fire to the golf course," said young college democrat Sharon Carpets.

"Straight, white, protestant, male week" begins April 2.

Schmeeckle soon to be parking lot

By Screeching Pretzel
PARKING ANALYST

In response to a rash of student parking complaints, UW-Stevens Point Parking Services has developed plans to alleviate parking problems. Students will soon enjoy free parking and a large new lot.

Plans to level the Schmeeckle Reserve for a new parking lot go into effect May 1.

"I'm sick of those damn hippies running this school, a new parking lot will benefit all the students on this campus," said Parking Services captain Richard Cuning. "Besides, I can't think of a better way to stop all the hate mail we've been receiving."

Many students and faculty of the College of Natural Resources (CNR) are pissed off about the wildlife destruction. Other CNR students agree with the proposal.

"The expense of picking up all the roaches and zip-lock bags from the reserve was just too great," said Autumn Summers, CNR professor.

"None of us really wanted to go to Schmeeckle in the middle of February anyway," said CNR major Rose Powers. "It's much easier to look at animals and plants behind glass."

Many students are worried that the new lot will increase the cost of parking on campus, but in fact the clearcutting of Schmeeckle will provide enough funds for free parking on all campus lots. Lumber from the reserve will be sold to the paper mill, and Sentury signed a contract to pay for parking rights in the summer.

One group disappointed by the transition is campus security.

"I'm really going to miss chasing all those naked college chicks away from Lake Joanis this summer," said Harry Peters a Protective Services officer.

lava lamps." Also, Fadner recalls "there was always a reassuring hint of incense in the air."

Hopper remembers the experience quite differently saying, "I was freaking out. He told me we were smoking monkey shit or something. Ruth kept chanting some kind of Merlin prophecy mumbo jumbo bullshit. I was so f**ked up and I got so scared that I wet my pants."

Hopper will retire this spring.

Fadner believes he has discovered an ancient opium den that predates any other structure discovered in the Americas by some 3000 years.

"If this is true, it destroys everything we know or think we know about the early inhabitants of Stevens Point," said Fadner

"I'd like to uncover a prehistoric man out there in the muck at the bottom of the Lake Joanis. I'd like to get a look at his eyes and see if they're as red as mine. I'd like to cut open his stomach and see if there are a bunch of chips and pizza in there. Only then will we know the truth."

Fadner will be presenting a symposium at the Mission Coffee House on April 12.

Student wants to rule world. Yeah, right.

I am tired of the poor treatment I have received at this university. Ever since I came here people have not done things the way I wanted them. Can you believe that?

It's futile to resist me. I will dominate the communications department. From there, the university is mine.

I'm already in at 90 FM. Shall I unveil my evil plan? I probably shouldn't tell you, but when "trivia" is being held, I won't be broadcasting questions. No, no. I will be sending out hypnotic messages. Since trivia is the world's largest trivia contest, I'm sure I can reach most Earthlings and take over the world!!! Ha ha ha! Ha ha ha ha! Ha ha. Ha. Ha ha.

My next step will be to control the print media. Oh, my dear friends at The Pointer, why don't you like me? Your editor can't protect you forever. I will get in at The Pointer too, even if I have to climb through the window.

People of Earth, my day is coming. Just you wait. The world will be mine. Just please give me back my shoes.

OUTTA SHEAD'S BUTT

Some weird junk on campus

In honor of the zaniness that goes along with The Pointless this week, I've decided to compose a list of these freakish, but real things on campus.

1. The iron rod in the tree in front of Nelson Hall. Um, why?
2. The red square in the mosaic on the CNR. Everyone remembers this favorite from freshman orientation. So did you ever find it?
3. The sticky door to the CCC. Isn't it funny how many times freshmen trying to get into the CCC thought the door was locked, then form a big line to get in the wrong door at exactly 10 minutes to the hour when people are fleeing from class? They stand there looking stupid as you yank the "locked" door open and go to class.
4. The ladder in the 3rd floor men's bathroom in the Comm. Building. I couldn't help but wonder what was at the top. Curious? Go check for yourself.
5. The mini-van by the Comm. Building. This van never moves. It sits and rusts year after year but is never driven. I couldn't wait to write about this, but last week, I actually saw someone drive it.
6. The Sundial. If it's a sundial, where are the numbers?
7. The tunnel. Yes, there really is an underground tunnel on campus. I won't say where.
8. The pendulum. Will this thing ever stop or could it replace the Energizer battery?
9. The door that goes nowhere. This door on the north side of the Comm. Building even has a porch, yet there is only a wall behind it.
10. The Georgian Suite. Chancellor George has his own apartment on campus.

Health Services bad? I'm so sure

Hey, like what's the big deal with Health Services? Last week I had this sore throat. Dude, it was way nasty. So I'm like, you guys, what should I do and they're all like, we've totally got this health place on campus and since we're like all fresh meat, I mean freshmen, we like had never tried it.

So I asked this guy about Health Services because he's like a senior and all (and he was like melt in your mouth hot) and I'm like so is this place cool and he's all dude, totally, so I'm like rad,

I'm going there.

So I walked away from him and like him and all his friends are laughing, but I'm totally thinking it's because he's got like a crush on me or something.

So I like went to Health Services and I'm like, dude, I've got this sore throat and then the doctor is like, well, you need to see a gynecologist and he said he's like the only one in town. So I'm all, like, go ahead, ya know, 'cuz it would suck if anything was wrong.

So he started doing all these things and then that's when it hit me that like, dude, my sore throat was totally better and I didn't even notice. But he was being so professional. I didn't want to distract him. So like when he was done with my exam I'm all like thanks so much and he smiled and said he was just doing his job.

So like what I don't understand is why does everyone pick on Health Services? Duh, they're just doing their job.

Students not living up to expectations

I am very disappointed with the education my son, Michael Andrew Simonton III has received thus far at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point. I sent Michael to your university, knowing that it was nationally accredited and was held in the highest regard by scholars around the world. Michael will take over the family diamond business and thus I sent him to your university to be a business major.

When Michael flies home to Martha's Vineyard every weekend to let the maid do his laundry, I ask him what he is learning at the university. And do you know what he tells me? He said that he is not learning very much in class, but he has learned many new things.

He said that his friends told him that women are built structurally different than Michael. My poor boy couldn't believe it. How could people tell a poor, 25-year old boy who still lives with his mother about this at his young age?

His "friends" also told him about drugs and alcohol and how they affect the body. Of course, both of us had a jolly chuckle over that one as the ingestion of these substances is only performed in the wretched depths of the country's poverty-stricken areas and certainly not at an esteemed university such as the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

What is a mother to do? Well, Michael will no longer be friends with any of the above-mentioned people and will have to make new acquaintances. Obviously these students, with their talk of sexuality, drugs and alcohol are part of a tiny minority and do not have the same interest as the rest of the students: education.

Michael will return to the university in hopes of finding new friends. Please help a boy out and befriend him.

MALE BITCH

Being a dawg is pretty tough, especially if your bitch acts like Stephanie Pointer. I mean just last week I was innocently sniffing her ass, and she's like, "listen up G, you're not mounting me today, I'm not even in heat."

Damn I'm always in the mood for some good lovin'...doggy style.

I know that stank-ho wants my milkbone, but only when it suits her bitch ass. Then she's like "Oh Stevie you tender piece of dog flesh, mount me like a trophy bass."

And like the thoroughbred champion that I am I always oblige.

I know I'll never win father of the year, hell I have more illegitimate kids than Wilt Chamberlain. God made me a dawg, and I act like one.

I hate being the mascot for the Pointers too. Stephanie is such a kiss ass; she's all into that school spirit and rah-rah shit. All I want is to get into some cheerleader's pretty pink panties.

So I was talking to this cute poodle the other day. The kind of bitch that makes you want to be a daddy all over again.

All I was really doing was talking to her and marking my territory when in struts Stephanie. She's like "I can smell that trappy poodle's ass on your breath."

All I have to say is HOW IMMATURE!

Gosh I wish some jogger would run through the neighborhood so I could chase them and maybe hump their leg.

This university can kiss my hairy ass. I'm going to Debot, they promised me some leftovers.

In the Ring: Who's the Bitch?

By Stephanie Pointer
FEMALE SLUT

I try to be polite whenever I pass the tramp on the street. He used to be my friend until he hit his awkward leg-humping stage. I used to think the girls had it bad with all the "changes." But I've really noticed a change in Stevie Pointer the last couple of weeks. I think he wants me.

I must say, he's not my type. I've never been into dogs who spend hours licking their private parts, humping little girls' legs, or taking dumps on the sidewalk in front of the post office.

I work with him at all the sporting events and if he has just had a bath and you are standing a half-mile away or down the football field, you might think he looks like Old Yeller, or a much more attractive dog like that.

Some of my friends find Stevie to be good in bed. Some of them even think he is good looking. Me, not so much. When it comes to sex, to hump right to the point, it has to have an air of danger or forbidden urgency to get me excited. Sex that's just a bit dirty or nasty is the best kind. Stevie, he just smells butts.

The other day I fixed my ears, got a new bow and decided to run downtown with some of my poodle friends. Word on the street was that there was a bunch of beautiful golden retrievers picking up the lady dawgs. Unfortunately, we ran into Stevie, who dove right for my friends rear end, missed, and landed with his head between her legs. She got nervous and peed on his head. He groaned and I think it just turned him on more.

Some day I am going to have a beautiful dawg all for my own that respects my ass. Until then, I'll have to watch my backside for sniffer-boy.

AA celebration to be held in town square

Members of Alcoholics Anonymous (AA) in Stevens Point will celebrate sobriety by ripping it up downtown this Thursday night.

The organization reportedly is challenging all students at UW-Stevens Point to a team-drinking contest, AA vs. UW-SP.

"I have been a member of AA for some 20 years," said I.M. Binger, a member of AA. "I have been sitting here waiting for some new blood to join our organization for a long time, but not a single one has. The only conclusion that I can draw is that these young piss-ants don't know how to drink anymore," Binger added.

In honor of the historic occasion, area bars have come together to offer a two-for-one special all night and have convinced Stevens Point Police to block off the streets, giving the inebriated free roam of the square.

"Although I am looking forward to it, I am a little wary," said Ryan Gilligan, a student majoring in theatre and dance. "Last time I tried one of these team drinking thingies's I puked after my first beer."

"I haven't had a drink in almost 20 years, and I know for a fact I could drink any one of these Sally's under the table," said Binger. "My friends tell me I used to drink three quarters of a bottle of Bacardi 151 a night and a whole lotta other shit, but for some reason I can't never remember that."

Tip-up time is scheduled for 6 p.m. and will not end until 2 a.m. The team with the most members standing at that time will be declared the winner and will be honored with a parade and awards ceremony early sometime next week.

Just a little advice from an old fart

When I was 10, an older friend showed me how to masturbate. He had a full ejaculation, but nothing came out of my little general. This was back in the 1960s, when astronauts first orbited the earth, and I believed that technology could fix anything. So I pulled out my erector set and decided to create a jack-off machine. Cumming up with a plan and building it kept me busy for days. Unfortunately, it didn't make anything more come out of my Johnson than my hand did. Time, rather than technology, was the answer to all my problems...

Don't worry, boys, they'll cum around.

Campus soon to overflow with trashy art

By Cum Dumpster
Now It's EVERYWHERE

Since its installation in 1999, the work of art standing in front of the College of Natural Resources building has raised speculation as to its purpose on this campus. Consisting of four giant slabs of misshapen stone held together on the outside by giant metal rods, the $38,000 sculpture is meant, according to Chancellor George, "to beautify and enliven this glorious campus which we, the faculty and the students, inhabit." Despite such glowing praise, however, inside sources have revealed what purpose the sculpture is, in fact, serving here.

"That 'sculpture' is no work of art," stated a top official who wished to remain anonymous. "That thing is actually a giant trash bin. The chancellor told everyone it was art because he didn't think people would like that he spent nearly $40,000 on a stone garbage can."

Another top campus official, who likewise wished to remain anonymous, brought even more truth to light with his revelation.

"The chancellor thinks there's too much garbage lying around this campus," he said. "Sure, we've got little garbage cans all over the place, but it seems that students just can't figure out how to use them. So, good ol' Tom thought he'd get trash cans large enough so that everyone will see them and be able to figure out how to use them. And just think—they're so huge that it'll take months for them to fill up!"

According to the official, the chancellor plans to install at least 10 more of the "sculptures" around campus, with a total cost of nearly $380,000, although none of the officials contacted were willing to say where exactly the funds are to come from. The official did state, however, that there was currently a "special" deal consisting of "Buy 9, get one half-price," and will therefore save the university an undisclosed amount of money.

Reaction among students, upon hearing the news, was unanimous.

"I always thought that thing looked like shit," said Brent Schaeffer, a sophomore. "Now I guess it's gonna be full of it too. I just can't believe anyone would pay that much money for something that ugly. I mean, damn!"

"Does anyone really think that thing looks beautiful?" asked another student incredulously. "For Pete's sake, the thing is sitting on a pile of dirt! Isn't art supposed to be...nice to look at?"

Many of the university's faculty, however, were quick to defend the chancellor's decision.

"I wholeheartedly applaud our illustrious chancellor for yet another brilliant decision in striving to make this campus more glorious," extolled Dr. Bill Deering, communication professor. "The cost pales in comparison to the beauty and happiness that these masterpieces will bring to our school."

"See how each of the walls stretch to the sky, basking in the glory of its surrounding, seeking always to reach the highest heights," exclaimed one Fine Arts professor, standing in the sculpture's shadow. "I am in ecstasy just gazing upon it!"

The garbage can "sculptures" are set to be in place by the end of May, each standing proudly atop its own four-foot high pile of dirt. There are no immediate plans to landscape the areas surrounding the bins, however.

The chancellor, his staff, his family and his dog were not available for comment.

Biology professor S.O.L.

By Ted Wilfart
TWICE I QUEEFED

One member of the UW-Stevens Point biology department has claimed to be "sexually shit out of luck."

The recently demoted intern has given up on his attempts to use Viagra to help stimulate his sex drive.

The intern claims the highly successful Viagra failed to cure his inability to get an erection.

"Viagra was my last option," he said. "After 11 years of waiting for my little guy to stiffen up I had given up hope."

The snatch drought has affected the intern's attitude as well as his ego.

"I used to be a happy, fun-lovin' guy. Now I'm just a horny, straight-faced grinch," he said.

The intern encourages others who experience sexual dysfunction to search for other pleasures in life.

"I used to think getting it up was all there was in life. But I realized that my little guy is just a small part of my body and my life," the intern said. "Now I have biology and that satisfies my entire life. At home or at social functions, biology is all I can relate to."

The intern says he might have to finally resort to using strap-on materials to engage in sexual activities. But it is still his dream to one day be able to rise again.

All this crap is brought to you by a bunch of people who stayed up way too late smoking pot and eating ham sandwiches.

If you would like to join us, you can't, 'cause we can't find ourselves, or our pants. Chances are, they're running around with that kid who doesn't wear shoes.

Golf demoted to hobby status at UW-SP

Lawn darts gets set to go varsity

By John Rucker
SENSITIVITY INSTRUCTOR

Due to the realization that golf isn't really a sport, the UW-Stevens Point Athletic Department has decided to demote the women's golf program from varsity status to hobby status.

"We've gotten away with it for the past few years, leading people to believe that golf belongs at a university," UW-SP Director of Athletics Frank O'Brien said. "But everyone knows that golf, like auto racing, isn't a real sport."

"Golf doesn't involve any physical ability, and therefore we have decided to downgrade the sport to being merely a hobby."

In its place, UW-SP has decided to replace golf with lawn darts, also known as jarts.

Scott Frazier, coach of the women's golf team, who had planned to leave his post, will now stay on as the head coach of the lawn darts team.

"This is an exciting challenge for me," Frazier stated. "I had been trying for years to get jarts to come to UW-SP. I was able to learn from one of the top coaches in the country at the University of Alabama in Boots McNaulty."

"Coach McNaulty taught me what it takes to be successful in jarts and I hope to pass that on to my student-athletes."

Frazier went on to say that UW-SP's main recruiting base will be Iowa as there is little else to do there.

For now, though, Frazier said that he plans to scour the intramural ranks for next year's team.

O'Brien said that Frazier had been bugging him for years to make the switch and stated that Frazier was his first and only choice for the position.

"Coach Frazier will do an outstanding job," O'Brien stated. "He was the most qualified man to get our latest sport off on the right foot."

"Finally I just got tired of listening to his old lawn darts stories from back in his days at Alabama," O'Brien continued. "A guy can only hear so many times about those steamy May afternoons of tossing the jarts around with Joe Namath."

The Pointers will hold their home matches in front of Old Main beginning during the 2000-2001 school year.

Fans hit the Square to celebrate Point synchronized swimming's National title

By Dr. Rosen Rosen
LOOKING FOR FILES ROOM

Madison has nothing on Stevens Point, as thousands of UW-Stevens Point students took to the streets Saturday night to celebrate the school's capturing the Division III title in synchronized swimming.

"Dude, those chicks rock," said an obviously plastered Cory Vanness. "They're like so...in sync."

Pointer Head Coach Al Boelk, who also coaches the men's and women's swimming teams was ecstatic about his team's performance.

"I'm so proud of those young ladies," Boelk said.

"If you can't get goose-bumps watching them perform, then you don't know diddly-poo about synchronized swimming."

UW-SP edged out rival Kenyon College for first place to stake its claim to the university's first title in the sport.

Area businesses certainly benefited from the school's victory, as approximately 5,000 students took their celebration to the Square in downtown Stevens Point.

"I've never seen anything like this," Graffiti's owner Dan Retzki said. "We're making a killing tonight. All the students want to do is drink, party and break things. It's awesome!"

Portage County Sheriff Stan Potocki allowed the bars to remain open all night in recognition of the team's accomplishment and the realization that there was no way in hell they could get all of those people to go home.

"Let the kids have their fun. There's only been some minor looting and some sporadic gunfire. What the hell do I care?"

Senior business major Dan Stoltz seemed a little confused when asked for his thoughts on the team's accomplishment.

"The who won what?" Stoltz asked.

"I don't really give a rat's ass.

I thought there were a lot more people out than normal tonight, but I just came here to get drunk and hope that some chicks lift up their shirts.

"Hey, maybe I could cop a feel if they do some body-surfing," Stoltz rationalized.

Jessica Burda, a member of the Pointer synchronized swimming team, was amazed by all of the support that the community and students had shown for the team.

"I think this goes to show that people appreciate how hard we worked and what we have accomplished," Burda said.

"Or it could just be another cheap excuse for people wanting to get fucked up," stated Burda, not seeming to care either way.

Pointer athletes receive fringe benefits

By Little Pecker
WISH I WAS BIGGER

Pointer athletes finally recieved the break they were looking for this week when UW-Stevens Point Director of Athletics Frank O'Brien revealed a plan that calls for scholarships and many other fringe benefits for all athletes.

A proposal was pushed forward by the Student Athlete Advisory Committee that states numerous benefits, many sexual favors and easier class scheduling.

"We are going to be the best damn athletic department in the country," said O'Brien.

"I don't care what it takes to keep us on top, every last scrub will have money in their pockets."

Some changes will be made in the athletic department to accomodate the proposal.

An announcement is anticipated Monday that would appoint former University of Minnesota hoops coach Clem Haskins as the new Athletic Academic Advisor.

"For those few athletes who attend class now, I will make sure they won't be in the future," exclaimed O'Brien. "I don't care if I have to bribe them."

Athletes will soon be driving around campus in new SUV's or on shopping sprees with all that extra cash that will soon be in their pockets.

It is rumored that tuition will be jacked up $2,000 a semester to help cover the expense.

"I am very spent from both of my classes that I have this semester and going to practice every day," cross country All-American Jesse Drake said.

"I can't wait for next year when I can catch the early 11 a.m. SportsCenter and all my favorite soaps in the afternoon before practice."

Athletes will be required to register for 12-15 hours a semester, but students in these classes

Men's track team has horse, cocks

By Harry S. Truman
INSURANCE SALESMAN

The men's track and field team hosted its first ever Horse and Gamecock Festival to raise money for the after-conference naked run through the Square.

The day's festivities included horse racing around the Coleman Field track and cockfights in the infield as the team took full advantage of its only weekend off of the semester.

Some of the highlights of the day included track and cockfight betting, complimentary hog rides and the beautiful sights and sounds of such a great family event.

"I was very pleased with the horse races and cock fighting," said men's track coach Rick Witt. "I was just happy that I was able to come away with a few extra bucks after picking a few winners in the cock fighting."

"Once I saw the size of those cocks, I knew who was going to end up on top."

The big highlight on the track was the featured harness race in which Iwannabone out kicked Cantgetsnaatch for the win as Longdongsilver came up short for third place and the show.

"It was not the first time my Longdongsilver came up short," said owner Jack Knauf. "I am confident that the big guy will bounce back because he is not quite in peak shape."

Many of the fans were treated to good old 19th Century-style hardcore cock fighting that took place on the infield of Coleman Field.

Although the area was covered in rooster dung and smelled like a Frank Purdue farm, it was enjoyable for people of all ages.

"I've never seen cocks fight that hard down to the wire," said cock-fighting historian Shane Suehring. "They were really spent at the end."

Fortunately for the animals there were minimal injuries during the days events.

"I was happy with the fact that most of the participants came away injury free," Witt said. "There was only one cock that came out limp."

All proceeds from this great event will go to the track and field team, which is hoping it can give something back in return to the school and community.

Plans are currently in the works not only for another naked run, but possibly a coed-naked track meet.

"We just want to make the sport a little bit more fan-friendly," said woman's coach Len Hill. "We just want to prove to the athletic department that we can draw crowds comparable to the synchronized swimming type caliber teams."

No word as of yet when this groundbreaking event would occur but The Pointless will let everyone know when and where fans will be able to get a glimpse at there favorite streakers.

If anyone would like to make a donation towards this event, just contact the athletic department. Let everything hang out and make sure to support your favorite Pointer athletics.

Thoughts From the Outhouse...

Why Eau Claire sucks

By Stevie Pointer
DOIN' IT DOGGY STYLE

I hate Eau Claire.

I hate that I don't know what the hell a Blugold is.

I hate their ugly uniforms.

I hate their preppy, snobby fans. They walk around like they just got done with their photo shoot for J Crew.

I hate the fact that their women are better looking and more plentiful than ours.

I can remember the days when the Quandt Fieldhouse would be packed to the rafters every time Eau Claire would come into town. Their short, bald-headed head coach, Ken Anderson would be up off the bench whining to the referees every time one was within shouting range.

Back in the days when the students at UW-SP actually stood and cheered during the basketball games, those students could all be heard chanting "Sit down Ken!"

When the Pointers would score their first basket of the game, play would have to be stopped because all of the students throwing so much toilet paper on the floor that it would have to get cleaned up by security.

In that regard, I hate that their fans have become louder and more rowdy than ours (even if they are morons).

Eau Claire's assistant coach used to be some guy by the name of Jack Bennett, the brother of Pointer Head Coach Dick Bennett.

Anderson would somehow dip into his magical funds to find some ex-Division I players from Texas that were about 32-years old and had already played about eight years of college basketball. I guess some things never change.

I hate that their coaches, players and fans were, and still are, so pompous and full of themselves. There's a fine line between confidence and arrogance. Eau Claire has always sided far toward the latter.

I guess if there is one thing I like about Eau Claire, it's that UW-SP beats them just about all of the time in every sport.

Baseball team to change to wiffle-balls

By Spooner

POSTCARD FROM THE EDGE

In the wake of the Wisconsin Intercollegiate Athletic Conference's return to the use of aluminum bats over wood bats for the 2000 season, the conference has now mandated the use of wiffle-balls.

"Dude, pretty sure the tool who came up with this idea needs to shave his ass," said UW-Stevens Point pitcher Justin Duerkop.

Dr. K. Looking, director of the WIAC rules and regulations committee, stressed the need to maintain safety standards in the contemporary game of baseball.

"Today's hitters are quicker, stronger and fatter than those in past years. With line drives coming back at pitchers near speeds of 100 miles per hour, we're just asking for a tragedy with aluminum bats and hard balls."

Some hitters see the change as an opportunity to lift batting averages to personal bests.

"I usually hit the ball hard," said Pointer catcher Eric Bennett,

"but right at outfielders for outs. Now I'll be able to leg out singles that fall just over the infield."

Pitching Coach Jesse Ray agreed with Duerkop's disdain.

"This is going to take a toll on our pitchers' arms," he lamented. "Everybody will have to scrap their fastballs and resort to breaking shit like sliders, curves, forkballs, screwballs, knucklers or any combination of those pitches. Our pitchers may have been able to blow guys away with heat in high school gym class, but there are real hitters in this conference."

"We're hoping this will make the conference more competitive overall," added Looking.

UW-SP Head Coach Brian Nelson plans to get the most out of his team's talent.

"Now, our pitchers will be able to contribute their skills as hitters," Nelson said upon learning of the new rule. "Most of them can lay the bunt down, but some guys like (freshman) Eric Schlender have natural long-ball power that will move baserunners for us late in the game."

Groundskeepers at UW-SP have moved the outfield fence closer, to a distance of 150 feet, considered deep by most players. However, pitcher-turned-five-hitter Bill Verbrick has confidence in his power.

"I've sunk putts longer than that. It's definitely reachable."

The Pointers play host to Mount Senario next Wednesday at 1 p.m.

Fans are encouraged to show up early for photographs with celebrity Pointer twins Pat and Mike McCann, as well as the "Freak of Nature" himself, pitcher Brian Wanek.

Fans should also register for the "Fish with Ryan Ivy Day" guided fishing trip raffle.

Tickets are available at the University Field concession stand.

Proceeds go toward the effort to starve Pointer third baseman Rob Govek.

Dogs reach from behind to beat the Cocks

By G. Gordon Liddy
It's ALL ABOUT BALL BEARINGS

Just when things looked their bleakest, UW-Stevens Point made a miraculous comeback to defeat Division I University of South Carolina.

The Cocks were coming along just fine until the Dogs snuck up from behind and did it the way they like to best.

"Our team feels comfortable doing it from behind," Pointer Head Coach Dick Swanson said. "Our boys seem to perform their best when they sneak up on people and then really hammer them good and hard."

The Dogs, after falling behind early, reached back and buried their collective bone to put the game out of reach.

Afterward, the Cocks were bloodied and beaten.

"We just didn't handle ourselves very well," South Carolina Head Coach "Sticky" Stevenson said. "You've got to give UW-SP credit. They really stuck it to us."

"Physically, I thought we were prepared," Stevenson added. "But the Dogs seemed to come at us from every angle. They just didn't stop until they felt they had their way with us."

Despite the devastating defeat, the Cocks' coach feels that his team will bounce back, but they need to get after it in the off-season.

"We need to get bigger and develop more endurance," Stevenson stated. "I'll guarantee you one thing: these Cocks will be larger than life next season. We'll play a little more pissed off as well."

Tai-chi boy plotting to take over athletic dept.

You see him there every day in the balcony of the Quandt Fieldhouse.

He practices his tai-chi daily, seemingly without harm to anyone.

However, that is where he has everyone fooled.

Wednesday night, "Tai-chi boy," as he has become known, was found with secret university documents in his possession in what Campus Security believes was an attempt to overthrow the UW-Stevens Point athletic department.

"This comes as a complete shock," Sports Information Director Jim Strick said. "He seemed so harmless, like he was in his own little world."

"I guess he had us all fooled."

Campus officials became suspicious of "Tai-chi boy" when a martial arts instructor deciphered secret codes through his movements, translating into instructions for other members of his cult.

He has since been issued a restraining order to remain outside 500 feet of the MAC.

Fringe benefits will include all expense paid vacations, special catering services, new cars, free drinks at local establishments and BJ's on the side.

Most memorable moment: That one time in '97 when Earnhardt put that twerp Gordon into the wall to win that race. That was cool.

Favorite aspect of NASCAR: That's tough. I guess the fact that they turn left all the time for two or three hours. You've got to be a real athlete to do that.

Biggest achievement in NASCAR watching: Polishing off a case of Budweiser during the Brickyard 400 in '98 without leaving my recliner to go to the pisser.

Most embarrassing moment: That one time when I was watching the Daytona 500 in '95 and I spilled that beer on my lap and then the tornado went right through the trailer park.

What will you remember most about watching NASCAR: All of the fellow Earnhardt friends that I've made and watching Dale Jr. race on the same track as his old man for the first time. That brought a tear to my eye.

"The Federation without computers is a particularly important addition to student life because we need far-sighted individualistic students who can ride the wave of our Armageddon future," said Colleen Andrews, Chief Hanzo at IT.

According to Bushard, The Federation without Computers aims to educate students on the evils of computers and the addictive nature of e-mail.

Post Master records show that Bushard has sent 9005 mass e-mails this semester alone.

"I realize the errors of my way," said Bushard. "My eyes crossed and I was so scared when I could not uncross them for almost 10 minutes. Man, it was the most enlightening thing... it was such a revelation to see everything so clearly," added Bushard.

The Federation without Computers won the PENIS Potency Award, which is one of the organization's highest honors.

"The organization 'Tree Huggers 'R' Us' aims to help people find the child in them, it also gives lonely wankers an opportunity to hug a living thing," said Steve Vig, former student at UW-SP.

PENIS recognized this organization for its contribution to human nature.

The Yahtzee club won the Recreation Club of the Year award.

Hippie populations reach all-time high DNR approves new "Zone H" hunt

By Rosco P. Coltrane
SHERIFF OF HAZZARD COUNTY

This week the Wisconsin DNR made a decision that came as no surprise to those who live and work in Portage County. In response to a burgeoning population and growing public nuisance, state biologists have approved yet another special hunting opportunity for this year;

an early hippie season.

Three back-to-back mild winters and excellent "plant" growing seasons have enabled the local hippie population to swell well beyond the carrying capacity of the area.

And, though some local residents take pleasure in seeing herds of these poorly-groomed creatures sitting on their asses, playing hacky-sack or protesting worthless causes, the DNR is very concerned about the impact their population is having on the Stevens Point area.

"Hemp plants are being overbrowsed, and there is a frisbee shortage across northern Portage County," said Billy Hill, DNR hippie ecologist.

In response to this problem, the DNR has officially established a special nine-day hunting season which begins April 1.

Hunters will have the best luck by concentrating their hunt around the Sundial, University Center or any other areas where campus hippies congregate as the weather warms.

Calling can also give hunters a huge advantage over their prey. Hippies are very attracted to the sound of bongos, acoustic guitars or the sound of bitching and moaning; for example, "oppression this," "environment that"—you get the idea.

Baiting, though controversial, is another effective hippie hunting technique. Hemp, tofu, bandanas and protesting placards are all excellent lures for these shaggy beasts.

The DNR hopes to harvest 30 percent of the Portage County hippie population, so future Zone H seasons will not be necessary.

Here kitty kitty; your guide to better muskie fishing

By Mitchel Dexterson
MONKEY LOVER

I can hear you fishermen out there pleading for my advice. "Mitchel!" you cry, "I've got a trailer full of hungry kids to feed and a wife who'll beat me silly if I don't bring home something to eat tonight. More to the point, I've got a 12-pack of Schlitz that's callin' my name."

Well, when I'm faced with this situation, I usually spend an afternoon shooting carp. It keeps the kids full, the wife happy and you can shoot with one hand and hold a beer in the other. Everything is right with the world.

However, even the most avid fisherman eventually gets tired of gunning down the wily carp. Sometimes we want more of an adventure; more of a challenge.

That's when I fish for muskies.

Unfortunately, if you choose this route, you stand a good chance of having hungry young 'uns and having to sleep on the couch. Besides, while adventure is fine and dandy, all that casting and reeling takes two hands. Most importantly, two hands fishing leaves zero hands for beer.

Upon casual observation, it seems that the right-thinking Christian man has only one option: shoot carp. But let me show you a way you can expand your horizons, fulfill your duty to your family and become the sport fisherman you've always dreamed of being.

The most important part of any fishing trip is choosing your bait. And with muskies, this is doubly true. But there is a secret. A secret that successful muskie hunters have been keeping under their hats for years and years. A secret which I will now reveal to you. Kittens.

Get yourself a dozen kittens of assorted colors. They should be small, about a handful. Any bigger than that and they get hard to cast.

If you don't happen to have a dozen kittens handy, just go to a farm and ask for some. The story that works best for me is that you accidentally backed over yours with the tractor and that your children are "powerful sad." Them farmers is earthy folk. They understand that those things just happen sometimes.

Okay. Now you've got to make a little kitten harness. Some old leather straps and a stapler can make that happen. Make sure all four of the little guy's legs can move freely. (Muskies love things that thrash around.) Lastly, attach three or four trailing hooks that hang about an inch and a half behind the kitten in the water.

Now, some of you may be wantin' to turn the page right

CNR closes up "shop"

By Watson N. Crick
DEOXYRIBONUCLEIC ASSES

In what is being called the biggest scandal since the opening of the Debot dining hall, Stevens Point police officers uncovered a literal underground sweatshop in the CNR earlier today.

Preliminary police reports indicate that a sweatshop which employed nearly 1,000 CNR majors was located under the new addition to the CNR. Underprivileged workers were forced to whittle toothpicks from giant red wood trees illegally imported from California as a "CNR forestry project."

"We were just amazed at what we saw," said Portage County Sheriff Hal Young. "Hundreds of people were hunched over, chopping away at logs like so many ivory-billed woodpeckers."

Most of the employees were recent students but a few more familiar faces were also employed there. Among those was famous author and conservationist, Aldo Leopold.

"I had to do it," Leopold insisted. "I had to go underground after A Sand County Almanac was published, so I faked the whole death by fire thing. I mean, can you believe the off-the-wall shit I said in that book? I knew taking that creative writing class was a mistake."

This discovery comes at an unusual time, considering the recent anti-sweatshop campaigns on campus.

"What really shocked me was the fact that these kids were protesting sweatshops, yet this giant sweatshop was located right here

LISA'S GOOD FRIEND

• An honest to goodness morning in the life of Cletus Jackson, Northwoods native.

Scratching my 'der a hairy ass with one hand and reaching for my chew tin with the other, I was figurin' what flannel shirt to wear. I'd just killed a deer last night along with her fawns.

'Dat 'der blood stained my hands. Yeah, but who needs to take a shower now, hey? I've got me my own love potion to attract 'dem women. 'Dat's right.

Yeah, but the kill last night left me hungry. Now where 'da hell's my woman at to fry me up some grub? Gad dammit.

I slammed 'dat 'der ah, fryin' pan on the stove, dumped in a can of 'dat ah corn beef hash and dose fawn hearts. Now 'dat's some a good food! I was feelin' lucky so I poured some beer into my Rice Krispies.

Now don'tcha know I founded 'dat organization "People for the Eatin' of Tasty Animals?" All 'dat meat I eat, I'll damn near last forever. Ain't 'dat a gem? Yeah, me damn heart.

From me kitchen winder I could see my Ford. Ah, yeah she's a beaut. With my gun rack on 'da back and a confederate flag for a seat cover, she's 'da fairest Ford I ever seen.

I stomped on one of dose 'der a stinky flowers on my way to me truck. I ran into my friend ah, Clint. And I says to him, I says "I ain't seen hide nor hair of ya in a coon's age."

And he says to me, "Well now, dagnabbit (he spits) I've been shootin' varmints on my pa's land (he spits again)."

"Well gad damn," I says, "I've got friend who stuffs dose der a pests."

(He spits) "Jesus Cletus, I don't wanna see those cotton-pickin' creatures."

"Oh yeah, I guesses so," I says, "good luck anyways."

I climbed into my 'der Ford, revved 'dat V-8 engine and plowed over 'dat 'der friggin' squirrel cuz' is tail was jest too damn fluffy.

I reached into my glove compartment for me chew and put a dip between me lips and gums. Now 'der, could 'der be anything better 'dan a dip and "She Thinks My Tractor's Sexy" blarin' 'trew 'da windows of yer Ford?

TREE HUGGING CATCHING ON

Something in the air lately seems to be having an effect on students that would otherwise be considered normal. Whether it's the bongo music, the taste of cous cous, or the smell of burning incense, something is changing UW-SP students for the worse.

Tragically, many truck driving, boot wearing, beer guzzling folks on campus have recently been seen wearing sandals, riding rusty bicycles and hugging trees.

Officials are baffled.

Your College Survivial Guide

By Pat "Not Funny" Rothfuss.

Perpetual Student

So, it's April 1st. There's craziness happening all over in the Pointer and everyone is asking me, "What are you going to write about for Fool's Day?" Then they look at me with these deep, trusting eyes. Hoping that somehow my column for this week will be super-duper funny and extra-huge weird.

Well it isn't going to happen. I'm a contrary person by nature. So I've decided to do a serious column for this week. More or less serious.

I've gotten a couple of letters from readers wondering why I haven't been writing for the last two weeks. The truth of the matter is I've been going through some rather serious life-changes that have made it hard to keep writing this column. What's more, I don't know how much longer I'll be able to keep writing it. The truth is, I'm dying.

No, not really. Just kidding. But I am doing the next-best thing. I'm graduating.

Yup. After nine years I'm finally moving on. That's the bad news.

The good news is that I'm going to grad school. So while I might be leaving Stevens Point, I don't really have to leave college.

The truth is, I'm dying...

Better yet, Washington State must really want me, because they've given in to my every demand. So far, for enriching their program with my presence they've agreed to give me a pet monkey, a wheelbarrow full of oranges, and all the bologna I can hide in my cheeks. They agreed to those way too easily, so next I'm going to ask for a pound of Myrrh, twenty fine oxen, and an orally fixated, Swedish masseuse named Tawny. They might offer some resistance at first, but they'll cave at the end. After all, quality students like myself aren't easy to come by.

Anyway, what I wanted to say is that I'll be leaving all of you soon. And because I'm already accepted at Washington,

In memory of Pat
"Not Funny"
Rothfuss

Don't worry if there aren't any hate mail and the few

Remember the mighty oak tree was once a

R.I.P

I'm going to use this column to rant about some campus stuff that's been getting under my skin for the last few years. Stuff that you guys should really be aware of, because you're going to be here when I'm gone.

So, if you have something particular that you feel should be brought to the attention of the student body, or if you have a good, old fashioned College Survival Guide question, feel free to write in a letter to the Pointer, or E-mail me at proth884@uwsp.edu. Otherwise, I'm just going to talk about whatever the hell I want.

Lastly, I will actually be printing the "I am not Pat Rothfuss" T-shirts I owe to everyone who wrote in letters. Sort of a goodbye present.

Well, that's it for this week. Thanks for tuning in. Oh, if you feel like you didn't get your money's worth of funny in the column this week, read the article on muskie fishing that I wrote for the outdoors section of the Pointer. It's pretty good, if I do say so myself.

resolutions.

Most people make resolutions on new year's eve. I made mine today and I probably won't keep them.

1. No more offending anyone at the theatre department with my reviews.
2. No more private jokes on how some of the cast members have bodies that are just screaming for liposuction.
3. No more remarks on how bad the production is even when it is that bad.
4. No more focusing more on the costumes the cast members wear than on the acting itself. (Truth is the clothes grab my attention more than the acting on several occasions.)
5. No more shopping on line. Thank God that Prada has yet to start on e-commerce.
6. No more eating at Debot. What they serve there narrowly misses the definition of food.
7. No more liquid lunches. Period.
8. No more bitching to all my friends that Jennifer Lopez wore a cheapie $1600 plus dress to the Grammy's.
9. No more support to PETA after they got CNN's style guru- Elsa Klensch's handbag sprayed with paint during Fashion Week in Febuary.
10. No more prank calls to Mariah Carey telling her that she does not need a body that is bigger than her voice.

The President & I

A blow by blow musical film

The scandal that rocked the nation and wasted millions of taxpayers' dollars is finally immortalized in a musical movie directed by Mader Pharker, who also wrote the script and the words of the musical. Call it crashing in on Lewinsky's private life but "The President and I" is actually a rather interesting film that chronicles the rise of a young unknown woman into a tabloid star.

Starring adult movie actress Karen Stone in the lead role of Monica Lewinsky; Billy Bobbit as the President; Tony Ryan as Kenneth Starr; Gloria Kant as the pre-makeover Linda Tripp and Cher (guest starring role) as the post-makeover Tripp; "The President and I" boasts of some of adult movie's best actors.

According to Pharker, the movie is "...basically a puppy love story of a young girl who falls for an older man. We are looking at the romantic aspect here- how gullible Monica was and how vicious Starr and Tripp were. Clinton is just a cardboard character in this film."

The Adult Movie Revue calls this musical a "must see!" and Porn Life magazine says- "The President and I is a musical movie that gives you a blow by blow account of the affair".

The cover is censored due to its artistic content which may offend some eyes.

The movie begins with a panoramic view of our heroine, Monica, as she struts down Ro-deo drive with tons of shopping bags, singing the show's opening number- "The Sound of Amex." Fast forward and we see her entering the White House as an intern where she befriends the two faced Linda Tripp. Alone and scared in the house where Hilary rules with an iron rod, Linda comforts Monica and together they sing a lovely duet of "Blow a Happy Tune."

Basically, most of the songs focus on the plot and several of the musical numbers are especially catchy. The scene where Monica and Bill consummate their act sets the standard for adult movies. Actress Karen Stone basically has to sing the song- "Blowing in the Dim" on her knees in a blue dress sponsored by Gappy Clothes. To make the scene authentic, director Mader Pharker got in trouble with the law for breaking into the vault where the dress was kept to make sure that the stains were in the right place.

The movie ends with Monica facing her biggest enemy ever, Kenneth Starr. The scenes with the hearings in session were especially dramatic. Tony Ryan used to sing with the Metropolitan Opera prior to becoming an adult actor. His raging bass was set in high contrast to Monica's baby soprano voice.

The film ends with the Barbara Walters interview where the audience sees Monica finally at peace with herself and knitting her days away.

In terms of music, the score is no "Evita." Music composer- Andrew Lloyd Sondheim's music is at best muzak. At worst, the score of this musical is pure trash. Despite the controversial subject of the film, "The President and I" has been nominated in several categories in the Adult Film Awards.

The Moral Society in Stevens Point has urged the mayor to ban the film, stating that the film gives the president a bad name, and tramps like Monica Lewinsky should not be immortalized on celluloid.

room, I'd look out my window and see that immense phallic symbol," said sophomore Virginia Smith, who then broke down in tears.

"But I'm sure the men on campus aren't complaining. I think they were all jealous, really."

Construction of the new smokestack should be completed in October, officials said. The design will be identical, although officials said the new "brick dick" might be larger.

"With the university's continued growth, it is only good planning to build a longer and thicker smokestack," Hahrdonn said. "Why wouldn't you make it bigger?"

University officials, who are trying to incorporate more art into the campus, are considering jazzing up the new smokestack. One local artist would like to sculpt two round spheres at the bottom of the smokestack.

"If we can spend money for that pile of rocks by the College of Natural Resources, why can't we do this? It's all art and people can interpret it any way they would like," said local artist Richard Long.

No matter what the design, Hahrdonn is looking forward to the new smokestack to heat the campus.

"I just hope the new one can keep it going longer," Hahrdonn said. "The old one sure had one hell of a ride."

Oh, no!

that bulletin boards will be placed on every street corner, government building and gas station.

"If bulletin boards could cause a paradigm shift with regards to hate crimes, just think of how much good it can do to solve other social problems such as violence and racism. Hell, it may even make people understand why my policies are really for the betterment of the average Wisconsin resident," said Thompson.

The statewide bulletin board project is set to kick off by in time for Gay Pride Week.

now, thinking that this sounds like an awful lot of work. But I'd say you've got the wrong attitude. This ain't work, it's like taking off your t-shirt; it's foreplay.

So now you're ready. You've got your kittens, your harness, your boat and your dozen or so beautiful, silvery white cans of Schlitz.

Once that first kitten hits the water you'll see that all the waiting has been worth it. Buzzbaits? Whizz spinners? They all pale in comparison to a kitten that's just hit the water from 20 feet.

As an added bonus, you'll find that a kitten is much easier to reel into the boat than a normal lure. Why? Cause he's trying to get back. Oftentimes I've chuckled softly to myself as their ironic struggles remind me of the legendary trials of Sisyphus.

I've found it's best to switch kittens after they've stopped swimming. Nothing excites a muskie as much as a nice lively kitten. I swear that little, "mew mew" noise they make gets the muskie so riled up that you have to beat em off with a stick, but a dead kitten won't get you anything.

Each kitten should be good for about half an hour, but be careful of stumps! Those little troupers will swim like the dickens, but whack em on a stump once or twice and you'll be pullin' dead weight back to the boat.

But what if you spend all day fishin' and don't bring home the Big One? No problem. Keep the wife happy by making a quick trip to the cleaning shed with your used kittens and Voila! You've been fishing for panfish all day.

It's a win-win situation.

on campus," Young said. "Now I've seen everything. It's time to retire."

Authorities were baffled that the program, which apparently had gone on for some time, could go unnoticed until now. Protective Services wouldn't answer the phone and the only people that could be reached, Cadets Ryan Bybee, Andy Chikowski and Andy Lecker were too busy fishing to comment. Further investigation by the SPPD led to some interesting insights into Protective Services' inability to find out about the underground happenings.

"What we've discovered," Young said, "is that Protective Services, in actuality, has known about the sweatshop for years. Protective Services arranged some deal with the sweatshop to raise money."

A statement, found at Protective Services, stated "ripping off students at the parking meters is fun, but we need more money to afford our new staff lounge. After all, jacuzzis are expensive."

Authorities aren't sure who the ringleader of the operation is, but said they have a hunch. As Young said, "Let's just say, don't expect to see Stone Phillips do an expose on Dateline about the incident any time soon, if ya know what I mean."
