I TAKE IT that you desire to achieve success and that you entered this beloved institution for the purpose of putting yourselves in close touch with its faculty, its activities, and its spirit in the hope that, by reason of your self-activity, your purpose would reach a generous fruition, and it is my wish that you have in no respect been disappointed.

Success is ever synonymous with worthy achievement, and consists not in material accumulations, but reveals itself in the expansion of those traits of character—honesty, industry, good will, perseverance, and faith in self as well as others, the germs of which exist in all of us, and await only the dew and sunshine to cause wholesome and progressive growth. Development follows when we cling to certain principles with tenacity of purpose, as well as with fidelity of execution.

Live daily up to the level of the best that is in you. Look into your hearts, examine your consciences. Have you today been faithful? Have you been a sincere worshipper at the shrine of industry? Or have you been traitors to your best, and neglectful, indifferent to the call of duty? If performance today has been less than your best, highly resolve that next day you will overcome your weaknesses, and correct your faults, stemming the tide rather than drifting with it.

Cultivate the friendship of those who can inspire you to worthy achievement, and be loyal to that friendship. Take to heart, while in springtime of life, this message: “At some time in the life of every youth a superior personality must inspire him with his own enthusiasm or the life of the youth is bankrupt. The great teacher is a great prophet in that he sets splendid visions before humanity. He of all men is able to transmute knowledge into the consciousness of obligation which is usefulness. He alone renders opaque souls translucent.”

Be absolutely honest with yourself. I want you to have this trait so firmly rooted in your minds and hearts that it will make revelation of itself upon all occasions and under all circumstances, for in combination with the other principles it will equip you for the rôle of leadership, which you are henceforth to play. You will be masters, driving not being driven, hammers and not anvils, leaders and not followers. No one gets real pleasure in any vocation unless he is master of himself, unless he has asserted the supremacy of mind over body. He must abandon everything in any way related to falsity or deception. It is the laudable ambition of this school to send from its portals young men and women of character, scholarship, teaching ability, and cooperative spirit, not triflers, idlers, and apologizers. We want to send into the service of the commonwealth young men and women who, by reason of their integrity, their industry, and their high ideals, shall be leaders in the true sense of the term. In proportion as you conform your lives to the above principles you will be truly successful, happy and contented. That you may have such fortune is my sincere prayer.

Foreword

This, the twenty-first S.P.N. Annual, aims to give, in so far as the camera and pen can portray it, a fairly accurate account of the past school year.

Would that in carrying out this mission "The Iris" could prove itself entirely satisfactory to all. But, realizing that this is a most futile hope, we modestly present this volume, trusting that the critical will be moderate and the less critical, appreciative in accepting it.

If this book furnishes food for a few moments' pleasant perusal at the present time; if it is granted a permanent place in every owner's library; if it is often taken from this resting place to recall to some reader's mind the pleasurable days spent in Stevens Point Normal, we, frankly admitting there are defects and errors, shall view the results of our labors with no regrets.

"The Iris" Staff.
Dedication

To our Fathers and Mothers, whose noble efforts and self-sacrifices have enabled us thus far to prepare ourselves for more-complete living, we, the Seniors, affectionately dedicate this volume.

Evening, June 10, 1915

How still the Normal School must be tonight!
As down the western sky the bright sun falls,
Ending a day that did not seem half bright,
To the assembly room imagination calls

And paints in deepening light each empty desk and chair,
Where "bodied forth" a classmate bends reviewing,
A patient teacher studies there,
And calls to work that needs pursuing,

So vivid is the thought, I never saw,
How kind were all these friendly faces,
Till moved by parting into awe,
Touched to the soul by these empty places.

For faithful teachers memory clear,
Recalls affection that was ne'er expressed,
The heartfelt words past speaking here,
To those whose lives our own impressed.

Who saw for us the coming years
Of crowding duties pressing nigh,
And heard, as we did not o'er new careers,
The thundering in the changing sky.

And taught that ideals cherished, though with tears,
That honor watched in dreams of glory,
Would carve pure victories from the years.
This school will mark our future story.

To guide us on, we have from bygone ages,
The life of Christ to teach a changeless art;
Repeated o'er and o'er on history's pages,
Who holds the heights must keep a loving heart.

Thus, in these halls tonight, as twilight falls,
The memory of dear faces crowding near,
Speaks of the full and happy days each one recalls,
Holds for all time, inestimably dear.

WE HAVE enrolled in the junior class this year one hundred forty-three (143) students, the largest number ever enrolled in any class at S. P. N. Our class possesses much originality which has been shown in many ways, one of which was the publication of a small handbook, which met with a ready sale and has proved to be of much actual value. This booklet puts the affairs of S. P. N. in a compact form, thus enabling the students and others interested to know what S. P. N. is and what it stands for. The handbook is not only a calendar but a guide.

The junior class has made a mark in athletics as the girls' basket-ball team won the honors during the tournament, and our boys also won distinction by defeating the seniors.

Each year a debate is held with Oshkosh, members from the junior classes being the contestants. Early in January a preliminary debate, in which there were nine contestants, was held and a team composed of Emil Hafsoos, Frank Hyer, Hazel Ferebee, and Charlotte Nachtwey, as alternate, was chosen to represent our school.

Considerable effort was put forth by Mr. Ames and the team on the affirmative side of the question—"Resolved, That it should be the policy of the United States to materially strengthen its military and naval establishments."

The debate occurred on February twenty-second, at Oshkosh. The debaters distinguished themselves by their excellent team work. As individuals, Mr. Hyer was especially eloquent and convincing, Miss Ferebee delivered a remarkable argument, and Mr. Hafsoos cinched all their points in a masterly summary. We are glad to say,

"AFFIRMATIVE—ONE.
AFFIRMATIVE—ONE.
AFFIRMATIVE—ONE.
AFFIRMATIVE WON UNANIMOUSLY."

We are proud to be represented by such a debating team.

With what we have been able to accomplish we feel that we have spent a most profitable year. We trust that we have not impeded the progress of S. P. N., but rather that we have added our bit toward building and standardizing the reputation of the school.

The Rural School Department

The Rural School Department was established in the Stevens Point Normal School to train teachers for country schools. During the first year, forty-five students were enrolled; in the second year, seventy-two; while ninety-two students have been enrolled this year. These figures do not include the enrollment during the summer session, but are for the regular year only.

The course of study gives training in those subjects which the teacher is called upon to teach. In addition to the academic and professional studies included in the course of study, each student is required to secure thirty weeks of credit in the practice department of the Normal School, thus gaining experience in teaching and controlling groups of children.

During the first year, a course for graduates of the eighth grade only was offered. Now in addition to this course, another for high school graduates is offered of which many who wish to teach in rural schools have already availed themselves. The law passed by the legislature of 1913 requiring all who wish to teach in rural schools to secure one year of professional training, will exert a powerful influence in raising the standard of the teaching class throughout the state. To meet the requirements of this law, the course of study is so administered that each student may pursue those subjects which will best fit him for the work of teaching. The work offered by this department will appeal to three classes of students: eighth grade graduates who wish to take the two year course, high school graduates who wish to take the one year course, teachers of experience, and others who have had two or more years of high school work who may finish the course in one year.

One of the most successful phases of the work of the department is the Farmers' and Homemakers' Conference held each year at the Normal School. This conference is now well past the experimental stage. The first year, 1912, about forty people attended; the second year approximately four hundred. Through the cooperation of County Superintendent Frances C. Baumach, the nearby rural schools are closed and the children, their parents, and friends attend in a body. Special programs are provided for farmers, their wives and children. In 1914-15, the Retail Merchants' Association of Stevens Point cooperated with the Normal School and the University of Wisconsin for a three day Community Institute and Poultry Show. The retail merchants furnished the necessary funds and made provision for additional meeting places by securing the opera house and the Gem and Ideal Theatres. The managers of the Gem and Ideal Theatres donated the use of their halls. Programs for men, women, and children were offered by the Normal School and the University. The success of the institute far exceeded expectations in every way. The attendance for the three days at all section meetings was approximately eleven thousand, making the institute the largest ever held in the state. Special mention should be made of the cooperation of the domestic science department of the Normal School and the city schools, Superintendent H. C. Snyder and his teachers doing everything possible to make the institute a success. Thanks are also due to the High School Band for their services and to Miss Lucile Daley and Miss Betty Reynolds. The band came out at short notice to play for the crowd, while upon the two young ladies fell the task of making provision for feeding several hundred people. Miss Baker, director of music in the Normal School, contributed much toward the success of the institute.

The Rural Observation School is located one mile from Custer, Wisconsin, in a district where the people were public spirited enough to spend one thousand dollars in improvements for their school, that the building might be made modern, and room provided for teaching domestic science and manual training. This work is under the direct supervision of the domestic science and manual training departments of the Normal School. During the past year, Miss Mary Brady has had charge of the work in domestic science, and Mr. Carl Blume and Mr. Frank Hamerski have conducted the classes in manual training. In addition, to their work in the regular practice school of the Normal School, students in the Rural School Department are required to spend several days in the Rural Observation School observing the work of a thoroughly experienced rural teacher. Later, they discuss in class the results of their observations. This year, the Rural Observation School has been in charge of Miss May Roach.

That young women who are away from home may have a friend to whom they may go for advice and counsel, a member of the faculty, Miss Jennie Graham, devotes her entire time to this group, making a careful study of their social needs in addition to her work as teacher of English in the department. The social gatherings which have been held throughout the year have been very successful.

A Halloween party was enjoyed by the students of this department. A Halloween program was followed by weird excursions through the abode of ghosts and goblins, together with games and tricks peculiar to the season.

At Christmas time, a program and Christmas tree, with a most generous Santa Claus, brought the students of the department together for a good time before leaving for home for the holidays.

To promote the social welfare of the girls of the department, Miss Graham organized four clubs, each with a membership of twenty. The general name applied to the four clubs was, "The Social Welfare Club." Each individual club had its own name and officers as follows:

1. The Unity Club. President, Barbara Van Hecke; vice-president, Verona Somers; secretary-treasurer, Ruth Fulton.
3. The Three M. Club. President, Louise Fountain; vice-president, Julia Redding; secretary-treasurer, Alma Anderson.

Each club met once a month at Mr. Phelan's home. The evening was devoted to a literary program, followed by refreshments and a general good time. The club year was closed with a picnic at the water works.

During the school year, the Rural Department had a special assembly once a week. For this assembly, each club in turn was responsible for the program.

PRACTICE
June, nineteen hundred fifteen, will close as successful a year in the practice department of the Stevens Point Normal School as has ever been recorded. The enrollment has been the largest in the history of the school, having reached the three hundred mark.

The training department of this institution is not a school where pedagogical fads and fancies are tried out as experiments; neither is it incapable of growth and expansion. This department is one where sound, well tried pedagogical theories are put into practice; one which is alive and wide awake to anything new that is worth while.

Under the skilful administration of our efficient supervisor and corps of critic teachers, the practice department is constantly being made more effective. Mr. Hyer, the present supervisor, is a graduate of Milwaukee Normal and of Ripon College. He has also done graduate work at the University of Wisconsin. He came to the Normal eleven years ago and for the past six years he has been at the head of this department. He has had over twenty-five years of teaching experience in all grades and positions from the rural school to the normal school. Much credit is due Mr. Hyer for the efficiency of our training school system.

The practice department, strictly considered, is divided into three divisions. The primary form is comprised of the kindergarten, the first and second grades, and the Montessori school. The kindergarten has been ably supervised during the past year by Miss Margery Winter. Miss Winter is a graduate of Milwaukee Normal School. She comes to us after several years of teaching in Berlin, Waupun, and Madison. The kindergarten has an enrollment of twenty-eight children and sixteen young women have practiced in this department this year.

Miss Helen Parkhurst and Miss Prudence Cutright have charge of the first and second grades. Miss Parkhurst has been with us since 1912. She is a graduate of River Falls Normal School and the Montessori School, Rome. Before coming here Miss Parkhurst taught in the schools of Wisconsin and Washington for several years. During the past year, a Montessori School with an enrollment of twenty-four children was organized by Miss Parkhurst. This school has been very successful from the first.

Miss Cutright of Sunnyside, Washington, a graduate of this Normal School assists Miss Parkhurst in the first and second grades. There are eighty-six little people enrolled in these two grades and the Montessori School. Miss Parkhurst and Miss Cutright have had forty-seven student teachers under their supervision. Both of these critic teachers are well known for the effectiveness of their management.

In the intermediate division of the training department there are three grades. Miss Edith M. Whitney of St. Cloud, Minnesota, succeeded Miss Leora F. Vail as critic teacher in the third and fourth grades. Miss Whitney has had several years' experience in the schools of St. Cloud. She held a position in St. Cloud Normal similar to the one she is now holding. Miss Whitney has seventy-four pupils in the third and fourth grades, the largest enrollment of any one room in the department. During the past year, she has given practice work, under her skillful, painstaking management, to fifty-nine teachers.

The fifth grade, comprised of twenty-five children, is under the competent supervision of Miss Hulda Schrode. Miss Schrode came to this institution in 1909. She is a graduate of Milwaukee Normal School. Formerly she taught at Stoughton, Madison and Brooklyn. Her many years of service here, and the testimony of her student teachers are marks of her efficiency. Forty-one young people have practiced in her grade during the past year.

The grammar department is under the supervision of two well qualified, progressive teachers, Miss Bertha Goodyear and Miss Minnie Wilson. This is Miss Goodyear's first year as a member of the faculty of this Normal School. She, as critic of the sixth and seventh grades, holds the position formerly held by Miss Martha Langwell. Miss Goodyear is a graduate of Northern Illinois State Normal School and Teachers' College, Columbia. She has held positions as critic in DeKalb and Aberdeen State Normals. In Miss Goodyear's department there

The Intermediate Grades

Third and Fourth Grades

Fifth Grade
are sixty-nine pupils enrolled. She has under her supervision, sixty-five student teachers. Miss Goodyear has the largest number of teachers practicing in her department of any department in the regular training school. All those preparing to teach in high schools and grammar grades practice in this department. The teachers who desire observation, observe the work of Miss Wilson. Miss Wilson has an enrollment of twenty-six pupils in the eighth grade and has had sixteen observing teachers. Miss Wilson is a graduate of Michigan and Columbia. Miss Wilson took charge of the work here in 1912, and her efficiency has been well attested. Miss Wilson formerly held a position as principal of the High School at Schoolcraft, Michigan.

The primary, the intermediate and grammar grades department comprise the three divisions of the training school but there is another department, which in this Normal is remarkable for its strength. This is the domestic science training department. This is under the skillful management of Miss Bessie M. Allen. Miss Allen assumed charge in 1913. She is a graduate of Iowa State Teachers' College and Columbia, and formerly held positions at Whitby, Ontario, in the Ontario Ladies' College, and at Normal, Illinois, in the Illinois State Normal University. She has in her department thirty-five young women who have taken practice under her supervision. These teachers are instructing over three hundred children in the training school, the public and parochial schools of the city.

Another phase of training work is the Model Rural School at Custer. This school is in the charge of Miss May Rouch, a graduate of this school. She has had several years' experience in teaching, having been principal of the Cable High School for two years previous to assuming her present position. This school is under the supervision of the Normal for the express purpose of giving the pupils of the Rural School Course an insight into actual rural conditions and an opportunity to observe rural teaching. Miss Rouch has managed with much competence, her department of the training school.

It is not an idle boast we are making when we assert that we have a most efficient and satisfactory corps of supervisors who are always searching for the weaker points in the training department and applying all their initiative and skill to strengthen the whole. We are proud to be able to say we have the best equipped training school in the state. We are proud to say that this department has given practice during the past year to over two hundred and seventy-five teachers who in turn, have taught over six hundred children in Stevens Point. There is a greater danger of undervaluing than overvaluing the importance of the sound pedagogical theory and the strong educational methods of Teaching supplied in the Normal School of Stevens Point, Wisconsin.

The Grammar Grades

SIXTH AND SEVENTH GRADES

EIGHTH GRADE
We consider our Art Department very strong. Miss Flanagan is an exceptionally strong director of art and under her direction the art department is accomplishing work of unusual interest.

Art and handwork are given throughout the Normal classes. This work is conducted by Miss Flanagan and her assistant Miss Langenberg.

The Normal classes in design have accomplished splendid work this year. Miss Flanagan's method of design is clear and direct. Her advanced classes in design have obtained very interesting results, especially in the work of tooled leather.

The elementary manual training which is conducted in the art department, deserves great credit. Our director has developed a very interesting phase of paper weaving, in which design plays a dominant part, and this work with other constructive problems makes these classes in elementary manual training unusually interesting.

Besides the extensive art work done in the Normal classes our director has charge of the art work in the training department. This work is taught by her assistant and student teachers under her direction. A new plan is being tried this year in the primary department. The drawing and construction classes are correlated, the children being taught drawing and construction alternately for a period of one hour each day. The plan is only embryonic but as it matures we hope to accomplish interesting results with our little people.

Aside from being proud of the work our department is accomplishing we are proud of our studio. It is a very bright, sunny room and a cheerful one in which to work. The student teachers have a workroom and Miss Flanagan has a cozy little office off the studio. Next year we are promised the addition of a large new room, new chairs and several smaller changes. With these in view we are sure our studio will be one of the most attractive rooms in the building.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE

The Cottages
Domestic Science

DOMESTIC science and domestic art in Stevens Point Normal have come into great prominence. The variety of work given in this course makes it of double interest. Until 1913 only the two year course has been offered. Next year a third year will be added. In this extra time advanced chemistry, millinery, designing, dressmaking and various other subjects will be offered. Several of the present senior class will remain for this added work.

The practical work done this year has been extensive. Every senior girl prepared and served a breakfast and luncheon. Each meal for four people cost but forty cents. This was a lesson in making a little go a long way. That which really took the most thought was the preparing of the formal dinners at which the guests were the members of the faculty and the wives of the gentlemen. Each girl had her turn at being hostess, waitress and cook at one of these dinners. During this series of dinners, many incidents occurred which will never be forgotten. One night the waitresses decided it would be very nice to wear caps. Having none, one of the girls searched through Miss Allen's desk until she found a dainty little doily which she poised artistically on her head. Miss Allen, who was guest that evening, almost violated formal propriety when she recognized her doily.

Another night, a girl in her haste set a plate of cle&ert before a guest when the rest of the company had salad.

Besides the special guests and meals served there are many hungry people who gladly accept our hospitality. We had the pleasure of serving lunch to the judges at election in the third ward. That of course gave us a chance to investigate the polls preparatory to equal suffrage. We also served dinner to some of the legislators of the state when President Sims invited them to visit the school. We hope they will remember the good dinner and let us keep the appropriation for the dormitory.
The various subjects which we have taken up this year have been especially interesting. Millinery was of value to the school as well as to us individually, for the skeleton in the assembly on Halloween had to have a hat to complete it's wardrobe so our class contributed one to its use. We consider ourselves very fortunate this year in having had Doctor Allison conduct our home nursing class. We feel sure that our laundry work gave us as much exercise as a month of gymnastic training. The seniors, and the ladies of the faculty as well, may be seen this spring with some dresses of the latest models made by the graduating class.

An exhibit of Domestic Science and Domestic Art work was shown when the community institute was held here in the fall. The dining room was prepared with a meal served in the proper manner. In another room various plans of serving the same thing in different ways were shown. On some tables comparative food values were worked out. The sewing done by the Junior girls was displayed. They have made many articles for the cottages, such as doilies, comforters and crocheted ends for towels. The bulletins which were sent to the exposition from this school were entirely of the Domestic Science work done here.

This year the enrollment in this department has increased fifty per cent over that of last. The work has grown so rapidly that more teachers have been employed. The two new teachers, Misses Erwin and Tupper, have charge of cookery and Miss Hanson has the direction of the sewing department. Miss Allen is supervisor of the entire department. She observes our practice work besides conducting classes in household management, dietetics and organization.

Due to the success of the girls in Domestic Science practice last year, the field for such work has been greatly enlarged. Almost every school in Stevens Point now has Domestic Science conducted by the Normal girls. Every senior is required to take at least one quarter of cookery and two quarters of sewing practice but almost without exception each one takes several extra quarters of work.

That the interests of the Home Economics girls are centered on just their one line of work seems to be a common opinion. This is entirely false for they are prominent in all the activities of the school. The Domestic Science girls can play basketball which was shown in our victory over the Primary team. The president and many members of the Treble Clef Club are Domestic Science people. The presidents of the girls' literary societies and several of the girls who took part in the intersociety contests are from our department. The newly elected president of the Y. W. C. A. is one of our number. The one girl on the debating team which brought honor to our school is also in the Domestic Science Department.
The sources from which we have received the most pleasure in planning and anticipation but not in realization are the cottages and the addition.

For many weeks we entertained the hope that we might occupy the cottages. It has been necessary to give that up but we have at least had the pleasure of planning our household management class the furnishings and work which is to be done there by the future classes. The cottages are built as a double house, both sides having the same plan. The only ways of getting from one side to the other are by way of the front porch, through the supervisor's rooms upstairs or through the upper hall, if the door between is not locked. On the first floor in each cottage is a living room extending from front to back, also a dining room and kitchen. Two bedrooms upstairs will accommodate the four senior girls who will live in a cottage for their share of the time. All the work in the cottages will be done by the girls even to caring for the furnaces and doing the laundry work in the nice little rooms for that purpose in the basement.

While looking at the addition, we have made many plans for the classes to come. For convenience and lighting, the plan is everything that it should be. In the basement, lockers will be provided for all the girls of the school. The first floor will be devoted entirely to Domestic Science. There will be a large room in which to hold such meetings as Home Economics Club. An ideal little dining room finished in fumed oak will have all the dinners, luncheons and breakfasts of the future served in it. A reception room opening from the hall and into the dining room will do away with the inconvenience now experienced in having the tall guests peer over the screens, which make a passage way through the kitchen to view the hot and rosy cooks. A small room next to the dining room will be used for the preparation of all the meals. The large cooking laboratory will be an ideal room finished and furnished entirely in white. A large pantry at the rear will make the direct delivery of groceries and ice from the outside possible. A small primping room will be provided in which the girls will have lockers for their aprons where they will prepare for the teacher to inspect their personal appearance before entering the laboratory to cook. The offices for the cooking teachers will be in connection with the kitchen. Two rooms across the hall will be devoted to sewing practice classes. To prepare the girls for what they are apt to meet in the out-of-school world, they will do their practice work in a kitchen fitted like the average Domestic Science kitchen of the state. Another kitchen will be fitted in the basement for practice work. A special room will be set aside for demonstrations and dietetics. One room will be fitted with well lighted glass cases for exhibits. The supervisor's office will be conveniently supplied with a waiting room and an exit through the exhibit room by which means the sometimes humiliated interviewer may escape the inquiring gaze of her fellow students waiting for their turns. Two large rooms on the second floor will be devoted to sewing.

We as Seniors now bequeath to you as Juniors all the conveniences of the annex and of the cottages, the pleasure of shoveling the walks on nice frosty mornings, of building the furnace fire when it goes out due to improper banking, of doing all the work of the household before going to school in the morning, of keeping the Stevens Point dust off from the furniture and of raising vegetables for use at the cottages. We wish we might share all these advantages with you, but we shall have to leave with you the responsibility of making the most of your opportunities.
Manual Training

MANUAL TRAINING is pushing itself forward very rapidly. People are beginning to realize the value and benefits derived from it more than ever before. It offers excellent training in mental and physical activity and requires skill and accuracy in perfecting the work. The completed work inspires self-confidence and enables the student to rely upon the activities of his own mind for securing the desired results. Manual Training is a fine medium for bringing about harmony in the mental and bodily activities.

An excellent opportunity is offered in this field by the present Normal curriculum. The Manual Training shops are located on the first floor of the Normal.

Until recently the work has been in charge of Mr. Clyde Bowman but, desiring to better himself along the line of his chosen profession, he was granted leave of absence for the past year. In his place came Mr. Guy Eliason. Mr. Eliason came very highly recommended from the Dunn County School of Agriculture where he had served for some time. He continued the work of Mr. Bowman in such a way that scarcely a break was noted.

As the work is now organized there are courses in drawing and wood work for everyone. The work in the grades is in the hands of practice teachers who in turn work under the instruction of Mr. Eliason. Probably the most notable fact of the work in this institution is that so many girls take the course. In fact, the past year has found more girls than boys handling the hammer and saw.

In the midst of Mr. Eliason's success he became ill with rheumatism. Although for the time it was thought that the attack was only temporary, he was forced to give up his work for the remainder of the year.

The work was very ably completed by Fred Gustin, a member of the graduating class. We all join in wishing Mr. Eliason a speedy recovery and return to his work.
Miss M. Phena Baker, who has been in charge of our music department for the past two years, was forced in January, to resign her duties for the remainder of the year because of a physical breakdown. She went at once to Sacred Heart Sanitarium in Milwaukee.

Miss Dunlap of Durand, has since very ably conducted the music department.

As this goes to press Miss Baker is paying the school a visit. She appears much improved in health thereby assuring us that she will be able to be with us next September.

The Oratorical Contest

On January fifteenth, the preliminary oratorical contest was held in the Normal Auditorium for the purpose of choosing the school representative at the state contest.

Much to the disappointment of all interested, only three students entered the contest. They were: Clay Crouse, who spoke on the "Horrors of War"; Lancelot Gordon, who chose for his subject "America's Greatest Enemy", and Fred L. Hamilton, whose oration was "Peace in Evolution."

The judges, Messrs. Fischer, Glennon and Culver, chose Fred Hamilton as school orator with Lancelot Gordon as alternate. The contest was close and interesting and could have been decided in any order without causing dissatisfaction.

Professor Hyer presented the winner with a handsome gold medal.

The state contest was held in Whitewater on March nineteenth. In the afternoon of the same day La Crosse and Milwaukee battled for the state basketball championship. La Crosse won 21 to 30.

The contest was held at eight o'clock in the evening in the M. E. church. It was a fine contest and, although awarded sixth place, the writer is pleased to have been even a participant therein. Milwaukee* was given first place and Oshkosh second.

*Milwaukee received second place in the interstate contest.
Peace in Evolution

By Fred L. Hamilton

We live in a universe governed by law. Among these laws stands the fundamental decree of the ages that all great achievements must be attained by gradual evolution. The physical development of the world, explained by the nebular or the planetesimal hypothesis, has been by gradual evolution. Philosophical science has come to the inductive-deductive explanation of our reasoning only through the evolutionary process. In the same gradual way, man has acquired the ambition for universal brotherhood and the idea of God as spirit, thus showing that moral and spiritual development is evolutionary.

During the periods preceding authentic history man is revealed, by means of myth and fable, as little better than the beasts with which he dwelt. In this savage state, he measured right by might, for justice was far beyond the realm of his thoughts. With him the law of the survival of the fittest reigned supreme. Each individual journeyed forth at the break of day and slaughtered any whom he met. There was no consciousness of guilt for his deeds. He lived to fight, to conquer, or to die.

Gradually, however, primitive man emancipated himself from this innate bloodthirstiness, this inherent hatred, until, at the beginning of authoritative history, he was able to live harmoniously with his fellows. As this collective life progressed and city states appeared, we find that each person was forced to abandon his own individuality and to enslave himself, body and soul, to the military prowess of the state.

This system held unchallenged sway until, at the close of the war with Persia, Athens established herself at the head of Greece. She soon realized the fallacy of a system that exalted the state at the expense of the individuality of the citizen. She saw that the plan which had gained leadership for Sparta had in turn caused the latter's downfall. She realized the costliness of renouncing all higher culture for the mere maintenance of the state's strength. With this lofty ideal in view, she proceeded to emancipate the individual from political serfdom.

By this act, ancient Athens sowed the seed which has made man what he is today: an inventor of wonders; a thinker who can harness the elements; a master on earth. By this act, ancient Athens furnished the basis for our own Christian thought, that institutions are made for men, not men for institutions. Man has bulldozed the home, the school, the church, and the state because of his own needs, desires, and ambitions. These institutions are his servants over which he aims to rule as a beneficent lord.

Great, however, as has been the development of the individual's conception of organized society, many of his deeds are still closely linked with barbarism. Free as we have thought man to be, we are forced to believe that the theory has far outdistanced the practice, and that civilization's veneer only slightly covers world-old political bondage. Man is still a slave to the state. Man still forgets himself; still gives himself, body and soul, in sacrifice for his country; still journeys forth at the break of day to kill his fellow man. He is once more engrossed in war, that agent of hell; that destroyer of justice; that breeder of political corruption, moral degradation, and national decay. War has appeared once more with its terribleness augmented, unmitigated by civilization.

And since its arrival, all the civilized world has been praying for peace; praying for the disarmament of nations and the cessation of hostilities. My friends, this is folly. So long as the fundamental causes of war exist, neither tears nor prayers can produce peace. So long as man deifies that so-called patriotism which places country above human rights; so long as the teachings of Christianity are barred from the field of diplomacy; so long as nations offer a challenge to the remainder of the world through their heavy armaments, there will be strife and wholesale slaughter of mankind.

That such conditions exist and have existed is evidenced by the present world situation. The politics of the nations has been filled with bad faith, suspicion, greed, hatred, and jealousy. The policy of nations has been each for itself, not each for all. They have sought commercial and industrial supremacy with the greed of a mammon. They have trusted no one, but have so far suspected everyone that they have spent fortunes in an effort to penetrate diplomatic secrets. They have been so filled with hatred, such as was instilled into France by Waterloo, that they have devoted every energy, have sapped their productiveness to the utmost in planning a revenge. They have been jealous of each other's progress as if they alone were ordained for all worldly development. In short, as nations, they have violated the true principles of Christianity and they are paying the inevitable penalty. There must be a penalty, for without it, Christ's laws would carry no authority.

But can we, adhering to our own doctrine, too strongly condemn these men, these nations? Has there been time for man to rid his system of that instilled love for country irrespective of right? Has there been time for the achievement of peace by gradual evolution?

I have told you something of man's development wherein he freed himself from certain barbarous traits. That scrap of his history which I related to you covers a period thousands of years in length. I have brought to your minds the evolution of the physical world as shown by the "Nebular Hypothesis". The world was undoubtedly thousands, perhaps millions of years in this process.

Can we, in the face of this process of gradual growth manifest in all great movements, expect to find war eradicated and peace established at the close of two hundred fifty years of effort? I say two hundred fifty years, because throughout the seventeenth century war was perpetual. "There was no effort to arrest it. Men did not wish it arrested".

From that century on, there has been an organized peace movement. International parliaments have been held; peace temples have been built, and peace societies have been formed in an effort to avert that awful calamity which fills the pages of history.

All for nought? No! Although there is now raging one of the bloodiest wars of all time, this two hundred fifty years of peace work has not been fruitless. This short period, in reality but a moment in the history of the world, has left its mark.

One hundred ten years ago honor forced Alexander Hamilton to fight Aaron Burr. Today honorable private war does not exist. Half a century ago France, under Napoleon III, was proud to be a warring nation; proud to be the aggressor. Today, not only France, but every other nation involved in war, is filled with compunction; is loath to assume any blame for the origin of the present struggle. Yes, there has been progress in the peace movement, but not in a sufficient measure to avert the present war. This war was inevitable. When man carried his sabre at his side, private wars were common. When governments forbade concealed weapons, private wars ceased. And now we confidently hope that the present conflict will prove to be that gigantic stride in the evolution of peace which will expose the fallacy of the old adage: If you wish to live in peace be prepared for war.

If this prove true, impulsive rage will give way to deliberate reason. No longer will a false patriotism assert itself over men's actions, but the beneficent principles of the Nazarene will guide their deeds, national as well as individual. The doors of diplomacy will be thrown open to Christianity; and there will be a great revolt against war as an embodiment of all that is wrong, as "an unbroken monotony of ruin," as a damnable crime against God and humanity.

Friends, my plea to you tonight is that you despair not in this time of strife. All clouds have a silver lining. Though evolution is but gradual, the step is but short from the elimination of private war to the elimination of national slaughter. The final accomplishment of this rests with us. "Let us apply ourselves to that which presents itself to us, as our appropriate object". There are no laurels for us to win in war. Our fathers have gathered them all. The business that remains for us is the promotion of the "arts of peace" and the "works of peace". Let our object be one people, one great family, universally united by the sacred ties of brotherhood. Though peace is not yet, peace will be, for the train of evolution is never started without being destined final perfection.

And when it arrives:
"Each man will find his own in all men's good
And all will work in noble brotherhood,
Breaking their mailed fleets and armed towers,
And ruling by obeying nature's powers
And gathering all the fruits of peace and crowned with all her flowers."

The annual contest with the Ohlyesa
Held everyone's interest for a time.
In March was the initiation of Good were their vows and oaths.

The meetings are every two weeks
Of literary and social nature.

Blue and white are our colors.
Established pins for the society, we did

Anyone will tell you we have grown.
Really we are not babies any more.
Even tho' we were once, you know
Now we are a strong much envied society,
All working and pulling together.
Briday, February 26, was the day on which the Arena and Ohiyesa were to compete for the literary honors of the year.

Each society had held a preliminary tryout to choose the contestants for the final contest. As the day of the battle drew nearer, the excitement of both societies grew tenser and tenser. "CONTEST" was on every lip and was the subject of all conversations. Hope and confidence reigned in the Indian camp and victory seemed certain to them. The Arena was enthusiastic and loyal. The members were not confident of victory but were ready to try and determined to fight out the contest.

The longed for day arrived and the Arena showed true spirit by giving a continuation of their vaudeville in general assembly. This was a short, snappy exercise in four acts.

(This was a genuine surprise to everyone. The Arena had been considered quite dead.) All day groups of four or five Indians or Arena could be seen in the halls, on the stairs or in most any secluded corner, talking in whispers. If any of their opponents came near or happened to pass by, there was immediate silence.

The air was full of enthusiasm and rivalry by eight o'clock in the evening. The Arena showed their loyalty to their contestants by marching in, in single file, arrayed in white and wearing blue sashes. Each member carried a blue and white banner and sang: "It's a hard thing to be at Arena". Until the contestants marched upon the platform, each society gave its yells, sang songs and cheered their contestants on to victory.

The contest was opened by Mary Brady who gave an interpretation of literature. Opposing her was Dorothy Brundage, who rendered "Madam Butterfly" in a very pleasing manner. Next came the expository essay. Edith Lowe, one of the Ohiyesa's strongest members, spoke first. Against her was the Arena contestant, Charlotte Nachtwey. Their selections were very interesting and were well applauded. Each society felt sure of the two points. Perhaps the closest dual of the evening was on the interpretation of music. Gertrude DeKelver, of the enemy camp, sang "The Rosary" and held her audience to the very last. Carolyn Schnebel, our contestant, rendered "Absent". Her selection was very well chosen. With her pleasing voice, she touched the heart of every one present. When she had finished, we saw that she had won three points for us. Lastly was the short story, which was opened by Elizabeth Quinnell, a member of the rival society. She was followed by Celia Malcheski. She was very free both in speech and gesture. She held her audience with intense interest and kept them in good humor with her originality in the imitation of her character.

The contest was over and the victrola was played while awaiting the judges' decision. Finally the music ceased and a death like silence reigned. On the platform stood Mr. Smith ready to announce the decision. The Arena had won five points to the Ohiyesa's four. Cheers and yells filled the room. Confusion reigned. The most dignified cheered with a frenzy. The Ohiyesa had lost, but nevertheless, they had put up a splendid fight and had proved themselves worthy opponents of the victorious Arena.

An Elegy—to be pitied by Gray

The gong below us sounds its brazen note,
   The daylight fades, each hall grows gray, and dims,
The Normalite must now clear out—poor goat,
   And leave the school to darkness and to Simms.

Now comes the boarding house upon his sight,
   And all the air a hint of cabbage holds,
But, luckless one, he cannot get a bite—
   For he is late, and each his napkin folds.

Beneath those rugged elms, that yew tree's shade
   He stops to curse his fate; then takes his way
Down town, where he will try to make a raid
   On some free lunch, just getting what he may.

The wheezv call of his loud echoing Ben,
   A well aimed shoe, or soft caress on head,
The awful scratching sound of roommate's pen,
   No more shall rouse him from his lumpy bed.

For him no more the midnight oil shall burn,
   Or grinding tasks for Normal be his care,
No practise class shall laugh at his back's turn
   Or drive him mad, or make him tear his hair.

Oft did the classes to his bathing yield,
   His methods oft their devilish glee has broke,
How oft he longed to shake them till they squealed
   Or curve their jeans beneath his sturdy stroke!

Let not the critics mock his useful toil,
   His discipline, and questioning obscure.
Nor Faculty, with a disdainful smile,
   Rejoice when they have turned him from the door.

The gifts of study, the bursts of power,
   And all that grinding, all that bluffs e'er gave,
Await alike the inevitable hour—
   The paths of glory lead but to the grave.

Nor ye, ye sharks, impute to him the fault
   If Normal o'er his tomb no trophies raise
   Where through the long drawn days, and longer nights,
   He put in time and made a trail ablaze!

But knowledge to his eyes her ample page
   Rich with the spoils of time did ne'er unroll.
The teachers always fired him—red with rage—
   And then he'd always go down town and bowl.

The Epitaph

Here rests his head upon the lap of Earth,
   A youth to Fortune and to Fame unknown;
He flunked in Science—(That's no cause for mirth)—
   And Melancholy marked him for her own.

Small was his balance, and his debts I fear
   That dad to recompense did largely send.
He gave to fellowship (all he had)— a beer,
   He gained from Normal ('twas sad) a brief "suspend."

The Normal Dramatic Club has excelled its former reputation this year in its various dramatic productions. The first play, When Jane Eloped, was given by the club in the Opera House, December 16, 1914, for the benefit of the local city library. The evening's program was greatly appreciated by all who heard it.

The next appearance was made by the Dramatic Club in the production of How the Vote Was Won, and later A Case of Spoons, by candidates for membership to the club. All the participants were admitted as members of the club.

On June 4, 1915, the Senior Class Play, Tommy's Wife, is to be given in the new Assembly Room. An excellent production is assured as the cast is made up of people having dramatic ability and unusual experience as shown in previous plays.

Home Economics Club is one of the most active organizations of the school.

Object of this club is to promote interest in the various fields of Home Economics;

Members of the club are those Domestic Science students who desire to join,

Each meeting has proved to be very interesting and instructive.

Early last fall the club’s initial effort was an elaborate banquet served to members of the business men’s association.

Chappell is the name of the girl whom the club chose for its president for the year.

O! ask the football boys how they enjoyed the banquet which the club served them!

Nerve is hereby given to the juniors who are fortunate enough to be on a club program.

Our club boasts of having four (4) teachers enrolled, and a membership of seventy-five (75).

Meetings of club on second Wednesday of every month. Would that they came more often!

I stands for the industrious, intelligent, intellectual, coworkers of the club.

Candy sales given by the club are commended by all who have any signs of a sweet tooth.

Sandwich sales are a blessing for the poor hungry students at 3:45.

Can you beat it! Not one of the D. S. girls selling stain removers was held up for a license.

Lucile Daley was sent as a delegate from the club to the oratorical contest at Whitewater.

U know the “way to a man’s heart is through his stomach” is the maxim the D. S. girls hear incessantly.

Be loyal to your Alma Mater—new students take heed and join the Home Economics Club.

Recipe for "Home Economics Program"

1 large chair rounded well with presiding officers
1 scant th. sp. business
4 to 8 worried and frightened girls
1 battered piano
1 very sedate and bored audience
4 proud and smiling instructors
Several talks on "more or less" domestic subjects, a few sharp criticisms for shortening, season with sage advice
Moisten with tears from belated members
Mix dry ingredients first (talks by faculty and seniors), then add other ingredients in order of mention, stirring constantly. Put into an extra sized gem pan (kindergarten chairs) and stew over moderate heat for at least an hour and a half. Serve occasionally with eight refreshments.

Afternoon Tea—Reception

While the foregoing statement of program might indicate to the stranger that the meetings of the Home Economics Club are extremely dull and prosaic, yet the actual fact is that they are among the most interesting meetings of the year. As an illustration of this, we recite the work of two meetings.

The club was especially honored on February tenth by a visit from Miss Emma Vonkey, the Inspector of Domestic Science in Wisconsin Schools. The meeting was open to the public. Her subject was "Home Economics Work in the State." The address was greatly appreciated, by the Seniors especially, for they were told what would be expected of them when they went out to manage departments of their own. Among the High Schools of this state there were at that time 154 which offered the course to its students. Some of the points emphasized were the following: In teaching cookery, suit lessons to the season; teach practical things; plan lessons economically; in higher grades make lessons more complex. Several suggestions were offered by which this could be done; thus: Figure the nutritive value of foods taught; calculate the cost and season of the year the particular food could be made cheapest; study out the number of calories in all the common foods. Great stress was placed upon the idea of giving school credit for home work. In this way, the home is brought nearer to the school and mother and teacher have more in common. Concerning domestic art she said that the most important thing in the teaching of sewing is workmanship. The problem given to the students should be simple enough so that the finished product is perfect. After the lecture, an informal reception was held in the Art room to afford every one an opportunity to meet Miss Conley.

On November ninth, Mr. Fairchild talked to the club members on the very dry subject, "Dust." Dust, although very minute particles floating about in the air, sometimes contains great multitudes of germs. Most of the germs present in the dust of the air are harmless, but sometimes disease germs are clinging to particles of flying dust. Dust is therefore a carrier of disease and we should use every possible means to keep it down. When we dust in the home our aim should be to get rid of the dust, for it is foolish simply to stir it up into the air where it will be inhaled or will settle again upon objects in the room.
"WHERE FACULTY JURISDICTION CEASES"
Promise ever to be loyal,
To our tribe and to its members,
To our Normal and our teachers,
And whenever your path crosses
That of any Ohiyesa
You shall find a loyal friend there.
(Initiation service)

On the shores of Old Wisconsin,
By the shining stream of water,
Stands the Normal of all Normals,
Pouring forth her wondrous knowledge.
Then the question comes before us:
"Who are seekers of this knowledge?"
"Who are they that come and ponder
In these halls renowned for learning?"
Part of those who work and labor—
Work with pleasure and with pain—
Group themselves around the camp fire;
Ohiyesa is their name.

On this name of Ohiyesa,
With the music that it carries
And the meaning to the Indians,
Has no measure, has no boundaries.
With our Chieftains, Smith and Mueller,
And our other loyal workers,
With this name of Ohiyesa,
We can meet and face all problems;
Meet them firmly as foundations,
Meet them bravely, and with courage;
Meet them as an Ohiyesa
Always meets her obligations.
We're prepared to meet misfortunes,
We're prepared to meet successes,
For our training is of both sorts,
"Ready" is our standing watchword.
THE Ohiyesa Society is forging rapidly ahead. At the present time it is the largest literary society of the school, the membership having passed the one hundred mark.

On Monday evening, November 23, the old Indians met in the gymnasium and welcomed the new members with a very impressive initiation service, the theme of which was loyalty—loyalty to homes, school, teachers, friends and the society. The girls were attired in their usual Indian costumes, and after the ceremonies refreshments were served.

The Ohiyesa Society took charge of the “Palace of Sweets” on November 14. The Indians were busy all day preparing for and serving the large and enthusiastic crowd with “Ogalala,” “Little Smoke,” “Minnetonka,” “Indian Chile,” and “Ohiyesa Special.” The skill of the Indian maidens was shown in the unique decorations, menu cards, Indian dances and musical numbers.

The Ohiyesa night at the Gem Theater was another one of the successful events of the school year. Indians ushered people to their places; the famous Columbia quartette sang many delightful songs and the theater was filled to its utmost capacity.

The sale of homemade candies which was held at Hunnon-Baeh’s was a decided success. Pure candy was sold both in bulk and in fancy boxes.

The contest between the Arena Society and the Indians was a very interesting affair. More real society spirit was aroused than ever before. The Arenas took first place in the interpretation of music and short story events, while the Ohiyesas secured the decisions in the interpretation of literature and the expository essay. The advantage was secured by the Arenas by reason of the fact that the musical contest counted three points to two for each of the other numbers.

The Indians felt justly proud of their representatives.

As the school year closes many of the old members will leave the society, but our places will soon be filled by others. We hope next year's society will be even stronger than this year's has been, and that each member upon leaving will feel as we do—that it was worth while to be an Indian.

[103]
In September 1914 the school was organized into departments. The primary department was to consist of the kindergarten and the first four grades. Students who were to become primary teachers were to have special work to fit them more efficiently for teaching in these grades.

In October 1914 the students taking primary work met and formed an organization which was later named "The Primary Council." The officers of this council are a junior chairman, a senior chairman, a general chairman to preside over the meetings of the council and a secretary. The advisor of the council is Miss Parkhurst, the primary director.

Every Wednesday evening at the close of school the council meets for one hour. At these meetings interesting and instructive talks have been given by members of the faculty or outside visitors. Every meeting was devoted to things bearing upon the work of the primary school. Children's songs and folk dances suitable for the primary children were presented by members of the council and many points were made clear regarding all phases of the school program.

Since the organization of this council much has been accomplished. One of the first things was the adoption of a white uniform to be worn while conducting any primary practice class.

The seniors raised money for the department by means of a candy sale. The juniors gave a book tea for the purpose of interesting outsiders in children's books. Miss Parkhurst permitted the use of about one hundred beautiful books from her private library.

One of the most important things accomplished by the council was the arranging for the establishment of a primary clubhouse for the school year beginning September 1915. The Williams' property on Main Street has been rented for this purpose. Any girl taking primary work is accepted in the order.
of her application as a house resident. The house will be used to further the educational and social interests of the girls taking primary work.

Parlors and a place to entertain members of their families or other guests will be prepared for the use of the girls. A tennis court, croquet grounds, and a garden for the children will also be provided. All meetings of the council and all social affairs pertaining to the organization will take place at the house. Every member of the council, whether or not a resident of the house will be entitled to its privileges. Miss Helen Parkhurst, primary director, and class officer for all of the girls of the council after September 1915, will supervise all activities which take place here and will live in the house.

Another very important event is the primary reunion to be held during the coming year when a regular reunion day will be set. At this time prominent speakers and educators will address the club and the graduates of the Normal who are doing primary work. A reunion was planned for this school year and Miss Jane Addams of Hull House had promised to be one of the speakers. The reunion was postponed due to Miss Addams being called to The Hague to attend the peace convention.

This council is an organization which desires to aid all students in this department as well as assist in the general school activities. The organization will also help to secure boarding and rooming places for the members outside of the clubhouse. It will assist in any other way which will promote the interests of the primary department.

HE EXCELLENT foundation which the Young Women's Christian Association boasted of last year has been a means toward an end. We have been successful in reestablishing an organization upon this firm foundation and maintaining it throughout the year in such a way that each participant has been helped. The association work affords a field for progress and development physically, mentally and morally in a manner which can be gained from no other organization.

To the cabinet, which is the executive body of this organization, is due a great deal of the success of the Young Women's Christian Association. In this cabinet are thirteen officers, each of whom has a special line of work to look after. To make the work stable and harmonious there is held a weekly cabinet meeting, in which the business of the organization is discussed.

There are two phases of activity which this organization aims to carry out: first, to develop each member so that she may be equipped as a practical Christian leader, both during her attendance at school, and after she leaves; second, to carry on definite and strong Christian work in the school. To accomplish our first aim we hold weekly meetings in the association room, gather for matins every morning, plan social events, cooperate with all the churches in the city, give entertainments which are instructive and helpful. To gain our second aim we correspond with other schools, correspond with prospective students, meet new students at the trains and assist them to find rooms and board, and visit the sick or send them flowers.

Every year we send delegates to the Lake Geneva convention which is held during the summer. This year our delegation—numbering four—has exceeded the delegation which has been sent to this convention heretofore. To come into a more personal and inspiring contact with the Young Women's Association activities we send delegates to the central Field Convention held at Chicago in November. This year we sent our president, Elizabeth Zuinnell, and our social chairman, Alice Chappell.

No progress can be made without the cooperation of the girls with the cabinet. Our field secretary, Miss Helen Pearson, and our faculty advisor, Mr. Hippensteel, have brought this out by addresses to the organization. They have been indeed helpful, and necessary to the success of our organization. Our success we feel has been gained "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit," saith the Lord of Hosts.

1914-1915 Athletics

Of the athletic showing made by Stevens Point Normal during the past year we are justly proud. September found a new man at the head of this department. L. G. Schneller left to assume a position as superintendent of the schools of Cumberland and to fill his place came George D. Corneal.

Mr. Corneal is himself an athlete of no mean ability having been a team-mate of such men as Melvin Sheppard. He comes to Stevens Point after nine years of coaching experience. He is an enthusiastic worker who has done much for the athletics of the school during his short stay here.

Although crowned with no state championships, our men were ever in the running and their lack of victory is indeed hard to account for.

If there is any criticism which the writer cares to make it is in regard to the lack of cooperative spirit on the part of the athletes during the early part of the season. Both our football and basketball teams failed to strike their stride until after the big games had been played and—lost. Why not before? Because the fellows weren't pulling together. Perhaps it was unconscious discord but it existed nevertheless.

In view of the fact that this all disappeared as the season drew to a close and in view of the material ready for next year, we prophesy a whole wreath of state championships for S. P. N. next year.

As this goes to press the following squad is training for the Inter-Normal track meet to be held in Whitewater on May 29: Reilly, captain, Shadewald, Wadleigh, Paulson, Van Tassel, Hamilton, Kluck.

THE WINNERS OF THE BISCHOFF CUP
The Girls' Basketball Tournament

One of the most interesting events in the Normal athletics during the year 1914-1915 was the girls' basketball tournament. This contest may be termed a success in the truest sense of the word. The girls who played, worked exceedingly hard to make the games as interesting as possible for their opponents. There was much enthusiasm shown by the fact that several times there were twenty-five juniors out to practice. The other classes recognized the power of the juniors and put forth greater effort because of it. Each held in mind the dream of obtaining the cup and they worked accordingly.

The sub-freshmen and rural juniors because of their lack of players in each class, combined forces to make a team. This team was recognized as the weakest team in school so they were allowed to choose their opponents. They challenged the freshman team. The game was held on the morning of March 20. The sub-freshman-rural junior team, although they played hard and fast, were unable to cope with the freshmen and they lost by a score of 31 to 1.

The freshmen were then allowed to challenge any of the remaining teams and they met the sophomores on Tuesday, March 31. Both teams played very well but the Sophomores won by a score of 13 to 10.

The juniors, who were said to be so very strong, were then allowed to select any of the three remaining teams to play while the other two teams were to contest. On March 26, the juniors challenged the sophomores and this left the seniors to play the rural seniors. Although the sophomores had a great deal of pluck they were not able to do much against the wiry juniors and the juniors won 28 to 4. In the game between the rural seniors and the juniors the final score was 13 to 6 in favor of the juniors.

On the night of March 26, the final games were played. Everyone was worked up to an unusually high pitch and the gallery was filled with an excited mob of students and townspeople all rooting for their choice of players. The first game between the sophomores and the rural seniors was intensely interesting and the final score was 13 to 15, the rural seniors being winner; thereby obtaining third place in the tournament. The second game of the evening was the game between the seniors and the juniors. Both teams were prepared to do their best in order to win the cup. The game was very significant in that not a single field basket was made. The contest was won by the juniors because of their success in making free throws. This game ended in a victory for the juniors, the final score being 5 to 0.

The beautiful cup was given to the victorious team by Doctor Bischoff who also presented a box of candy to each of the teams in the final game.

Before the tournament, judges had been appointed to select the various players who did unusually well in the games which they played. These people were to compose the all-star team. The judges were as follows: Miss Parkhurst, Miss Brewster, Mr. Dellzell and Mr. Corneal.
TEVENS POINT, as it exists today, merely represents in a summarized form the results obtained from united and strenuous efforts put forth toward an admirable end. As a city of beauty and education it reveals a history of success due to a continuous and steady line of past progressive growth.

Had we wandered through this vicinity in the early part of the nineteenth century, we might have seen the Wisconsin River flowing carelessly through a region which supported a dense growth of white pine. This dense forest was penetrated only here and there by a winding trail of the natives.

These primitive conditions were doomed when an early pioneer, George Stevens by name, drew his canoe ashore on a projection in the Wisconsin just above Shaurette Rapids. (This place now marks the foot of Clark and Main Streets.) It was here that Stevens built out of roughly hewn logs a store house, the first of its kind in Portage County. He carried on an active pioneer trading business. He made frequent journeys, with the aid of the Indians, to Little Bull Falls, now the prosperous little village of Mosinee. Thus our city owes its name to the man who established a trading post on a projection in the Wisconsin River.

The first dwelling house was built sometime in the late forties. A short time after the erection of the dwelling, a saw mill was built and thereafter growth was steady and rapid. In 1850 the village of Stevens Point numbered about two hundred souls, the majority of whom were attracted by the opportunities of the lumber industry. A town organization was perfected and there was elected a board of supervisors consisting of Abraham Brawley and N. F. Bliss. The officers immediately commenced the survey of streets and county roads. It was at this time that a well-to-do citizen, Mathias Mitchell, presented the village with a plot of ground since known as the “Public Square.”

The village grew so rapidly that in 1857 application was made to the state legislature for a city charter which was soon granted. Soon after the city council was elected. The first city officials were: William Schofield, Mayor; Ansen Rood and Valentine Brown, Aldermen from First Ward; H. Fergusen, Moses Perkins, Second Ward; Seth Holmstad and A. G. Hamacker, Third Ward; Jack
The city grew rapidly and in 1889, it became an aspirant for one of the new normal schools about to be established. After one hundred four ballots, the Board of Regents selected Stevens Point for the location of the sixth State Normal School.

In addition to a large high school, the city supports six ward schools. These buildings are all kept up to a high standard, thus affording the children the best modern conveniences. The city board of education has been successful in securing teachers of high intellectual standing for these various schools.

Few cities can boast of the educational advantages that are at hand in Stevens Point, but this merely typifies the general development and progress that has been going on in the many phases of this prosperous city. During the period of advancement our city has been assisted by an industrious, agricultural people to whom it is greatly indebted. It has, in turn, afforded them the best of available markets.

Cities that owe their development to mining and lumbering may decline when the raw material becomes exhausted, but Stevens Point, the ideal of beauty and the embodiment of industry, endures forever.

(The Iris is indebted to Mr. Strope for the above.)
1894—The School—1915

From Massachusetts, always a sponsor for educational development, came the inspiration for our University at Madison. The University flourished and spread its benefits widely over the State, but there were many who could not avail themselves of this opportunity, and they pleaded that branches of the "Tree of Knowledge" be planted throughout the State, in order that all might be enlightened. So it was decided by our wise legislators that five Normal schools should be established in the State, and that these should be located at Platteville, Whitewater, Oshkosh, Milwaukee and River Falls.

A short time later, it was decided that there was need of another Normal School. Where should it be? Somewhere "North of the north line of Township number twenty-four North." Finally, after 104 ballots, on July 22, 1883, Stevens Point was chosen, largely through the efforts of Judge Byron B. Park, a local resident and one of the legislators.

After some difficulty, a site for the building was chosen, near the eastern end of Main Street. The contract was let November 3, 1883, and work was begun at once.

The Normal School opened for its first session September 17, 1894. The formal dedication was held on October 18. The grounds had been leveled and improved, and school life was well under way.

The building which occupied the center of a five acre plot, is of Black River Falls pressed brick, with light lona-cotta trimmings. In the basement are the fuel and boiler rooms, the janitor's quarters, the cloak rooms and the gym. Most of the first floor was given over to the Model School department. The Normal proper occupied the second and third floors. The whole building was easily and well ventilated.

During the fourth year of the school's existence, five acres were added to the campus, and fittingly, money was appropriated by the State Legislature for a new wing, which was completed September 1, 1901. This addition was greatly needed to accommodate the development of the school. A new assembly room was provided for; also cloak rooms, and on the third floor, the various organizations of the school allotted rooms. The Act Annex, a historical and scientific museum, was located on the third floor of the addition.

At this time, the campus was greatly improved and beautified by new shrubs and trees which today make glad the eye and educate us to a greater appreciation of Nature.

In 1911, the school was granted another appropriation for a further addition, and for cottages for the Domestic Science department. But on account of the pressing need of Milwaukee Normal, the money was given them and we were forced to wait.

However, on May 18, 1914, work was begun on our new addition, and the cottages.

In 1914, through the efforts of Regent G. B. Nelson, and President Sims, the legislature granted us one hundred thousand dollars for a dormitory, to be built immediately.

When Normal Schools were established, the definite purposes of each were set forth as follows:

1. There shall be instruction and training of persons, both male and female, in the theory and art of teaching and in all the various branches that pertain to a common school education, and in all subjects needful to qualify for teaching in the public schools.

2. There shall also be instruction in the fundamental laws of the United States, and this state, in what regards the rights and duties of citizens.”

In carrying out these purposes, six courses were installed at the beginning of the school's existence. These were "an elementary course of two years, an English Scientific course of four years, a four-year Latin course, a four-year German course, a one-year professional course and a one-year common school course.

The courses for high school graduates consisted then, as now, of the last two years of the English Scientific, Latin or German courses.

For some time no one entered the German course, and there were no separate departments of literature, psychology, biology, or geography.

By 1910, the number of courses was extended to ten, the new ones being a four-year English course; an advanced postgraduate course, a Domestic Science and a Manual Training course, and special preparation for the primary and intermediate grades.

The Domestic Science course was installed in 1909-06, under the direction of Miss May Sechust. The organization of the Manual Training course was not completed until 1909. Mr. L. G. Flagler was the first director of this department.

The first director of practice was Miss Emma J. Haney, an able and efficient organizer. The model department flourished under her supervision. She was followed by Miss Mary D. Bradford, Miss Josephine Fitzgerald, and in 1906 by Mr. F. S. Hyer, who has ever since ruled the "model school" with a firm, but kindly hand, and developed this department to a high grade of efficiency.

To satisfy the needs of the school and community, the Kindergarten was established in 1902.

When Mr. Sims became our President, there was no summer session held here. Mr. Sims at once inaugurated this movement, which has proved very successful. Since 1908, summer school has been held regularly, lasting for six weeks. Beginning this June, the session will continue for nine weeks, forming another quarter of the school term. The customary ten weeks quarters have been shortened to nine weeks, thus allowing time for the larger summer term.

Through President Sims' efforts, a Rural School course was installed in 1912. John F. Philan was chosen as first director. This fall Miss Graham was engaged as his assistant, in order that this growing department might be properly handled.

To whom does the Normal owe thanks for its great growth and development? Let us consider its brilliant faculty. At present we have thirty-six instructors.

The ones who have left us are making their way in the business world, or in other educational institutions. A few have passed beyond the cares of this earth.

Mr. Culver and Mr. Collins are the only ones remaining of the original faculty. They are now, as then, beloved by all they come in contact with. Miss Gray was the next of the present faculty to come to us, then Mr. Spindler, Mr. Hyer and Miss Gilruth. Miss Gilruth remained until February, 1915, when she left us to accept a fine position in the schools of Minneapolis.

If time permitted, I would mention all, but why? We are all cognizant of their worth and work.

Are we forgetting our first president? Theron B. Pray, a wise and efficient leader, was appointed president at the organization of the Normal School in 1894. His uplifting influence did much to develop and encourage the progress of the school.

In the fall of 1906, our present head, John F. Sims, became our president. Under his efficient and wise management, S. P. N. has become widely known for its high standards, physically, mentally and morally.

Along with the development of the professional side of normal education, came the growth of school societies and organizations. Early in the fall of 1896 an oratorical association was formed. This association had control of all matters pertaining to international contests, joint debates and any other of like interest. Our efforts along this line have not always received the victory, but we have ever had the name of being hard workers, modest winners, and game losers.

At one time debates were held with Whitewater; later, with Oshkosh also; now the debate with Oshkosh alone remains and is one of the events of the year. After the defeat of last year, victory was doubly sweet this March, when the Junior team defeated the Oshkosh team, by a unanimous decision.

In the early days of school life every student was required to give a rhetorical. Now, only Seniors must "appear in public." These exercises are interesting and very instructive, as topics of present day importance are chosen.

Athletics, if properly handled, are an important and a necessary part of a school curriculum. S. P. N. has long been interested in sports, and contested... with the other Normals of the state for victory in football, basketball and track work. It was not until 1912 that we had a regular coach—Mr. L. G. Schneller—who developed athletics to a marked degree. The past year, under Coach G. D. Cornwell, the school has made wonderful advances in the amount of "pep" put into their work, and in that spirit of "team work" without which no team can progress.

The girls, too, indulge in athletics. Class basketball teams are organized and a tournament held. This year, the Juniors are school champions, and winner of the "Bischoff Cup."

In 1895, the tennis grounds were laid out, and this game has become very popular among S. P. N. students. The last two years there has been a Tennis Association, under direction of Mr. Ames and Mr. Fairchild, both enthusiasts and experts at the game.

Let us consider the social life of S. P. N. Our wise instructors did not forget that the school must provide and supervise social life, in order to keep the students together in a friendly body. Therefore, literary societies have been co-existent with the growth of the school. The Arena Society was the first founded, was open to both men and women until 1897, when the men withdrew, in order to have greater freedom of discussion, and formed the Forum Society. In 1904, another boys' society, the Athenæum, was formed, but because of the scarcity of boys, the two united and are now a flourishing body with the impressive title of Forum-Athenæum.

The Arena languished and almost died out, but this year an energetic, lively crowd are at the helm, who developed their society, until now it is a strong, social factor of the school.

The Ohiyesa Society for girls took their name from the Indian title of Charles Eastman—Ohiyesa. This noted Indian lecturer left his impress upon the society in the inspiration he left them to investigate Indian treaties and customs. This group of girls has always been strong and has greatly influenced life of the school. Two Indian plays, written by Pearl Richards, class of 1914, have been given with marked success. It is the ambition of the society to have these plays every year.

Music has not been overlooked. The Tiehole Clef Club for girls, and the Boys' Glee Club were among the early organizations. In 1913, an operetta, The Japanese Girl, was presented by the two clubs. In 1914, The Drum Major was given. We had hoped for further productions, but owing to the illness of Miss Baker, our hopes have rather languished this year. However, the male quartette made up of Messrs. Gordon, Hafsoos, Nelson and Rybicke, have practiced faithfully and attained good results.

The Y. W. C. A. was organized December 9, 1902, and has done a wonderful work among the girls. From time to time, efforts have been made to establish a Y. M. C. A. but these efforts have been unsuccessful. We hope that in the near future a permanent organization of this kind will be located here.

There have been other societies in our school, but they are not existent at the present time. These were the St. Cecilia Music Club, the Vivo Club, the Sketch Club, the Hikus Club, and the Browning Society. Two years ago the Home Economics Club was organized. This society is a strong one and promotes the interests of the Domestic Science Department.

A normal school should keep in touch with events and people of note in the outside world. Consequently, the lecture course was started in 1897. This course is educative and inspiring, and has given us opportunities to hear many famous people, such as Jane Addams, W. J. Bryan, Russell Conwell, and others.

A school without a Press Association is of little account, so to supply a need of this nature, the Press Association was founded in 1893. The first Pointer came out in December of 1893. This paper has always expressed the voice of the student body, and its increasing circulation has proved its worth. The price has advanced from fifty cents a year to a dollar per year, but the larger size of the paper and its increased efficiency makes the cost worth while. Until 1914, the Pointer was issued monthly, but since that time it is a weekly issue. This change has been a good one and the Pointer has been improving rapidly this year under the very able leadership of Richard Van Tassel.

The other publication of the school is the annual—published by the senior class. The first annual was issued in 1901, and was of great credit to the school.

It was in 1906 that the first Ius was published. The name was chosen because of the colors of the Iris—the purple and gold expressing our school colors. This publication has been successful from the first and we venture to say, always will be for into it are put the efforts of the ablest students of our school.

And where do we get all this talent and ability that make our school societies flourish, and our publications successful? From every county of the State, and from outside of the State, "they come to S. P. N. because they know it is the best. From a graduating class of three, in 1896, the numbers have rapidly swelled until this year will see 175 graduates leaving the school to be earnest, faithful workers for the good cause of education.

Does someone ask: "What is behind all these organizations? What makes them possible?" We answer the grand old school spirit of our school, and that spirit that may be defeated, but never downed. It is because of this school spirit that Stevens Point Normal has grown so wonderfully and well, and if history repeats itself, we may look forward to a glorious future, and a wondrous destiny for the school we all love so well.
14—Enrollment. Howdy. Where are you from?
15—Enrollment continued.
16—Still more enrolling. Is that Madam Montessori? No that is Miss Parkhurst. We meet for assignments.
17—Say, where is Miss Gray’s room? In nigger heaven, I guess.
18—How do you like the new coach? First call for football volunteers.
19—All the new students go out to see Stevens Point. Fine place.
20—Boys start political campaign.
21—Electon of Senior officers. Political machine slips a cog.
22—High School finds that the Normal can play football. Score 15 to 0.

10—Sims chases bunch of loafers into current events.
11—Friday. Fussers' night, nothing to do until Monday morning.
12—Are you going to Whitewater?
13—St. Patrick's day. Glitzinski, Rybnick and Krutza wear green. "Some Barbarians, some Vandals, some Pups, hang the skeleton, throw rotten eggs and apples at the clock." Cost eleven cents to fix it.
14—Off for Whitewater. Peterson, Delmore and Patterson make a forced visit at Waupaca. Gordon drinks some of that "Darn hitter stuff."
15—Oratorical contest. Milwaukee 1st, Oshkosh 2nd.
16—Everybody goes to Milwaukee for a big time. Hamilton and Crouse stop in Madison, and call on Conant "The cave dweller." By kindness of railroad officials the train stopped three times in Oshkosh for Patterson to make connections.
17—Spin takes a fall on the ice. Thorpe scraps with a gasoline engine. You should have seen him the next day.
18—Girls advertise basketball. (They did look so cute on the rostrum.)
19—Report on the oratorical contest. Hamerski propounds more problems than the world could ever solve.
20—Tell me a current event, for goodness sake!!!
21—Girls' basketball tournament starts. S. P. N. Juniors win unanimously from Oshkosh. Miss Ferebee gets lost on the streets of Oshkosh.
22—Interscholastic basketball tournament. So many imported boys around Normal that Grace Gavin gets scared and goes home.
23—Shall we amend the constitution of the oratorical association?
THE FEVER

I feel so sort of restless-like
I don't know what to do;
The weather makes me feel this way,
Is it that way with you?

I've heard folks talk of that disease
That comes on in the spring—
That makes 'em long to sit about
And not do anything.

I think it's that that ails me, yes,
I've got the fever right—
It's just about in April when
The fish begin to bite.

And I take my old bamboo pole
And go down to the creek,
And sneak along the bank until
I land one—just as slick!

A trout, My Boy, a big one, too—
A speckled, shining king!
Oh yes, this fever surely makes
Me restless in the spring!

---

6—Back again, all but Beggs; he stays "Down on the farm."
7—Kluck, Killeen, Rabenstein and Patterson selected to debate the Ohiyesa.
Killeen and Gordon have argument with election officials.
8—Meeting of track men. If you're coming out don't be lazy like Van and Shad.
9—Bill Killeen has 11 fights. Thorpe kicks the sign off the sidewalk.
12—How's the Isis coming? Fine, it will out day after tomorrow.
13—Lulu Netmachek has a dream. She didn't mention any names?
14—Where you going the Fourth of July?
15—A FEW Normal students attend a Young People's meeting.
16—School spirit "Laid to rest" with due solemnity.
17—Chillrud appears for track wearing an "extremely" English suit.

5—Interclass track meet. Van and Ham can themselves.
6—Kileen and Lovejoy each contribute four and one-half points to their respective classes. (Track meet continued.)
7—Ohiyesa swamps the Forum-Athenæum. The boys couldn’t even force the vote onto the girls.
8—Interscholastic track meet, under the auspices of the Normal. Merrill first, Wausau second, Stevens Point High School third.
9—Miss Cameron tells of all the churches she attended yesterday.
10—Books piled in a “dutch heap” on the rostrum. Let us ostracize the wrong doers. Oh y-e-s.
11—Prof. Smith settles the war for us, all within the fifteen minutes of general exercise time.
12—Rhetoricals. Who snored?
13—River Falls wins over Stevens Point debating team by 2 to 1 vote. Anyway our team got lots of ice cream. Have you a bid to the Sorority dance? (Whisper Sorority, dear reader.)
14—Reception for the Seniors (stiff time). Daisy Dill falls down stairs.
15—“Cake stealers” get it right and left. (What do you mean, left?)
16—Who hit Cecil Todd with a hair brush? “Pat” is called into the office for the fifteenth time this week. Wow!!!
17—Regent’s examination (and we were foolish enough to worry about them).
18—We heard Leila Johnson and Cecil Todd whistle at one o’clock in the morning.
19—Letters are awarded to those folks who are endowed with a supernatural gift of gab. Ohiyesa Coney Island. Pink lemonade, peanuts and general deviltry.
20—Miss Beaudin has a tooth pulled.
21—Ham and Van resume track work. They had a dream last night and saw Whitewater.
22—Pres. Sims keeps 490 students fifteen minutes overtime at assembly telling them to be prompt to their classes.
23—Miss Allen assigns another dietary for the sake of diversion. (Oh, you poor D. S. girls.)
24—Ohiyesa girls pay their Inn bill in pennies. Their whole year’s savings. Who goes to Whitewater? Melvin Sheppard Paulsen and other speed artists leave for the field of honor.
25—Field and track meet at Whitewater Normal. (Look on the next page, and you will see how it came out.)
2—Play Festival on the campus.
4—Senior class play, Tommy’s Wife, in the NEW Auditorium.
6—Baccalaureate sermon, Reverend R. H. Weller.
7—Class day exercises in the NEW Auditorium.
8—Faculty reception to alumni, students and friends.
9—Alumni banquet.

WHEN YOU THINK OF WIT THINK OF THORPE

B. M. K. Thorpe is "wan" good man,
He pulls a joke whene'er he can.
Look at this page and you will see,
He sure did slip one o'er on me.

The artist drew this on the sly,
The engravers' silence Thorpe did buy,
And to promote his little lark
The printers kept me in the dark.

It was, however, too good to keep.
And at the proof I got a peep,
In time to make an alteration
And write this note of explanation.

'Tis all very well, my GENT dear,
Don't have for me one single fear.
While I to Denver turn my tracks,
You just peddle your old BOOK of Facts.
MISS CELL ANEUS

To those among us
Who can a joke appreciate
We, the Staff, this department
Do fondly dedicate.

For reasons not publishable, we have decided to leave the Portage Branch out of these columns.

It's a long way to Blue River by the Stage Coach road to go.

"Why don't you laugh at these jokes Bill?"
Bill: "I was brought up to respect old age."

A little nonsense now and then is relished by the best of men.

A cram in time saves nine (weeks).
A pin in time saves embarrassment.

IN NORMAL
Early to bed and early to rise,
Work like Helen advertise.

"If there should be another flood,
To this book I'd fly,
For if all the world was again submerged,
This book would still be dry."

Deer teecher:
excuse my girl and dont you scold her you think your smart dont you but I jest bet you cudent tell the time neither if both the hands wuz off your clock.

Do you know that Beelzebub was going 2,394,641,982,503,629 mi. per hour when he "lit"?

Teacher—"Why do you talk so slow, Wood?"
Wood—"I talk at the same rate that I think."

A WOman HATER'S LAY
I never loved a Mefale,
I never want to love one,
But I can tell you this right now,
I'd rather love than wed one.
(Ask Fairchild what he means "Mefale").

Children at the opening exercises had just listened to a selection on the victrola.
"Now," said the teacher, "do you know what great singer we have just heard?"
"Caruso," said Virgil Herrick.
"Good," said the teacher, "now who can tell me what great man sang with Caruso?"
"Crusoe's man Friday," yelled Bill Ruff.

HAD THE RIGHT IDEA
The June tests arrived. Among the language questions was this:
What is a root? What is a derivative? Give an example of each.
Tom Hannah answered, "A root is the beginning. A derivative is something formed from the root. Example: Root, cat; derivative, kitten."
Rieschl—"Don't eat all the watermelon, Van."
Van—"Why not?"
Riesch—"Cause they want to feed the soldiers on the Rhine."

SOME ESCAPE
The criminal was closely pursued,
Until, almost at bay,
He stepped upon a slot machine,
And so he got a weigh.

Mother looking over boy's shoulder—"Your spelling is perfectly terrible."
Rabenstein—"This isn't a spelling lesson. It's a composition."

You brush your teeth and comb your hair
And they assume your pleasant air
That's Preparing!

Then you climb on flights of stairs
To see the man of the affairs
That's Transporting!

You feel quite sure that you did pass
In fact, you think you're best in the class
That's Expectation!

And then you learn through turned fate
That is that test you got "W"!

That's Damnation!

Dedicated to John Sonder
Warren asked the other day in Agriculture—"If a hen wanted to set, would a type-setter?"

After he had quit frothing at the mouth, Moeller said— "When Eve saw Adam eat the apple, did the Maiden Blush, and if so, did the Northern Spy?"

"What became of that little girl you made Jo to in a hammock last summer, Harold?"

Brady—"We fell out."

Lucille Lawrence roomed across the hall from Mr. Eliason at McDill's. When she was drawing her house plan she often consulted him about her work. One night about eight-fifteen she walked over and rapped on the door.

"Who is it?"

"It's Lucille."
"Well I've retired, what do you want?"
"I'm making my house plan to scale and I've two feet left. What shall I do with them?"
"Well, you can stand on them, you know," was the sleepy response.

HELP THE LITTLE BELGIANS

Last year before Christmas the grade children in the training school made a contribution to the Christmas Ship for the bereaved little Europeans. The girls made a variety of things—underwear and baby clothes, and the boys earned money to buy stockings, mittens, and such articles. They were allowed to enclose little greetings, while all of these expressed the sincerity of their feeling, many were remarkable for their element of humor or pathos.

The following were taken at random from the little gifts:

"I suppose your father is killed by this time, but I hope you'll have a merry Christmas."

One boy said—"I have raked yards for these stockings so I can give you a merry Christmas."

"I suppose your father is at war on the European battlefield, Merry Christmas!"

Still another child wrote—"I am sending you these mittens. I hope they keep you warm."

About the most pathetic of all read—"I suppose your father is dead by this time, but I have sent you these stockings to keep your feet cozy."
AND HE'S FROM PEPIN COUNTY

He was just fresh from his father's home. When we say fresh, dear reader, we use the word advisably and not in any flippant sense. Had he not had ten days of big eats and other boyish recreation? Had he not had his neck washed and his other aesthetic instincts stimulated by his mother?

When he climbed to board the train to return to the scene of his arduous student life, at Stevens Point Normal College, he was still with the noble ideal of service to humanity. He longed to be the chivalrous knight to some frail damsel. As he walked down the car he saw nothing which could possibly inspire him to gallant activity—the usual banana-fed infant, a baldheaded drummer, and a Bohemian immigrant and a professional man or two could suggest nothing even to his fertile brain. He was dejected.

After a station or two, a neat looking woman came in and sat down across from us. He watched her rather interested for some time. At the next junction he missed her and there in the seat she had vacated lay a bundle.

Did you ever realize the romantic possibility of a brown paper parcel? No? Well they simply mean romance to some individuals—especially to our young and gallant normalite. His chance for a kind deed! Did he grasp it? Why, dear reader, he acted so swiftly one would think he put the pep in Pepin County.

He seized the bundle and dashed hastily (you might almost judge he could dash no other way) from the car, with the intention of restoring the woman's belongings. Just as he got half way across the station he heard the conductor of his train call "all aboard." Did this phase him? Perish the thought! He grabbed a man going towards the other train, told him something incoherent about giving it to a tall woman, good looking, blue suit, and vanished into his train.

On the way down the aisle any one could see that he felt that he had acted in a way becoeming to a Knight Errant. Had he not conserved the woman's property, saved her possible discomfort or sadness, all by his prompt action? Yes—oh yes—even at the risk of his life and limbs! He sat down, more or less disgusted with himself—not.

If he had only been a union man and quit on time, all would have been well, but he could not restrain his desire for well doing. He noted a woman—she was all of that, and (the author) even heard her described as fat as a dowager, was looking at him more or less vividly from the opposite side of the car. He thought she was taking a good look because she might never again see so youthful a boy who could set with such decision and promptitude in a crisis. He returned her gaze. After several exchanges of these telling glances, the gallant one arose and said: "Madam, is there anything I could do for you?"

"Young man, young man," replied the Dowager, "what did you do with my bundle?"

The hero sat down rather weakly on the arm of a seat. He could not reply, he could not even gasp—he only dropped his jaw. When the Dowager had repeated her query, he replied: "It was that other woman's wasn't it?"

"What woman's?"

"Why, the one who wore a blue suit and sat here a few stations ago."

"Well, there warn't nobody here when I got here. And, moreover, it was a fascinator that my Pa gave me for Christmas, and unless you git it you'll have to pay me a dollar ninety-eight cents."

That the pride of durand was pained, distressed, and financially touched, was evident to all. He has retired eternally and forever from the chivalrous Knight Errant list. Shall we give him a pension?

AN EXCURSION
A NARRATIVE BY A GARNETOUS BOY

One Somers Day some Young students who Lovejoy went for a Walker out to a Wood that lay beyond a Hill. They Camped in front of the Fountain until the crowd had all come and when they started down the Block they Aul carried Grub(e) by the Peck.

Aul went well until the Brat of the crowd, whom they had taken along for a mascot began to Hint that John ought to Carey her Jungck. (She is the Bain of his life)! He looked rather Blank, and said in his Blunt way that she'd better Russel them along for herself since he wasn't wearing a Harness!

Arthur Held her up after this until she came out of her blue Funk.

After they had passed over a Mead, a Sawe:Yiarsh, the Shannon Brook, and passed a Cartmill, they decided to Camp. They voted Roach for the position of Kock, but some of the Sweet Young Pets objected because they said they never could stand it to have a Roach around the Grub(e). They all brought Stone for a fireplace, and Wood—Almost a Fulton. Eleonor was inquisitive though, and found out that fire Burns.

Suddenly just as the Rice began to Boyle, Mildred let out a Piercing screech and jumped up. You should have seen her Tare for the Busche! After a bit she came back and said, sheepishly, "I thought it was a Foxen it wasn't." Well, there was no one to Warner.

We all settled down then and you should have seen Earl Ede. Nobody could beat him at Eaton. Finally he said, "Oh, Lord, Iva Paine!" And no wonder, he was so full he couldn't even Kluck. Finally, after he couldn't eat another Dill, we packed up and went home. We all wished we could do it Daly.

Will U Clapp?

P. S. The editorial staff wishes to apologize for this Lowe form of humor.

THE CAMPUS BEAUTIFUL

Some of the more observing students feel that the building and grounds committees have overlooked one marked opportunity to enhance the beauty of the campus. There is no necessity for this from a financial standpoint, for it is a natural effect (or defect) which might easily be developed, with little cost. Why should our natural resources be overlooked in this manner?

We refer to the pool at the east end of the campus. It is never entirely dry there, and with the addition of a few goldfish and lotus it would indeed be a joy to every passerby and normalite. How little it would take to produce an idyllic spot at this place. Rustic seats could be added and the beauty of the place could soothe the troubled heart, bring peace to the anxious, and give inspiration to the dreamer.

And at night! The tall· pine in the corner could reflect its mystery on the glassy surface, and the sars wink at it playfully, delighting in a jolly way, the pool wink back.

Can we not petition for this improvement?

[149]
"Eggs are so expensive that fried eggs will soon be used for hat trimmings."
"Why not, I think the effect would be very chic."

"Why have you broken your engagement with that Normalite?"
Florence Krutza—"I couldn't stand for his slang. I tried to put him wise that father was sore on the phony talk, but he didn't get hep, so I pushed the skids under him."

Marjorie Blash in the Pal—"Are you the waiter that took my order for that Sundae?"
Stub—"Yes ma'am."
M. B.—"My, how you have grown."
"What do you think of Mary Jones?"
"She's very Chic."

Dorothy Brundage on the morning Green Bay Flier—"Can't you go faster than this, Conductor?"
"Yes, but I have to stay with my train."

Branch applying for a job.
"Do you dissipate or anything of that sort," asked the Supt.
Branch (stammering and turning red)—"I-I-I sometimes chew a little gum."

Junior—"I am studying my best to get ahead."
Senior—"Heaven knows you need one."

Nobody home but the violin and that's in the parlor with its bow.
In 1925. (They were climbing into their new Saxon Six.)
Marion—"You are not so gallant as when you were a boy Cy."
Cy—"And you are not so buoyant as when you were a girl."

If a Senior is foolish is a Sophomore?
If Vernon Beggs, can he Mary Walker?
If Dorothy is ever ill, will Ralph Cook?
Is a fellow who calls on a girl during a thunder storm a Rainbow?
If Mabel went out on a picnic and picked violets, would she give Dorothy Aul?
If Lucille Daly looked coquettish, could she Pierce Reilly?

Truman Thorson was asked why he hadn't attended the play by the dramatic club. He replied—"I'd gone if Brey(h)ad."

Edith Lowe—"Who gave the bride away?"
Ode Albright—"Her little brother. He yelled out during the ceremony, 'Hurry Ruth, you have landed Maurel at last.'"

Collins—"Can you prove this theorem?"
Art Held—"No, but I can render it highly probable."

It was the next morning after Wood and Rabenstein had demonstrated the efficiency of the state militia. A group of girls had gathered in the hall to talk it over.

"My!" said one, "Wasn't it fine. I do so like to see a man march in his Union suit."

Miss Allen—"See here, Mr. Milkman, I don't believe this milk you are giving me is pure."
Milkman—"My dear Madam—to the pure, all things are pure."

At the R. R. party, given a few weeks ago, the fortune teller card told Bernice Carpenter he was to become famous if he lived long enough.
"Famous for what?" he eagerly inquired.
"For longevity if you live long enough," was the response.
THE LOVE LAMENT OF A GENT
There ain't no nothing much no more,
And nothing ain't no use to me,
In vain I pace the lonely shore,
Since I have saw the last of thee.
I seen a ship upon the deep,
And signals this ere last lament,
I haven't did a thing, but weep,
Since thou hast went.

Alas! I ain't one of they,
That haven't got no faith, in love,
And them fond words of yesterday,
They was spoke true as heaven above,
Is it all off twist I and you?
Will you go wed some other gent,
I haven't did a thing, but weep,
Since thou hast went.

I done what I have did that day,
Without no thought of no offense,
Return, return, I fondly pray,
Before my feelings git intense,
I have gave up all earthly show,
I have gave up all thought of fame,
But OH what joy it would be to know,
That thou hast came.

Teacher—"Earl did you whisper today?"
Earl—"Yes, wunst."
Teacher—"Clarence, should Earl have said wunst?"
Clarence—"He should have said twist."

A BLUFFER
Now let me say it takes some art,
To bluff, bluff, bluff.
You have to be a little smart,
To bluff, bluff, bluff.
I only study just a mite,
And went a fussing every night,
But always made my classes right,
By bluff, bluff, bluff.

In methods class it was a snap,
To bluff, bluff, bluff.
For Spindler didn't give a rap,
For bluff, bluff, bluff.
He doesn't care a single bit,
When some instructors have a fit,
Why I was always flunked in "Lit,"
For bluff, bluff, bluff.

One day when I went into class,
To bluff, bluff, bluff.
Professor Hippensteel just called,
My bluff, bluff, bluff.
And when I couldn't sketch the plot,
Well, he raved on and talked a lot,
And almost canned me on the spot,
For bluff, bluff, bluff.

I did my best to make them all,
By bluff, bluff, bluff.
And never dreamed that I would fall,
By bluff, bluff, bluff.
And now I have to burn the oil,
And do a lot of tiresome toil,
And be particular as—Hoyle,
Not bluff, bluff, bluff.

NEW STAR ARRIVALS

Francis X. Bushman.

Movie fans among our students and alumni will be interested to know of the offer the Thanhouser Film Company has made to one of the former boy graduates of our Alma Mater. This alumnus has been at the University of Wisconsin since leaving here, and no doubt developed much of his historic ability there.

He is very modest about his talent, but the evening of Friday, April 31, he gave a private exhibition, for the enjoyment of a few of his intimate friends. The little room at the west end of the floor of the Normal School is reached by going up a few steps; it has a glass panel in the door, which makes a very good screen when the beams from the arc light outside shine upon it from the back.

The Alumnus and his co-star achieves some very vivid effects in silhouette by this means. The exhibition was genuine in character, and dominated by an element of realism that was very thrilling to the audience.

SIGNING THE DECLARATION ON INDEPENDENCE

Let historians rant till their hearts are content, about the heroism of John Hancock and Thomas Jefferson in signing the Declaration of Independence. If you will, for the time being, put aside this erroneous predilection and allow me to elucidate upon the proposition, I will penetrate your cartilaginous and bony cranium and convince you that I have formulated an argument which is down in the front row and crowding the orchestra for room—which has Mace and Hart backed completely off the map.

It was about midnight when 367,467 Genus Culex and allied genera (alias mosquito) decided to leave their rich habitude, and escorted by many Tabanidae (known to the common rabble as horse flies) they went in search of “BLOOD.”

They arrived at the scene. The meeting was to determine a nation’s destiny. They spied the graceful ankle of John. They gazed with longing glances at the athletic leg of Thomas. With a swoop, these dipterous, blood-thirsty animals attacked their foes. With a cry of pain the gentlemen seized their pens. In a frenzy they signed their names. They raced to the street just in time to catch the last Jitney Bus for home, only to awaken the next morning as Saviours of their Country.

—Spindler’s Contemporaries, Vol. 192.
Lorraine—"I saw a dog commit suicide the other day."
M. D. D. Bish—"Why, how did he do it?"
Lorraine—"He took his tail in his mouth and said: 'This is the last of me.'"

2 A—BROWNIE—Love

She gave him a cabinet photo,
He gazed for a moment or two,
Then pleaded, "Sweetheart, won't you give me
The lovely original too?"

"If you're positive, dear, that you love me,"
She said through a film of tears,
"A negative I cannot give you,
I am yours to the end of our years."

So courtship was quickly developed;
Their marriage was fixed up in town,
And now in a middle class suburb,
She is steadily toning him down.
THE SWINDLED SWAIN

A HEART THRILLING DRAMA WITH A SOB (Glub, Glub)

PART I

Scene I—Interior of Burly's Smoke Shop at 3:30 p.m.
Enter hero (a slight dark man with an interesting face).
Approaches telephone (business of calling up his true love). Nods and smiles as if getting a date.
Hero buys some cigarettes and departs.

Scene II—7:30 of the same day.
Hero seen entering the house where he rooms.
Goes to bedroom. Decides to take a bath.

PART II

Scene I—Interior of house where hero rooms.
Parlor—several young high school girls in this room. Decide to dress up in male attire, and have a stag party. Young daughter of the house says she knows the hero will not care if they borrow his clothes.
So up they go.

Scene II—Hero is seen entering bathroom. All dolled up in a bathrobe. (Of course he shuts the door.)
Young high school girls emerge from his room dressed in his school suit, his Sunday suit, his dress suit, his extra jeans, his Mackinaw, rain coat and Balmacan. They go down stairs.
Hero enters bedroom, all sweet and clean (the hero, not the room) and still dressed in bathrobe, sits on bed and smokes a cigarette and anticipates the evening's joys.

PART III

Scene I—Interior of hero's bedroom.
Hero looks at his ancestral heirloom (alias Ingersoll) and decides to dress up like a circus mule. Oceans of perplexity, anxiety, distress and anger when he discovers that all his wearing apparel had been swiped.
Facial expressions show that he is thinking of his girl. He paces the floor, and crushes his roll of B. V. D's. in his long slender fingers.
Finally, baffled, he goes to bed.

Scene II—Interior of beloved's parlor.
Heroine of the story seen anxiously looking out the window. Returns to piano and plays "You may be the world to a world of friends, but you're more than the world to me."
Repeat Chorus.
Finally, when the clock shows 8:35 she goes up stairs, enters bedroom,
slams door, and throws herself across the bed, sobbing.
(Here let us suggest that the pianist play "Loves Old Sweet Song.") Momentary glimpse of hero shown here. He is sleeping just as if he never had an operation of adenoides.

FAREWELL

We, the Staff, sincerely thank all who so generously aided us in building the 1915 Iris and trust that you will feel that your efforts were not misdirected. Our endeavors, though perhaps not the most successful, have, nevertheless, been sincere.

Now that the work is nearly ended we glance back and, disregarding the numerous displeasures that we were forced to meet, view the undertaking as one of the greatest experiences that student life offers.

Once more we admit our mistakes but seek comfort in that well-known fact that few indeed are blessed with immunity from error. If we have injured anyone, we assure you that it was not intentional and beg the opportunity of a personal apology.

In closing, the Staff wishes unlimited success for the 1916 Iris and for dear Old S. P. N.

PATRONIZE "IRIS" ADVERTISERS

These business men have seen fit to test your school loyalty by taking expensive advertising space in your publication. If you have any school loyalty, whatsoever, you will prove to these men that their money was not spent in a profitless advertising channel. That is, prove to them that the Iris is an advertising medium which reaches YOU students and YOU faculty members, and which brings results to those who advertise in its pages. This much is necessary of you, in order to gain the confidence and further patronage of those men who do so much toward making the Iris a financial success. They make it possible for you to buy a copy of the book at a price which is less than one-third of what it actually costs. Look back through the old Iris and Pointers and see for yourself what these firms have done toward making your publications a success, and then be fair enough to give your patronage to those who patronize you. Don't expect something for nothing. Remember that the business men cannot afford to continue to take advertising space unless they find that it is profitable for them to do so. Therefore, I earnestly beg that you, when purchasing, will favor those men who have seen fit to favor us.

HOW WE WASH YOUR LINEN

At our modern laundry your clothes are washed by being placed inside a large perforated cylinder which revolves inside a water-tight case. The case holds the water—the cylinder carries the garments through it.

With every revolution the clothes are carried through the water and dropped again into it. This and the constant motion work the water and soapsuds through the clothes, and so loosen up and carry away the dirt without the wear of the rubbing process.

In our washing process we change the water upon your clothes eight times. These waters range in temperature from cold to boiling hot. We use pure soap, plenty of it, and the best bluing money can buy.

Naturally we make your clothes whiter, cleaner and sweeter—and guarantee their perfect sanitary condition.

PRINTING is an art, not an ordinary commercial business. At least, that is the way we look upon it. Some printers think that it is a “slam bang” proposition for making money, and their product is typical of their idea.

Every person in our plant organization takes a personal pride in doing work that reflects credit upon himself and upon his plant. It is quality first, then cost, then output. That is why we are serving the same customers year after year.
